Mr. Keene's high standing in the Bengal Civil Service, his varied scholarship, and his familiarity with the local history of Hindustan Proper, as displayed in his guide-books to Agra and Delhi, are ample guarantees for the accuracy of his narrative and the general truthfulness of his portraiture, while the easy graces of his clear, sober, yet telling style, attest to a careful eye the skill of an artist who knows how to hide his art. With a modesty which some will deem excessive, he has deliberately refrained from measuring himself against "writers with whom competition was out of the question," in those parts of his book where the temptation to do so must have been specially great. He will not tell over again, for instance, the stirring events of Clive's and Hastings's career. His chief aim is to present a faithful picture, so far as his materials will let him, of the forty years or so which intervened between the battle of Panipat and the campaigns of Lake and Wellesley; and the scene of his narrative is carefully bounded by the Satlaj, the Himalayas, and the Narbada. Within the limits thus self-imposed, we think that Mr. Keene has discharged a difficult, if not forbidding task, with a large measure of success. As the history of an anarchy, it necessarily lacks the order and coherent unity of more settled times; but it fills worthily a real gap in our historical knowledge, and to the student it offers a trustworthy guide through a very tangled maze of incidents and intrigues. One good purpose in particular the book is sure to subserve. The candid reader will, we trust, realise the author's hope that "the morbid pleas of guilty, recorded by modern philanthropists, in answer to the charge of rapacity brought against the conquerors of British India," will be found "as deficient in sound historical basis as they are unmanly and un-English in spirit and tone." A map, an index, and some introductory chapters on the previous history of the Moghuls in India, add not a little to the sterling value of the work.

THE telegraph announces the sudden death, on October 15, at Lucknow, of Colonel Arthur Davies Dickens, C.B., First Class Assistant Commissary General in Bengal. The deceased officer entered the Bengal Infantry in 1842, became a captain in 1857, a brevet-major in the following year, brevet lieutenant-colonel in 1866, and colonel in 1873. He served with distinction throughout the Indian Mutiny campaigns, at the siege of Delhi, at the relief of Lucknow by Sir Colin Camp bell, in the defeat of the Gwalior Contingent at Cawnpore, at the subsequent battle of Kali Nadi, and the final capture of Lucknow by Lord Clyde. In 1868 he accompanied the field-force staff on the Hazara campaign, his services in which were rewarded by the thanks of the Indian Government and a Companionship of the Bath. In October of the same year he obtained the post which his death has rendered vacant.

INDIA'S MORAL AND MATERIAL PROGRESS IN 1874-75-I.

THE Indian Blue-book for the year 1874-75 opens with a reference to the successful working of that new scheme of parallel promotion in the judicial and executive branches of the Bengal Civil Service which Sir R. Temple has carried out on the lines traced by his predecessor. Its success was furthered by the readiness of the civil officers to volunteer for either branch. It has already, in Sir Richard's opinion, increased the efficiency of the Magistrate-Collectors, and in time it may be expected to show a like improvement among the District Sir Richard also bears witness to the good results of strengthening the hands of the district-officer in all administrative respects. In the Native Civil Service a marked improvement is also recorded since the addition made to its strength in 1872. A scheme for separating the judicial and executive services in the Punjab was sanctioned by the India Office during the same year, with a view to the larger employment of Native Judges and the relief of hard-worked district-officers. Some steps were also taken by Sir J. Strachey to open out new careers to native ambition in the police of the North-Western Provinces and in the Jhansi Commission. Another administrative reform in the same year was the placing of East and West Berar under one Commissioner, aided by a Judicial Commissioner for the whole Province.

Among the attempts made to restrict the injurious working of town duties on the transit trade, we note the measures adopted by some municipalities in the Punjab and the North-West Provinces for lowering the rate of octroi-duties "in the same proportion to the full rate as the local consumption bears to the import." It is believed that in this way the incidence of the tax will adjust itself by "a natural commercial process," wherever the local retail trade and the wholesale export trade are in the same hands. Another plan, borrowed by the Punjab from the Central Provinces, for collecting town dues by direct management, instead of farming them, has been tried with much success. In Madras it has been found expedient to divide the proceeds of the municipal tolls in varying proportions between the Municipal Committees and the Local Fund boards, because the through traffic is indebted to the latter for the maintenance of the roads.

In Bengal the municipal system has been extended to all the principal townships, and few complaints are heard about the pressure of taxation. The native members show a fair amount of public spirit, and the system is raising the character of the upper and middle classes. The principle of election, which has since been conceded to Calcutta, had already begun to work well in Madras. During the same year the municipal system was largely extended in Bombay and the Punjab, and was worked for the first time in British Burmah. In Bombay alone, where the rateable value of property had been falling for some years past, did the proceeds of municipal taxation show a decline from the previous year.

Of the twenty-two Acts passed by the Supreme Legislature, two dealt with the equalising of the salt duties in Bengal and Madras, a third introduced certain amendments in the Criminal Procedure Code, and a fourth applied to the criminal procedure of the High Courts the rules already working in other courts. Two other Acts transferred to the Chief Commissioner of Assam and Silhet the powers formerly exercised by the Bengal Government. The Merchant Shipping Act of 1875 added a mercantile member to the courts of inquiry into the loss of ships at Other Acts dealt with European vagrants, port dues, and the fisheries of British Burmah. In the Bengal Council an Act was passed for the better regulation of markets in Calcutta, and an Act of the Bombay Council improved the regulation of jails and the character of jail discipline.

Coming to the head of "Justice and Police," we observe a "decided increase" of crime in Bengal, especially of serious crimes against person and property. For this and the continued prevalence of dacoity or gang-robbery the badness of the village police and the stiffness of our judicial system are held mainly answerable. In some parts of Madras, Bombay, and the North-Western Provinces dacoities were more or less rife; the number of such crimes in the last-named province having risen from 99 to 120, while a large force of Bombay police failed to hunt down the robber-bands of Punah and Tanna, in spite of the large rewards offered for the capture of their leaders. In the Punjab on the other hand crime of all sorts was steadily decreasing. The same thing may be said of Oudh, the Central Provinces, Berar, and British Burmah, except that in the last-named instance crimes of violence had been replaced by an increasing number of petty thefts. Female infanticide was dying out in Kátiawár; but in Kachh the Jadeja males still exceeded the females by two to one, and in the North-West Provinces the proportion of female to male infants had risen only to 30 per cent. The experiment of trying petty criminals summarily before a bench of paid and honorary magistrates in Bengal seems to have worked well, and to be gradually winning the confidence of natives of the better class. In Madras, the North-Western, and Central Provinces similar results are reported from the same reform. Of the Bengal police there was little good to say; but the conduct of the Bombay police "continues to improve," and the reports from the Punjab, Berar, and the Central Provinces were on the whole satisfactory. The police of British Burmah "have impulsive energy, but are deficient in perseverance and patience." A tenth of their number were discharged for misconduct during the year, and nearly a sixth resigned. The death-rate in the Bengal jails averaged 5.59 per cent., rising in some instances to 17.68 and even 27.02 per cent. In the N.W. Provinces the Gorakhpur and the Meerut Central Jails were conspicuous for death-rates of 20:14 and 12.83 per cent. respectively. The former rate was partly owing to an epidemic of cholera, and in some other cases the excessive mortality was ascribed to the scarcity of that year-Bad drainage and an unhealthy climate however played their part in swelling the returns from the districts above-named. The lowest death-rates, 1.64, 2.68, and 2.98 per cent. may be claimed respectively for Oudh, Madras, and British Burmah, with the Central Provinces making a good fourth. The crowding in the Bombay jails may be inferred from the daily average of 8,068 convicts in prisons built to hold only 6,845. The proportion of "illiterates" was highest in the Punjab, where 19,000 out of 19,518 prisoners could neither read nor write, and only 156 could read and write well. Nearly half of that number however made some progress, much or little, in these arts during their imprisonment. In Burmah, on the contrary, out of 8,396 prisoners 1,216 could read and write well, and 2,785 a little. Even the Burmese women showed better in this respect than others elsewhere, for 31 out of 355 had received some instruction.

Digitized by GOGIC

The number of civil suits in Bengal in 1874-75 was about the same as in the year before. The people, it seems, are satisfied with the working of the Civil Courts, grumbling only at the delays in settling cases. Of the uprightness of the Native judges there was but one opinion, but their competency was sometimes called in question. Of late years however a better instructed class of men have been appointed judges, and the Native bar is also rising in general repute. The people in Bengal are learning to avail themselves of the system of registering deeds which Sir R. Temple has done his best to encourage. In Madras also registration was steadily increasing. The civil courts were unusually busy in Ajmir and the Punjab, but in most of the other provinces litigation fell below the mark; in the North-West because some of the civil business has been transferred to the revenue courts, and because a good harvest saved many creditors from an appeal to law. On the other hand, good harvests are credited with the great increase of civil suits in Ajmir. The latter solution certainly accords better with general experience. The increase of civil suits in Northern Arakan is held to indicate the readiness of the hill tribes to substitute civil process for appeals to force.

THE SALT-TAX.-II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—If you could induce any of your correspondents to write on the subject of the incidence of existing salt-taxes in France, Italy, and the Netherlands, the paper would be a very interesting one.

With reference to England, there are few now living who can remember the mischievous effects caused by the exorbitant salt-tax levied previous to the year 1823. This vile tax had caused a vast system of smuggling, owing partly to its being nearly forty times the cost of the article, and partly to the regulations allowing salt to be freed from duty if ostensibly used for salting fish. The opinion of the public and of the House of Commons was strongly pronounced against the tax, which was levied at the rate of 15s. a bushel, or nearly 34d. a pound, if we calculate the bushel at 56lbs.

Since the trade in salt was freed the exports to India, America, France, Holland, and Russia have been enormous.

Some Indian financiers may argue that if the English were sixty years ago taxed at the rate of 3½d. a pound, why should I object to 1d. a pound in India? The answer is—1st. That the wages of unskilled labour in some parts of India are only 1½d. a day, whereas wages in England have seldom fallen below 1s. a day, or eight times the Indian rate. 2ndly. That the climate of England does not require the consumption of so much salt as that of India does; and 3rdly. That hundreds of thousands of bullocks are deprived of salt in India as long as we extort a tax which raises the price of 1 lb. of pure salt (2d.) above the daily wages of a labourer.

Let Parliament call for a statement showing how many thousand persons are annually apprehended and sent to jail on charges of breaking the salt laws; let the return show how many of these are young women and how many are children, and how they are confined and treated previous to their being taken before a magistrate.

The severity of the salt laws has no inconsiderable share in causing the disaffection to the British rule which exists among the poorer classes.

In Russia the salt tax in some provinces presses very heavily, and causes terrible murrain among the cattle, as it does in India; but I cannot find that even in Simbirsk the tax exceeds 4 per cent. on the peasant's income (page 58 of the Blue-book of 1869-70, part 2). In the province of Samara the peasant can obtain 4 lbs. of salt for the same money which the peasant in Bengal has to give for 1 lb.

Whilst we screw a cruel tax out of the poor we are blind to coming dangers.

But for reasons which I have dwelt on elsewhere, the Indian Government is traditionally loath to recognise the political dangers which environ it, and which from time to time have imperilled its rule. The enormous stake which England has in India, and the millions sterling which British capitalists have annually invested in railways, canals, and other representative works since the country passed under the Crown, would now render even a temporary displacement of our authority an appalling calamity.—Page 103 of Hunter's "Our Indian Mussulmans."

-Your obedient servant, October 13. T.

Hotices of Books.

The Great Game; a Plea for a British Imperial Policy. By W. M. Thorburn, B.A., Madras Civil Service. Third Edition, carefully Revised. W. H. Allen and Co. 1876.

In this new edition of Mr. Thorburn's vigorously argued plea for a bold policy of Imperial Federation, based on principles of supposed expediency and self-interest, the author has made up for the omission of his opening chapter by large additions to "the substantive and argumentative contents of the work." new preface contains a scornful exposure of some critical blunders on the part of a Saturday Reviewer, who certainly laid himself open to the punishment he receives, and a vigorous defence of the author's own programme from the charge of extra-Whatever grounds there may be for such a charge, it cannot be denied that Mr. Thorburn writes with a hearty manliness and racy strength which keep the reader's interest alive throughout, and clothe his wildest seeming utterances with a practical air. If the writer's aims may sometimes seem Utopian, and his arguments rash or ill-founded, there is no mistaking the general clearness and consistency with which he puts them forth, and the dashing earnestness with which he enforces them. Not a few Anglo-Indians will enjoy the chapter which deals with the past and future of Indian Policy, laying bare the shams which so often delude their countrymen at home, and vindicating Dalhousie from the disrepute which has so unfairly clung to his name and memory. The author's scheme for creating a great Federal Parliament, in which India and the Colonies shall all be fairly represented, is worked out with a detailed minuteness and logical coherence worthy of Bentham or the Abbé Sieyes. His arguments for further annexations in self-defence will at least amuse those who are not easily shocked at his bold defiance of modern sentiment; and his proposals for reconstructing the map of the world embody at any rate such a plan for settling the Turkish Question, as will commend itself to those who believe with Mr. Gladstone in the advantages of a Russian alliance against the "Sick Man' of Constantinople.

German Home Life; Reprinted from Fraser's Magazine.

Longmans and Co. 1876.

It is not our rule to notice works like the above-named, which have no manifest connection with India or the East; but as the book has been sent us to review, and as it deserves a good word for its own sake, we may be excused for adding our meed of praise to that which it has already received elsewhere. The author is an English lady, who in this pleasant and instructive volume has set before us the fruits of a long and near acquaintance with the life and ways of our Teutonic cousins, in a style which lends a new charm to the instruction conveyed. Whether she writes about language, manners and customs, men, women, servants, dress, or religion, she appears to be an easy and graceful mistress of her subject. It has been objected to her that some of her pictures of German home life are overdrawn or too darkly coloured, that she has reasoned too widely from insufficient premisses, and that something of our insular prejudice blinds her to the better side of German character and customs. There is some truth in these criticisms, but after all such allowances, the book will be found worthy of a high place in the esteem of every discerning reader.

SILVER.—The value of silver imported to this country during the first seven months of the current year was £3,781,620, and of that exported £1,193,999, leaving a balance in favour of India of £2,587,621. The value of gold imported during the same period was £796,303, and of that exported £683,353, leaving a balance of £112,950. The net balance, therefore, of imports over exports is £2,700,571.

THE MINT AND THE DEPRECIATED RUPEE.

The Madras Times does not wonder that the Madras Chamber of Commerce find themselves unable to endorse the opinions of the Calcutta Chamber as to the measures that should be taken in view of the present depreciated value of the rupee. The Calcutta of the present depreciated value of the rupee. Chamber had advocated that the obligation of the Indian Mints to convert bar silver into coined rupees, and that of the Currency Department to issue notes against bullion, should be suspended, and that the importation of silver or coined rupees should be for-We can hardly understand how a body of intelligent mercantile men could ever join to recommend such a proposal, for it shows a misapprehension of the real character of the present difficulty that is truly incomprehensible. It is, we understand, the cheapness of silver that is the cause of the depreciated value of the rupee, and yet the Calcutta Chamber deliberately proposes an elaborate set of expedients whereby the price of silver may be yet further depreciated. It proposes that its importation into India, the chief silver market of the world, may be forbidden, with the very probable effect of reducing the market value in the London market to half-a-crown an ounce. But by stopping the coinage of rupees and the importation of silver, the Calcutta Chamber hope to enhance the value of rupees. So they will, within the limits of India. And unless smuggled coins came to their rescue, they might make rupees so scarce as to render it impossible to carry on trade in India at all. But the value of the rupee out of India—the value of the rupee for exchange purposeswhich we take to be the question at issue, would be greatly depre-These pieces of coined silver would have to compete with other pieces of silver, coined or uncoined, and with the Indian market closed to silver, the value of that metal would be enormously depreciated. It seems mighty "cheeky" of the Madras Chamber of Commerce to undertake the instruction of its big brother of Calcutta in such elementary truths of political economy as that "the price of a thing is what it will bring;" but, really looking at the resolutions passed by that Chamber, the lessons do not seem to be ninecessary. To take measures to give the muses a greater relative unnecessary. To take measures to give the rupee a greater relative value in India as compared with its present value out of India would simply be to aggravate the evil from which we are suffering.

IMPORTATION OF INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

The Times of India points out that the increased celerity with which in these days of steam far distant lands may be visited has correspondingly enhanced the facilities for scattering abroad the particular disease forms peculiar to each country. Cholera has been carried from Egypt and Syria to the northern ports of the Mediterranean, and has even found its way across the broad Atlantic from Hamburg and Liverpool to the ports on the North American sea-board. Yellow fever has been conveyed from the West Indies to Lisbon and Gibraltar, and even to Plymouth and Southampton. Luckily for its development, that formidable disease requires a minimum temperature of 72° Fahr., and it cannot brook to tarry long beyond the 48th parallel of north latitude. Up to the present time Australia has escaped any visitation of cholera, but it is generally believed by those best competent to form an opinion on the subject that when communication with that island continent becomes more extensive and rapid than it is at present we shall witness the introduction of cholera. If India has sent cholera to England, advancing by slow and measured steps, the former has received in exchange, at a bound, two several diseases, though it must be admitted that the bargain is an extremely one-sided affair. Since the present system of overland troopships was instituted, scarlet fever and measles have both found their way to this country. Fortunately neither of them seems to have taken very kindly to the soil or climate. To what extent, if any, they have affected the native population generally, we possess no record, but last year there were fourteen hundred and eighty-six deaths in Bombay alone from measles. Those maladies have certainly not done much mischief among the European soldiers, probably because most of the latter have already suffered from them in early life. We have the testimony of Sir Ranald Martin, of Dr. Jackson, and of Dr. Hewlett, to the effect that they never saw scarlet fever or measles in India, and never even heard of them as being present in the country till very recent years. On this subject Sir Thomas Watson remarks:—"Considering the previous freedom from scarlatina of that large portion of the habitable earth, the date of what may prove to have been its earliest infection is worth noting; and the truth which it helps to enforce is worth repeating, namely, that, like small-pox, measles, &c., scarlatina does not arise now-a-days except from contagion." It should perhaps be explained that the distinctions popularly made between scarlet fever and scarlatina have no existence among medical authorities; both these terms refer to one identical malady. We may add that whether scarlet fever and measles ever existed before in India or not, their origin has been traced to Arabia. It was at one time believed that enteric fever—the so-called typhoid fever—was also an importation from England, but that idea has very justly, we consider, been now wholly abandoned. There is every reason to believe that it is largely prevalent among the native population, though certain of the pathognomonic signs are not so clearly perceptible in the dark-skinned native as they are in the fair-skinned European. Of late years enteric fever has figured more extensively in the statistical returns because, as we have already pointed out, medical officers now exercise much greater care in classifying fevers than they formerly did.

THE ENGLISH PRESS ON THE FULLER CASE.

The Madras Times remarks that people who write of a state of society which they have had no opportunity of knowing are sure to be unjust respecting it, and those who have obtained a superficial peep at that society are sure to be still more unjust. A belief that they know all about it leads them to talk ex cathedra on matters about which they know just nothing. What, for instance, are the Prince of Wales and his companions likely to know of the real relations between Europeans and Natives in India, when the whole of their experience was obtained in a perfectly fictitious India? They no more saw the India of every-day life than they saw Paradise, or the other place. The English Press has not disappointed our expectations. Fully the usual amount of impertinence and ignorance is displayed, and it is clearly enough made out that a man ceases to be an English gentleman and becomes an English brute, by the mere act of crossing the Indian Ocean. Even the Daily News, whose judicial tone was once the glory of the London Dress, goes in for the popular abuse of Anglo-Indians, and the Pall Mall, that was once "written by gentlemen for gentlemen," deals in cheap clap-trap on the subject. But for full-flavoured ruffianism an article in the World beats anything that it ever entered into the mind of man to conceive. This article is so superlatively truculent as to be almost funny; and in every particular it is wrong. It says that Mr. Fuller was an English barrister, and that as soon as his svee received the blow he fell down dead. Now. Mr. Fuller as his syce received the blow he fell down dead. Now, Mr. Fuller was not an English barrister, and so far from the syce falling down dead at once, he was able to leap the wall of a neigh-bouring compound, whence he loudly abused his master. Thus, Mr. Fuller, instead of driving to church, conscious that he had killed a man, drove to church conscious that he had struck a man a slap that would hardly have injured a fly, and that he left the man cursing like a trooper. It has never been sufficiently dwelt upon, probably because it is not mentioned in the Viceroy's minute, that the syce did not die immediately after being slapped by his master, and that he was quite as likely to receive mortal injury, in his condition of health, in a fall while leaping the compound wall as in the fall for which Mr. Fuller was responsible. The connection between Mr. Fuller's assault and the death of the syce is not fully established; and no one has ever contended that the injuries inflicted by the master were such as could reasonably be expected to lead to any serious consequences. To say, as the World does, that the maltreatment of servants is a common practice of does, that the matteration of services a common practice of Englishmen in India, is simply to slander; and to say, as the World does, that the members of the Civil Service are the greatest sinners, is to show laughable ignorance. It is notorious that members of the Civil Service conduct themselves under a sense of responsibility superior to that felt by most other persons in India, and that, as a rule, they carefully avoid the scandal of putting themselves in the position of being convicted of offences that they have occasionally to punish in others. But the writer in the World shows his supreme ignorance when he compares Indian "Civil Service clerks" with War-office clerks in London. To compare men who govern, single-handed, provinces bigger than many large kingdoms, and who exercise powers of life and death within them without the assistance of a jury, with the copier of returns in Pall Mall is to compare salmon with minnows.

Crop Prospects.—The Department of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending Sept. 14, 1876, that in Madras slight rain is reported from all districts except Kurnool; prospects are unchanged. In Mysore the fall during the week has been trifling, and the continued failure of the rain has proved disastrous to growing crops. In Sind there has been heavy rain in Kurrachee, and the river is high and prospects good. In Bombay prospects are fair in Guzerat and the Concan, but in Khandeish, Nassick, the Deccan districts (except Sattara), and the Southern Mahratta Country very little rain has fallen, and the condition of the crops is precarious. In the Central Provinces there has been general and in some districts excessive rain; prospects are good. No rain has fallen in Berar, but reports are favourable. Prospects are good in Central India. In the southern and central parts of Rajputana very heavy rain has fallen, and some also in the northern tracts; reports are good. In Bengal there has been rain in all districts, and prospects are generally favourable. More rain is wanted for the rice in Upper Assam. In the North-Western Provinces the fall has been scanty, and more is generally wanted. In Oudh also the rain has been light, but prospects have improved. In the Punjab want of rain is reported from Delhi, Hissar, and Rawal Pindee; elsewhere everything promises well. There has been abundant rain in British Burmah, and prospects are favourable.

INDIAN SNAKES.

The poisonous species of snakes are divided by naturalists into two classes—the colubriform and the viperiform. Of the former, if we exclude sea-snakes, which are very numerous and all poisonous, there have been identified in India eleven species. these, however, seem to be confined to particular parts of the country; and one species at least has been found only in the Himalayas. The best known and the most formidable snakes of this class are the cobra (Naja tripudians) and the krait (Bungarus caruleus). The cobra is too well known to be described; only, it may be remarked that the best authorities are agreed that there is only one species of cobra, and that the varieties of colour from yellow through all shades of brown to black are incidental and irregular; as are also the differences in the form and size of the "spectacles." This means that the same batch of eggs may produce cobras of any colour and with any shape of spectacles or no spectacles at all. The krait is not a fierce snake like the cobra, but is scarcely inferior to it in the deadly effects of its bite. It grows to a length of four feet, but half-grown specimens are most commonly found; it is of slender make for its length. Different individuals of this snake are so differently coloured that an inexperienced person would not take them to be the same kind; but the most usual and typical colour is a very dark ground with distinct white cross bands. The fangs, although so fatally charged with poison, are small, and in young kraits are not easily distinguished; but it helps the identification of this snake to inspect its tongue, which is not red, but white. In calling the cobra and the krait the most formidable of the poisonous colubriform snakes, we must not forget the hamadryad (Ophiophagus elaps), the giant venomous snake of the world. This terrible creature attains a length of fourteen feet, is hooded like the cobra, and chases intruders with such speed and pertinacity that escape from it is difficult. Fortunately, it is nowhere common, but it is best-known in Burma and the jungles of Eastern Bengal. Our readers may remember that about two years ago a pair of these reptiles was for the first time imported into England and placed in the Zoological Gardens, where they excited immense interest. They were figured in one of the illustrated journals, and several of the leading papers had notices of the extraordinary monsters that united the venom of the cobra with the dimensions of the boa constrictor. The Burmese cobra with the dimensions of the boa constrictor. snake-charmers train these snakes like cobras, but they are afraid of their great strength, and a man will not handle a newly-caught one, nor extract its fangs, without assistance.

Viperiform snakes bring forth their young alive; that is to say, the eggs are hatched within the body of the female, and any etymological dictionary will tell us that the word viper, which is Latin, is a contraction for vivi-para. Technically these snakes are said to be ovoviviparous. They have very well-defined characteristics; they are stoutly built, with short tails, and their habits are sluggish; they hiss, or make some noise, more than other snakes do; the upper jaw-bones are short, and differently formed from those of all other snakes, being little more than joints for the fangs; the fangs, again, are very long, and curved, and movable, that is, they lie back when the mouth is closed, and are raised only when the snake is going to strike; another peculiarity is that the head is covered with small scales, like the body, instead of being protected, as in other snakes, with a few broad shields. Viperiform snakes are divided into true vipers and pit-vipers. The latter are so named from a deep hollow on each side of the head, in front of the eyes. There are twelve kinds in India, at least half of which are only locally distributed. Several of the tree snakes belong to this family, but not the dreaded "Smite eye" of griffins, which is a long thin snake as harmless as a lizard. The poison of the pit-vipers of India is not of a very virulent quality, and there is, we believe, no authenticated instance of a man's death being certainly traced to the bite of one of them. Far more deadly varieties are found in the Eastern Archipelago and the Indo-Chinese Peninsula; and the formidable rattlesnake is the New World type of this family.—Bombay Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

AFGHAN AFFAIRS.—Sirdar Sikandarkhan, ex-Governor of Herat, has attacked Maimanah, but has been repulsed. The Amir of Bokhara advised the Amir of Cabul to seize Kirsha on the Oxus. The Governor of Turkistan has been deputed to perform the operation.

Volunteer Corps at the Imperial Assemblage.—The Simla correspondent of a contemporary says orders are out that a certain number (sixty men) of each Volunteer Corps in Bengal should be selected and sent to the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi. The passage to and fro will be defrayed by Government, tents will be provided for them at Delhi, and rations supplied during their stay there. They will also receive the pay of the rank and file of the Regular army, in addition to their own official allowances. The whole of the volunteer force will be commanded by Colonel Walton, of the Calcutta Volunteers.—Englishman. Sept. 25.

THE IMPERIAL ASSEMBLAGE AT DELHI.—The Agra paper says that with reference to the medical arrangements for the Imperial assemblage, it is stated that, in addition to the regimental hospitals, there will be a General Hospital for camp-followers of Native Chiefs, &c., of which Dr. Eddomes, Medical Officer of the 2nd Goorkhas, is likely to be the Superintendent.

CHOLERA AT SIALKOT.—The death of Lieutenant Holland, of the 72nd Highlanders, from cholera, at Sialkot, on the 10th Sept., is reported by the Delhi Gazette. Cholera is very bad at Sialkot, seven seizures and three deaths having occurred up to the 11th instant among the 72nd Highlanders. The E Company of that Corps has been moved into Camp.

A RIVAL TO RANIKHET.—The Raja of Mandi, who arrived at Simla lately under a salute of eleven guns, possesses, the Simla paper tells us, in his territories a site for a hill station far superior to the much praised Ranikhet. A high grass plain with a lake, trees and abundant running water, the height of Simla above the sea, and more accessible from the plains.

DEATH OF DEWAN KIRPA RAM.—Dewan Kirpa Ram, of Jummoo, died on the 22nd Sept., of bilious remittent fever. Dr. Cunningham, of the 15th Sikhs, was sent for on the 18th, and went up to Jummoo to treat him, but such was the obstinacy of the Dewan and his family with regard to both food and medicine, that Dr. Cunningham's advice was not followed, and he left him on the afternoon of the 19th in a dying state, to all appearances.—Times of India, Oct. 2.

SIR WILLIAM MUIR.—We understand that no successor to Sir William Muir will be announced until Sir William has vacated office. Having already endeavoured to do justice to the peculiar qualifications of the Lieutenant-Governor of these Provinces to assist the Viceroy at a time of grave financial difficulty, we are the more glad to express a confident belief that Sir John Strachey, should he be able to return to India, will return as Financial Member of Government.—Pioneer, Sept. 30

The Best Shot.—Sepoy Nihal Sing, of the 40th Native Infantry, Shahjahanpur Regiment, is, says a contemporary, "the best shot in the three Presidencies for the year 1875-76. His score of 180 points (representing an average of centres down the range) is a splendid achievement, and well deserves the prize of the silver medal, and Rs. 100. The 40th Native Infantry have always been a pre-eminently good shooting regiment, and we congratulate the corps on the fresh and well-merited distinction it has now acquired."

SIMLA FINE ARTS EXHIBITION.—The Fine Arts Exhibition was opened on Sept. 20 by the Viceroy. There was a large attendance. Lord Lytton and the Hon. Mr. Hobhouse addressed the assembly at considerable length. The Viceroy's prize was awarded to Colonel Baigree, the Vice-President's prize to Colonel Colley, the Commander-in-Chief's prize to Major Tanner, the Lady Amateur's prize to Mrs. Whymper, the Society's first prize to Mrs. Gillespie. The collection is very good, but not equal to former Exhibitions.—

CHOLERA RESEARCHES.—Dr. Bellew, C. S. I., the Punjab Sanitary Commissioner, has returned to Marri from a tour round the villages to the East in the pursuit of cholera facts, and proposes continuing this search in the villages towards Abbottabad. Such an inquiry into undeniable facts regarding the outbreak of cholera at Marri, Rawal Pindi, Shahpur and other places can alone give the material for the deduction of principles of contention with this mysterious disease. Cholera, we understand from the Lahor paper, has completely died out at Marri, and in the villages around.

A New Bolio for the Prince of Wales.—We are informed that a bolio, similar to No. 4, belonging to the Viceroy, has been built at the Government Dockvard for the use of the Prince of Wales, at a cost of Rs. 2,500. The Prince will, it is said, bear the cost of its construction. Orders directing the building of the bolio were received through the Hon. Captain Glyn, of H.M.S. Serapis, in January last, while the Prince of Wales was in India. It was shipped per B.I.S.N. Company's steamer Dorunda, on the 9th of the present mouth, to the consignment of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and its freight to England is Rs. 500.—Indian Daily News, Sept. 25.

News from Turkistan.—From the Cabul news published by the Punjab Courier we take the following item:—"The Turkmans are hard pressed by the Russians, and it is expected they will bodily emigrate to Baighas, a dependency of Herat, which is a large plain with good water, and grazing ground. From here it is expected the Turkmans will carry on raids in Russian territory, and the Amir fears the Russians will either claim from his Highness a guarantee for their good behaviour, or will claim to punish them as best they can. This will certainly bring Afghanistan into contact with Russia. It is impossible to give guarantees for the good conduct, &c., of such a vast multitude, particularly owing to their inveterate bad habits. But if such a contingency does arise, it is proposed to distribute the Turkmans in suitable groups of families to different provinces, assign fees to them, enlist their elders with some followers in Government employ, and thus secure a powerful irregular cavalry force, which in times of necessity will prove very serviceable."

DEATH OF GHAZZAN KHAN.—Ghazzan Khan—Tummandar or Chief of the Murris—is dead. He had been in weak health for a considerable time, and maintained his authority over the tribe more by his reputation as a saint than by his warlike qualities. He was well disposed towards the English, but we see no reason to suppose that his policy will be reversed by his successor, as sometimes happens amongst more civilised nations.—Pioncer, Sept. 30.

Tea Prospects in Kumaon.—A letter in the Delhi Gazette says: September 8th:—After a break in the rains of about a week, or from 25th ultimo to 1st instant, we have had some very good showers till the 5th instant, during which 1½ inches of rain have been gauged. A break has again set in, but it is to be desired that the final break up will not be for a couple of weeks at least. The rainfall in these hills, as in the plains, has been extremely irregular—a distance of a dozen miles making a difference in the down-fall, or five or six inches in a month. Since the rain set in, about a month late in the middle of July, the weather has been exceptionally favourable for tea, and heavy amounts have been added to the tea bins, and would be for another month if occasional showers could be had till the equinox. There will still be a deficient crop as compared with 1875, but not to the extent that was at first feared. The Green Tea trade, in spite of the Russian Bear's pranks, is still brisk, and almost every plantation has sold its crop at prices even better than were obtainable in 1875. Of course if Bruin puts his paws on Bokhara next, the principal outlet for Kumaon and Gurhwal green teas will ipso facto be closed, but even then Cabul will remain, and behind that the London market will be a never-failing receptacle. The present adverse of exchange for India has increased the prices which the Indian teaplanters have got for their teas this year, and when the unfortunate rupee is in value worth an English shilling, which some anticipate, the tea plantations of India will be almost but not quite as valuable as the silver mines of Nevada, which are throwing so heavy a shadow on the future prospects of those who are paid in the current coin of this realm.

The Yarkand Envoy.—The new Yarkand Envoy was to arrive on Sept. 25 at Simla, where a house has been taken for him by the Government of India. The purpose of his visit, says the Pioneer, can only be conjectured so far—by mere public writers—though Captain Molloy has probably been able by this time to give Government some preliminary information on the subject. But conjectures can hardly fly very wide of the mark when the eagerness of Russia to usurp the little influence we lately established in Kashgar is taken into account. "What do you really mean to do?" the Yarkand Envoy cannot but want to ask in terms as plain a diplomatic usage will sanction. "Do you mean to support us if we are bullied by Russia at some future time, or do you not?" And as a recent traveller in Turkey, it is probable he might be apt to dwell upon the manner in which current politics in that country affect the situation. What little advantage we have gained in our relations with the people of India by our attitude hitherto as friends of the Porte we seem in a fair way to forfeit. Might it not be something in our favour if we accepted a Mohammedan alliance, which would be at least influential in Central Asia. It would be easy to work out the inevitable replies of the Government of India, but the Yarkand Envoy might possess himself of these pages and pay us the compliment of thinking our speculations too vraisemblables. We must be content to follow the course of this diplomacy in Blue-books to be published, perhaps, two or three years hence. Fortunately, we can afford to wait for enlightenment concerning the developments of Kashgar politics. For a year or two they have been sufficiently before the world, and in themselves are not so important to this country as for a time they undoubtedly were interesting. The real difficulty which the Government will have to circumvent in dealing with the coming envoy is that so much hinges on the relations between ourselves and any Central Asian Power. Diplomatising with any one of them is as the letting ou

AN ASPIRING POET.

No pleasure is unalloyed. The Queen is to be proclaimed Empress at Delhi, the loyalty of India is delighted—but the poets have laid hold of the fact. The flood of verse has commenced. "God be praised!!! The Empress of India Nine Gems a Poem in Telugu, by Kokkonda Venkatarathnamu Pantulu." Such is the first of these that has come to our notice, together with "A Poem in English, Illustrative of the Views comprised in the above Telugu Poem." The views are curious, the necessity of writing urgent:

For thee, O Mother, Queen Victoria?
Is fit the title Empress of India.
Our Empress new before thy royal glance?
Aspires to lay, with awe and boundless trance,
A poet poor of Ind, these modest rhymes, Spontan ous sprouts, O pride of modern times?

"Spontan'ous sprouts!" is good, and may be commended to the critics of the English poetaster.

Thy regal umbrella pure, an emblem grand Of thy unrivalled sway o'er many a land, of thy unrivalled sway o'er many a land, must surely be that useful article which, according to Sir Wilfrid Lawson, was the sole result of the Ashantee campaign. The benefits of the British rule are neatly if alliteratively summed up:—

In those woful times when Moslem ruled our Ind, No man but mocked at life, and at honour grinn'd; But now benignant British banners have briskly brought Security of life and pelf and freedom of thought.

Now even all demol'shing deadly time Instantly yields to electric wire and chime, On what hasn't man his great dominion made? For doth not nature's likeness yield the shade?

What steam hath left undone? has not its main United th'east and west, wide trade and gain. Now cylinders long, with lenses knit, O strange! To mill'on miles extend our oc'lar range; And countless balls of light, in ether set, Obey the human call, bereft of pet;

O Queen? thy mighty dams and broad canals, Thy bridges, domes, and parks, and arsenals, Thy benches, roads, and postal systems wide, That now our country grace, make thee our pride; Thy hospitals, banks, schools and boards of health Diffuse clys'an joys and boundless wealth; Now emulation, meekness, and other virtues meet, Give India, on the hill of fame, a noble seat. With Ambrosia of civilisation, churn'd by the West From Science's milky sea, our India now is blest.

In return a grateful nation joins in a chorus of thanksgiving. Women, endowed with rights and gifts beyond the dreams of the "shricking sisterhood" at home,

Sweet hymns in praise of long-sought liberty; And blush with learning, joy and uberty, as well they might. The fluent translator, who has expanded 36 lines to 360, is a B.A. of Madras University, and is a living witness to the excellence of our educational system in India.— Times of

STATION TALK.

Bangalon, Sept. 11.—As my telegram of this morning will have already informed you, his Grace the Duke of Buckingham, with Sir Neville Chamberlain and two staff officers, left Bangalor, this morning cn route for Oossoor. A salute was fired on their departure by a battery of artillery, a guard of honour of the 45th attended at Government House, and an escort of hussars accompanied them until outside the limits of the Bangalor Municipality. The ladies of the party and rest of the Staff do not leave till to-morrow morning, when a special train will be in readiness to take them to Metapollium, and they will pick up his Grace and the Commander-in-Chief at the Maloor Railway Station (the second station from this). Duke and Sir Neville, after making an inspection of the Oossoor Stud, will sleep at Oossoor for the night, and will have a pleasant country drive to Maloor in the morning. The country they will pass through is unfortunately very bare and desolate-looking, but here and there a pretty tope near some tank, with its neighbouring green paddy field, makes a pleasant oasis in the desert, and relieves the general sterile look of the country. His Grace is understood to have enjoyed his visit immensely, and he certainly looked very carefully into everything coming under his notice. Last evening he went to see the Rajah's new palace, now nearly finished, a handsome building of much architectural beauty. The Commander-in-Chief building of much architectural beauty. The Commander-in-Chief returns here next month on a tour of inspection, when several field days and other military displays are expected. Aged field officers are hard at work already burning the midnight oil over their field exercises and soldiers' pocket books in anticipation of his visit. The Rifle Meeting has had a capital day, cool and bright, with not too high a wind. For the Hyderabad Rifle Association Medal contest five rounds at 200, 500, and 700 yards) the best score hitherto has been made by Captain Williamson, 43rd L.I., 62 points out of 75. For the N.I.R.A. Stakes, Private Growen, 45th, is still ahead with 26 points, and Captain Ellis, 48th, next, but it remains to be seen if any one improves on this, which is not unlikely. This afternoon a score of 24 and one round to spare was made, but the firer got anxious and captain the property of the reserved to the reserv anxious and only made an outer, so spoilt his chance of top score. Madras Times Correspondent.

SIKANDRABAD, Sept. 12.—We have had little or no rain during the last week, and to the complaint of high prices and scarcity of water I am afraid that of increased sickness must be added. Among the soldiers there have been eleven deaths from cholera, four women and four children of the 44th Regiment having succumbed to it. A somewhat peculiar case is under the investigation of the military authorities here. A soldier called at the Medical Hall and requested to be supplied with two ounces of chloroform. The apothecary in charge, finding his answer unsatisfactory as to the purpose for which the chloroform was wanted, refused to attend to him unless he brought an order from the surgeon of the regiment. A tew days after the required order was produced, but as the apothecary had some suspicion about it he said he would write to the doctor, and inquire if he had really given the order. Thereupon the soldier snatched away the paper and begged the apothecary to hush up the matter, telling him at the same time he had forged the name of the surgeon. The affair was, however, reported to the officer commanding the regiment, and though it was at first decided that the soldier was to be made over to the civil authorities to be tried on a charge of forgery, I believe he will now appear before a general court-martial.

The editor of a Calcutta journal—the Indian Daily Newsbeen committed for trial on a charge of libelling Sir Stuart Hogg, Chairman of the Municipality.

Miscellaneous.

Assistant Accountant General.—We regret to have to announce the death yesterday, in Black Town, at the early age of forty-six years, of Mr. D. Teagiah Shastry, Assistant to the Accountant General of Madras. He was well respected and liked by his subordinates. The office was closed at 2 p.m. yesterday as a mark of respect.-Madras Mail, Sept. 20.

THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS BODY GUARD.—We learn that a party of his Grace the Governor's Body Guard is under orders to proceed to Delhi. The party will consist of fifty men and horses and one officer, and will be conveyed to the Nerbudda by train, whence they will march into Delhi via Indore, a distance of thirtyeight miles.—Madras Mail, Sept. 25.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.—We much regret to learn that Mr. Robert Thomas Watson, a coffee planter, youngest son of the City Chamberlam of Glasgow, died yesterday from the effects of injuries received when riding in a race at Wellington on the previous day. It seems that after passing the winning-post Mr. Watson turned his pony's head; the animal stumbled and fell, and Mr. Watson was thrown. The second rider cannoned against the pony, which, in some unaccountable way, kicked the deceased gentleman's head. He was picked up insensible, bleeding from the nose, mouth, and eyes, and remained unconscious till his death. He was buried at five P.M. yesterday. It is only two months since that he married the eldest daughter of Colonel J. C. Macdonald, Madras Staff Corps. Madras Mail, Sept. 23.

MADRAS HARBOUR WORKS.—The Madras Harbour works as they are progressing are being very closely scrutinised, and there are those who already profess to discern signs of failure; but the works are going on, and we observe from the only progress report that has as yet been made public—the report for July last—that the money spent on them up to the end of that mouth amounted to Rs. 2,70,115.8.11. The amount spent during July was Rs. 41,884.8.5, while the cost for June was Rs. 45,744.3.3. The excessive demands for stores for the works which have been sent home without that careful scrutiny which Government would have desired to exercise in the first instance, and including many things which would have been equally well provided for in this country, have suggested the expediency of improved arrangements being made for careful supervision and check of the purchases of stores. With this view, Captain Taylor, R.N.R., Master Attendant, Administrative Department, Madras, and Colonel Farewell, Deputy Chief Engineer, Public Works Department, have been requested to form themselves into a standing committee to advise Government and the Harbour Engineer as to the arrangements connected with the construction of the harbour, and the obtaining of the necessary supplies of materials in the most economical manner. The hon. Mr. Macfadyen and Mr. Jones, of Messrs. Parry and Co., have been asked to associate themselves with those officers. The committee so formed has been vested with a general control in regard to the purchase of supplies, either in the local or home markets. All indents on the Secretary of State are, as heretofore, to be submitted through the Local Government, local supplies being finally approved and sanctioned by the Committee.

THE CALICO BALL AT PUNAH.

After passing formally for the second time, the Quadrilles fell very smartly into their places, and the Lancers proceeded with their pleasant duty. As to these Quadrilles it would be difficult to decide which of the two first sets bore off the palm. The Queen of Scots' costume is so exceedingly pretty that it would have borne everything before it, but for the petty defect that, though individual dress was perfect, the partners did not altogether match so far as colour was concerned. Still "sweet Mistress Hamilton" might have sung with some pride have sung with some pride-

There was Mary Beaton and Mary Seton And Mary Carmichael, and I.

Perhaps the parti-coloured medley of this set was fairly counterbalanced in the next Quadrille, where all being exactly alike, a certain sameness prevailed. But these are querulous and frivolous objections, chiefly raised by an overpowering admiration, and the extreme "difficulty of the situation."

Mrs. Waddington's Quadrilles came next, and though not so strong as the other two, the "Nursery Rhymes" were admirably presented. Mrs. Pottinger, the Queen of Hearts, wore a green velvet train and a white front, the latter appropriately covered with jewelled hearts. Her hair was raised and powdered, and surmounted with a crown, with more hearts around the top. The Tarts must have come to an untimely end, as none were visible. Surmises were freely exchanged on the subject, but the Knave of Diamonds was the only being suspected of such a crime as their concealment. Fatima, Undine, and the Beast were inimitable. Hildebrand, some six feet four in height, and stalwart in proportion, would rather have astonished the doughty knights of old, if we may estimate their bulk by the suits of armour I remember in the Tower; but then this is an age of progress. The Beast was got up to the life, but he must have felt that capital imitation of bearskin a trifle heavy. Still his solemn gyrations forcibly reminded me of Heine's lines-Dancing is an act of worship, Is a prayer upon the legs.

So end the Quadrilles, and now looking through the motley crowd I saw that perhaps two of the most remarkable were the Cheeryble Brothers-most excellent representatives certainly of the celebrated originals. In figure and dress they were exact counterparts, and the serene expression of good-humoured content which always attaches to my ideal of these worthy souls was most patently expressed. Three or four Watteau dresses were peculiarly taking, particularly one bravely worn by the wife of a well-known Bombay parrister. Here nature and art blended in one perfection. Mother barrister. Here nature and art blended in one perfection. Mother Hubbard was not inconsolable for the loss of her dog, and Bones at all events was represented by—well!—"a nigger"—a costume hardly suited to a fancy ball. Friar Tuck looked so jolly, and played his part so well when he first came in, that, but for the place, one might have believed he had smelt the brown bowl already. The tall French gentleman, spick and span from the twelfth century, also a well-known Bombayite, was a preux chevalier indeed, but he was scarcely so much disguised as a Poona C.E., who, as the Heathen Chinee, was deliciously "childlike and bland." Fortunately Bill Nye was absent. A lady dressed in Hussar costume and a gentleman as the Black Brunswicker were good and very striking. A little piper of the seventeenth century looked smart striking. A little piper of the seventeenth century looked smart and neat. His pig-tail was most beautifully tied, and ought to have His pig-tail was most beautifully tied, and ought to have pleased his officers, who, report says, in those times were sad martinets. A frontier friend, Rahimet Khan, terrified us with his large dimensions, and as good as secured a perpetual peace. A well-known local poet appeared as a Desert Arab. But vive la Bohème! anywhere and always, and so he looked well and contented. The lady with the sixteenth century c stume was, unlike the unfortunate ice ship, simply A1. Totally different from those worn in the Quadrilles, this dress looked as picturesque as any of them. There were two charming Neapolitan flower-girls, with baskets of rosebuds half-buried in moss—not, unfortunately, for sale. Diana was present in the attempted guise of a huntress. A "Slave Girl" was not half so dolorous as I saw her years ago at Sydenham. Charity girls, Shepherdesses, Cleopatra, a Puritan dame, a Little Red Riding Hood, two Nights, two Winters, an Autumn, a Harvest, and a David last further grage to the spandal against the Dawn lent further grace to the crowded assembly.

The costumes were mostly taken from the well-known published series, except such as winter flower-girls, who were charmingly similar in garb to their summer sisters. One or two out-of-the-way costumes were worn by the men. Among these was a gentleman in the evening dress of the twentieth century, with white clothes and a black shirt front—a cool design which, if I am not wrong, appeared in Punch some few months back. Among our curiosities there was Prester John—discovered at last—Cæsar Borgia, Sam Weller, Admiral Benbow, Back Gammon, two Blue Beards, and a Fool-in silk! The ball was kept up till about half-past three.—Times of India Correspondent.

REFLECTIONS ON A RAMBLE ON THE GHATS. BY AN EMBITTERED PHILOSOPHER.

A pleasant sense of reminiscences of one's early holiday-making comes over one in starting on a railway trip after having been chained by the leg to office work in Bombay during the monsoon. Once fairly started, and with time to look about nature, as seen through the window of a railway carriage in passing through the Concan and up the ghaut, appears so bright, green and cheerful, though withal somewhat moist, that remembering the appearance the same country presented a few months ago it seems impossible that we are gazing on an Indian landscape; and the heat, dust and discomforts of the hot weather are forgotten in the satisfaction and pleasure of the present.

Although, judging from our late experience, it would appear that writers in the English papers nurtured and carefully brought up in writers in the English papers nurtured and carefully brought up in the London World of Grub-street can over their short pipes and beer, and in virtue of apparently an inspired capacity, evolve from their inner consciousness a description for the benefit of their readers of European life as it is supposed by them to exist in India, and can inform them that H.H. the Maharaja of Vizianagram when visiting the Apollo Bunder, as "is his custom of an afternoon," is precluded from taking his "glass of wine" in company with the genial European spirits who frequent the refreshment bar of that place is that parties of the land we live in one pot admitted memplace; that natives of the land we live in are not admitted members of the Bombay Clubs, and several other matters in connection with our every day lives, proving the high-handed and brutal conduct of the overbearing European residents—they would scarcely be equal, gifted as they evidently are, above the run of ordinary men, to conjure up a truthful description of the beautiful scenery which our ghauts present at this season, as it is so utterly removed from what their cut-and-dried conventional home idea would suggest in the way of natural beauty. Waterfalls tumbling and crashing in the way of natural beauty. Waterfalls tumbling and crashing over black rocks, magnificent ravines with gorgeous vegetation, shady nooks covered with ferns and dripping with moisture, distant glimpses of blue mountains, and all that is beautiful and romantic in nature, would not be likely to enter into any of their descriptions in any attempt to represent India. As they have to spice their dishes according to the palates of their customers, and consequently in any such description would have to present a picture consisting of a pagoda, a palm tree and an elephant in the foreground, even as they have been accustomed to do for the last fifty years, with the addition, to meet the present requirements of English public opinion, of an infuriated "Sahib" slashing and maining a mild Hindoo native of the soil in the middle distance, whilst the background would be filled in by a representation of the Maharaja of Vizianagram being turned out of a Bombay billiard room. If the many travellers who raid but did not read, who scurried after the Prince in his tour through India, had simply devoted themselves to an endeavour to describe the people, and the natural beauty and scenery of the lands they visited instead of presenting to our countrymen at home a six hours at the seaside superficial and distorted view of the life and manners of the European residents, much evil discussion would have been averted; but perhaps the intelligence which was unable to represent truthfully what it saw in one case would have failed as dismally in attempting to describe the other. However, after all this wandering, whether our friends at home have a correct impression of our daily lives in India and of our treatment of the natives with whom we come in contact, and whether the gentlemen who are kind enough to immortalise us by description in their papers are in a position to know anything whatever about the matter or not, one thing remains certain—and that is, that under the influence of the delightful ride up the ghaut the letter containing all the brilliant metaphors and arguments which I had been studying for the past week, and with which I intended to have finally disposed for good and all of the great "postulate" "decaying creed" and "Kant" question, and all relating thereto, remains unwritten, and although the world will undoubtedly be the loser, man cannot live upon ghaut scenery alone, be it ever so lovely. A disinterested Parsee is now asking me if I will take dinner at "Lanoli." I am in the hands of fate; it is my kismet; I can write no more.—Bombay Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

An Enlightened Chief.—The Thakur of Rajkot is about to establish a Society for the Prevention of Cruelties to Animals; we (Punjab Courier) should like to see his example followed by a few of the native chiefs of the Punjab. Cruelty to animals is one of the worst vices possessed by our Aryan brethren, especially in this province.

KARACHI.—A correspondent writes:—"Trade at Karachi is very brisk. The home going steamers cannot convey all the tonnage now at that port, and much cargo for London has to wait further means of conveyance. Oil seeds are the principal staple. It would certainly pay an enterprising firm to put on a fortnightly steamer. The British India Steam Navigation Company have it all their own way at present."—Englishman.

LOOTING THE AHMEDNUGGUR MAIL.—Another letter from Ahmednuggur, received yesterday morning, tells us that the looting of the mail tonga is ascribed to the destitution of the poor people. Grains of all sorts are selling at famine prices, and the harvest prospects are anything but favourable. Rain is urgently wanted to enable the ryots to put even a second crop in the ground. We hope the clouds that are piling up all round will soon visit us in gentle and refreshing rain.—Deccan Herald, Sept. 29.

COMING RETIREMENT.—A Calcutta paper is informed that Lieutenant Colonel Sir John Louis, Bart., Bombay Infantry, has applied to retire on a special pension of £365 per annum from the 1st January, 1877. By his retiring on pension, the State will be pecuniarily benefited by £1,200 a year, and the Adjutant-General has accordingly asked the Secretary of State to sanction his request. The amount which Sir John Louis is indebted to the Military Fund will, it is said, be liquidated by October or November next.

KATIAWAR.—It is stated that Government have deputed a mineralogist to Katiawar on a salary of Rs. 1,000 per mensem, a considerable portion of which will be defrayed by the provincial chiefs, the rest by his Highness the Rao of Kutch. It is hoped that the object of that appointment—the development of the mineral wealth of the province—will be successfully carried out, as the country has abundance of these resources. A native contemporary very pertinently inquires who would be entitled to the ownership of the mines when discovered.

The New Dock.—We understand that Mr. Glover has obtained an important contract, valued at seven lakhs, for the excavation of a portion of the land required for the Prince's Dock. It was at first supposed that this land would require to be dredged away, but in consequence of the fortunate fact that it has consolidated, excavation has been decided upon. The result of this work will be that a vast quantity of earth will be set free for reclamations on Moody Bay, and that the dock will be opened two years earlier than was at first expected—that is to say, it will probably be ready for use eraly in 1879.

ABYSSINIAN MEDAL.—We hear that Mr. W. A. Donohoe, of the Bombay Public Works Department, has received the Abyssinian Field Medal from his Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief for his services during the Expedition. Mr. Donohoe occupied the position of chief clerk to the Commander-in-Chief's (Lord Napier's) office throughout the campaign. He is the only civilian clerk who has obtained that much-coveted distinction. He owes it, we understand, to the recommendation of the late Commander-in-Chief, by whom his services were highly appreciated.—
Times of India, Oct. 2.

GUN PRACTICE.—The return of the annual gun practice of the batteries of Royal Artillery serving in the Bombay Presidency has been published, and the result must be allowed to be satisfactory.

Of the batteries armed with the M.L.R guns, the one that made the best practice was the C-4 at Belgaum, and the second best was the D-4 at Haidarabad. Sergeant Clapp, of the C-4, is, I see, the best shot, he having obtained 52 points out of a possible 84. Of the batteries armed with the 12-pounder B.L.R. guns, the G-4 at Nasirabad was the best, being run, however, uncommonly close by the E-4 at Nimsch

The Governor's State Ball.—His Excellency the Governor's State Ball, which we fear we must look upon as the beginning of the end of our Poona season, came off on the night of Wednesday last, and was attended with the success which has favoured so many of the dances which we have recently had the pleasure of noticing in our columns. It is said that there were nearly 500 people there, and certain it is that the majority of our visitors continue to favour us with their company. We only hope that the gaiety still to come may induce them to extend their stay for some time longer. The rooms, &c., always pretty, looked their best that night, and there were lots of them. The floors and music were such as to afford the greatest pleasure to dancers, and the handsome dresses of the ladies and the various uniforms formed a sight that could not but be fascinating to those looking on. We were exceedingly sorry to see that a number of the ladies' dresses suffered very considerably, and to certainly struck us that on occasions of this sort spurs might be subjected to the same treatment as swords.—Deccan Herald, Sept. 29.

THE ANJUMAN-I-ISLAM.—The usual monthly meeting of the members of the Anjuman-i-Islam was held on the 7th ult., at which, we are told by a vernacular paper, several excellent speeches were made. The Hon. Nacoda Mahomed Ali Rogay spoke at some length, and said that some time ago he had some conversation with one of the officers of the Sorojman Sabha at Puna, and he was then informed by that gentleman that the members of the Sabha were anxious to know what line the Anjuman proposed to pursue with regard to the suggested contributions for the benefit of Turkey. For his own part he was convinced that it was the duty of every Mohammedan, if not to contribute to the expenses of the war, at least to give aid towards succouring the wounded, and providing for the widows and orphans of those who fall in the defence of the Sultan's legitimate authority.— Moulvie Hidayetullah then addressed the meeting, and supported the Moulvie Hidayetuliah then addressed the meeting, and supported the position taken by the preceding speaker, and called to the consideration of those present the fact, which he said every orthodox Mohammedan was bound to admit and act upon, that the Sultan was the legimitate successor of the Caliphs, and as such amirul-momenin, or "Commander of the Faithful." Admitting that the Sultan held this post, and the fact could not be disputed, it then became equally certain that all Mohammedans were bound to render the fullest assistance possible. When we was prepared the consideration of the sultant that the sultant and the sultant possible when we was prepared the sultant possible. possible when-as was perhaps the case now-he required that assistance. It was not however for aid to carry on the war that the present appeal was made, but for funds to aid in succouring those who were either wounded or rendered destitute in the war.—Moulvie Abdul Fatah next addressed the meeting, and spoke at some length to the same effect. Other persons of position and influence among the Mohammedans of Bombay also spoke —A special meeting of the Anjuman i-Islam was held on Saturday night, Sept. 30, at the residence of the Hon. Nacoda Mahomed Ali Rogay, for raising a subscription in aid of the wounded soldiers of the Turkish armies, and of the orphans and widows of those who died in the field. All the leading members of the Mohammedan community, we are given to understand, were invited to this meeting, and most of those now in town were present. It was unanimously resolved that the subscriptions should be collected by the heads of each section of the community and should be forwarded to the managing committee of the Anjuman, who will remit the amount to Constantinople, and see that the money is duly applied to the purposes for which it was raised. The list which was circulated at the meeting was very well filled up, many of the wealthier members present having subscribed more than 1,000 rupees each, while some gave as much as 3,000 rupees. The amount rupees each, while some gave as much as 3,000 rupees. collected on the spot was no less than 20,000 rupees in all. Some of the wealthiest members of the community, however, being absent the wealthiest members of the community, however, being absent from Bombay, were not able to attend this meeting, but we understand that they have promised to come out liberally, and it is confidently expected by the Anjuman that the amount which is likely to be raised for this very praiseworthy object will not only prove the genuineness and the depth of the interest which the Mohammedans take in their Turkish co-religionists, but will also do credit to their humanity. It is eminently satisfactory that the sympathy which is felt by the Museulmans of this city for their co-religionists in Turkey is shown in so practical and benevolent a form. The object of the present subscription is one of which everybody—no metter of the present subscription is one of which everyhody-no matter what his race or creed may be—will heartily approve, and we there-fore trustthat the Anjuman will be as successful in this its second great effort as it certainly was in the first. We are always the first to hail with satisfaction the symptoms of the existence or the revival of proper and healthy political feeling in any portion of the Indian community, and we are certainly glad to observe those signs of energy and activity on the part of our Mohammedan fellow-subjects of Bombay. We interpret them as the signs of a fresh and healthy life in a large and important class of her Majesty's subjects, who, until recently, were, to all practical purposes, dead as a body, and whose very existence as the great community they really are was as imperceptible to an ordinary observer as if they had never existed at If the Mussulmans, however, show the same energy and activity and the same determination, the solution of the many important social and educational questions to which we referred when writing on the subject of the meeting in the Jumma Musjid, we see no reason on the subject of the meeting in the Jumma Musjid, we see no reason why their community, as a whole, should not be held in as high estimation as any other class of her Majesty's subjects, and why they should not attain the high position to which, from their numbers and intelligence, they would seem to be naturally entitled. The one great stumbling-block in the way of Mahomedans in Western India at least, is the want of education, and it is to this subject, more than to any other, that we would direct the attention of the Anjaman-i-Islam. - Times of India, Oct. 2.

SIR ARTHUR GORDON.—Private letters received by the present mail mention with a confidence amounting almost to certainty, that Sir Arthur Gordon will be the next Governor for Ceylon. It may be remembered that we stated some two months ago that a letter had been received here, from a member of Sir Arthur Gordon's family, stating that they were coming to Ceylon.—Ceylon Times, Sept. 12.

THE GOVERNOR .- We have definite intelligence regarding the approaching retirement of Sir Wm. Gregory from the governorship of Ceylon. By the last English mail intimation was sent to the Secretary of State that the Governor wished to be relieved of his duties early in next year. This is said to be the first intimation Earl Carnarvon will have received of the subject, so that we cannot hope to know for several months to come who the successor of the present ruler will be, particularly if there be as much difficulty in finding an occupant for the three Government Houses in Ceylon as there is to get an ecclesiastic to mount the episcopal throne in the cathedral church of Calcutta. This, however, is unlikely, and the chances are that the principle which was exemplified when Sir Herwick Palis personnel. cules Robinson was promoted from Hong Kong will be repeated, and one of the minor governors of colonies receive promotion. Parliament will be out of session, and hungry office-seeking M.P.'s scattered far and wide, when Earl Carnarvon is called upon to dispense this piece of patronage, so the chances are that no faithful voter on the side of the House of Commons will be sent to Ceylon to rule its people as a reward for implicit obedience to the "whip" on all occapeople as a reward for implicit obedience to the wind on an occasions. Amongst Colonial Governors the choice seems to lie between Sir William Jervois of the Straits; Sir Arthur Kennedy of Hong Kong; and Sir Arthur Gordon of Fiji.—Ceylon Observer.

RAILWAY EXTENSION.—The Chamber of Commerce met on Thursday to consider the question of a guarantee for railway extension, and came to a resolution expressing the opinion of the Chamber "that railway extension from Nawalapitya through the district of Dimbula to Uva, and from Kandy to Matale, is highly desirable in the interests of the colony and of commerce generally, and that the Government should be requested to work the main line and the extension together, when, in the opinion of the Chamber, a guarantee of six per cent. net profit over the whole railway system would meet with the undoubted support of the entire planting and mercantile community, who would readily submit to the imposition of special duties on exports, to meet any ascertained deficit." A deputation to his waited on the Governor next day, and presented this resolution to his Excellency. The Governor refused to allow the main line and the extension to be worked as one concern; he refused to credit the extension with the money paid by the planters (£450,000); he refused to pay over any portion of the main line profits to railway extension; and he would not promise any particular portion of the sur-opinion, the Chamber met next day, and, while reiterating their belief in the justice of the claims made, yet "in order that every obstacle to the commencement of the works may be removed, the meeting recorded the opinion that taxation should be levied to provide for any ascertained deficit, rather than that the extension should be postponed, leaving it to Government to determine what form the taxation for this purpose should take." This resolution was adopted unanimously. An important and largely attended general meeting of merchants, proprietors, and representatives was held on Saturday afternoon, when the same resolution was unanimously adopted as had been agreed to by the Chamber of Commerce.—Ceylon Times, Sept. 12.

A considerable reduction will probably soon be made in the travelling allowances granted to officials in India.

It is expected that either the Finance Minister or Sir A. Clarke will preside at the Railway Conference in Calcutta.

The customs collections for the first five months of the current financial year, exclusive of salt revenue, show a decrease of Rs. 19,79,276.

THE AMIR OF KABUL is reported to be showing favours to the Russian Envoy, and to have told the British Agent that he may leave the country.

STUDY OF THE LANGUAGES OF FRONTIER TRIBES.

Aug. 15.—The Lieut. Gov., with the sanction of the Government of India, has been pleased, in superession of previous orders, to prescribe the following rules for granting rewards to civil officers in Bengal for proficiency in the language of frontier tribes:—

2. A reward of Rs. 1,000 (one thousand) will be granted to any covenanted civilian, deputy or assistant commissioner, deputy collector, or district or assistant superintendent of police, who shall pass by the prescribed transfer an experience of the standard commissioner. scribed standard an examination in any one language in any of the groups of languages noted below, provided that the language is spoken within the district where the officer is at the time employed, or by tribes conterminous to it with whom he has official relations. A second reward will in no case be given to an officer for proficiency in a second language of the same group. [Group I. Kol or Munda, Sonthali. Group II. Oraon, Rajmehal Paharia. Group III. Khond of Orissa. Group IV. Thibetan, Lepcha, Bhootia. Group V. Kuki or Lushai. Group VI.

Garo.]
3. The examination shall be conducted by a local committee to be specially appointed by Government on each occasion.

4. The tests which a candidate for the above reward must undergo are as follow:

(a.) He must be able to converse freely with the people of the tribe in whose vernacular he may wish to qualify, to understand and to make himself understood by them.

(b.) He must write down in the English or the Bengali or Hindee cha. racter sentences spoken in the tribal language by one of the tribe, or conversation held between two of them, and must explain it correctly in English.

(c.) He must, without assistance, translate from English or his mother tongue into the tribal language (writing it in either the English or Bengali or Hindee character) sentences not of a more difficult nature than those in requirement (b). The translation must be substantially correct and intelligible when read to a native in whose language it might be written.

. The above rules will not affect the rules prescribing the rewards to which junior civilians will be entitled who succeed in passing high proficiency and honours examinations in certain specified languages.

ROYAL WARRANTS.

The following important Royal Warrants on the consolidated salaries of staff and departmental officers, rank of medical officers, &c., have been promulgated to her Majesty's Army by direction of the Secretary of State for War:— VICTORIA R.—Whereas we deem it expedient to revise and issue in a consolidated form the emoluments of certain staff and departmental officers employed in the administration of the Army at headquarters.

Our will and pleasure is that Article 4 of our warrant of Feb. 18, 1874, our win and pleasure is that Article 4 or our warrant of Feb. 18, 1874, be cancelled; that Articles 113 and 384 of our warrant of Dec. 27, 1870; Article 20 of our warrant of Nov. 27, 1875; and Article 1 of our warrant of April 28, 1876, be amended in the following particulars, and that the undermentioned consolidated salaries be issued from April 1, 1876:—

Headquarters Staff. - Assistant Military Secretary (limited to the present holder of the appointment), £700 yearly; Assistant Military Se tary, £600.

Commissariat and Transport Department.—Deputy Commissary General at headquarters, £900 yearly; and Assistant Commissary General, Army Medical Department.—Surgeon-General at headquarters, £1,200;

Deputy Surgeon-General, £850; Surgeon-Major, £600.

Royal Engineer Department.—Deputy Director of Works at headquarters, £1,200; and Assistant ditto, £850.

Deputy Judge Advocate in London, £450.

The foregoing rates shall, in the case of the Assistant Military Secretary and the Deputy Judge Advocate, be inclusive allowances, but in addition to the full pay, unattached, or half-pay of the military ranks which such officers hold in our army. In the case of the other officers the rates above specified shall be inclusive of all pay and allowances, including extra pay in the case of the officers of the Royal Engineer department.

Given at our Court at Balmoral, this 9th day of September, 1876, in the fortieth year of our reign.

By her Majesty's command,

VICTORIA R.—Whereas by Article 3 of our warrant of April 28, 1876, prescribing the terms and conditions of service of officers who should thereafter join the medical department of our army, we did, amongst other things, direct that a surgeon-major should, after twenty years fullay service as surgeon and surgeon-major, rank as lieutenant-colonel, but junior of the latter rank.

Our will and pleasure is, and we do hereby direct that medical officers of our army who shall hereafter be promoted for distinguished service in the field before they have completed the period of full-pay service abovementioned, shall rank as lieutenant-colonel and shall enjoy all the advantages appertaining thereto to the same extent as they are enjoyed, under our warrant above-mentioned, by surgeon-majors after twenty years' full-pay service, whenever it shall happen that the junior officer next to them shall have acquired the relative rank aforesaid.

Given at our Court at Balmoral, this 23rd day of September, 1876, in the fortieth year of our reign.

By her Majesty's command,

GATHORNE HARDY.

Official Papers.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE'S DRAFTS ON INDIA. No. 2526.

Government of India, Financial Department, Simla, Aug. 31.

Financial, No. 279 India-office, London, July 13. To H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council.

My Lord, -Para 1. I have considered in Council your Financial letter, dated May 4, 1876, No. 153, and the papers therewith forwarded, relative to certain representations from the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, regarding the condition of the Money Market in Calcutta.

2. In their letter dated April 19, 1876, the Bengal Chamber of Commerce stated that the condition of the Money Market in Calcutta was such as to occasion the gravest apprehension; that in their judgment that condition was mainly attributable to the suspension of the bi-monthly drawings on the Indian Treasuries; that the uncertainty as to the measures which might be adopted by the "Secretary of State in respect of his requirements forbids calculations being made with any degree of safety, obstructs the ordinary course of business, and creates incalculable mischief to all interests; that "in the budget statement the Financial Member estimated that the drafts on India would realise only 1s. 8 d., and that even a lower rate might have to be accepted, thereby leading the public to believe that at such figures the Secretary of State would sell his bills. Acting on such belief, the exchange banks took no measures for the purchase of silver, or other means of remittance, though their wants were so pressing; instead, however, of adopting the Budget rates the Secretary of State arbitrarily adheres to a higher exchange, causing thereby greater stringency than ever;" that "to some extent, no doubt, the suspension of a long-continued practice has been justified by exceptional circumstances but it appears to the Committee that the unfavourable conditions under which the Secretary of State must negotiate his drafts on India cannot be improved by a temporising policy, and that it is due to those who have mproved by a temporising policy, and that it is due to those who have hitherto enabled him to finance with ease and facility, and to the merchants of India, whose operations contribute a considerable share of the public revenue, that they should be protected by the immediate declaration of a definite purpose, and freed from an irresolute and fluctuating procedure."

3. In attributing the condition of the Money Market in Calcutta to the suspension of the bi-monthly drawings, the Chamber of Commerce appear to have been imperfectly informed of, or to have overlooked, the circumstances attending the recent transactions in regard to bills on India.

4. During the autumn of 1875, and up to January last, the rates of exchange offered for bills on India gradually declined to 1s. 9 d. the rupee, but the amount tendered continued to be very large.

5. Tenders were invited for Rs. 70,00,000 bi-monthly, and the tenders received were :-

4,63,80,000 4,47,12,000 On the 3rd November, 1875 ... 17th 1st December " ... ••• ... ... 4,98,45,000 ... 7,14,30,000 ... 5,23,10,000 ••• 15th 15th ,, ,, ... 5th January, 1876 ... ... ••• 3,35,40,000 19th

The lowest rate tendered on the 19th January being 1s. 9 d. Notwithstanding the unfavourable exchange the full amount for which tenders were invited was accepted up to the last drawing in January.

6. On February 2nd the total amount tendered was only Rs. 33,57,000 at rates varying from 1s. 815-16d. to 1s. 81d., which was less than half the amount for which tenders had been invited.

7. It was obvious that a change in the requirements of commere, a feeling of alarm as to the action of European Governments in relation to the currency, or as to the probable extent of the increased production of silver, had suddenly produced a serious disturbance in the demand for bills, which was calculated to exercise a very injurious effect in regard to the

8. Under these circumstances, the tenders on the 2nd February were not accepted, and the amount for which tenders were invited for the 16th of that month was reduced to Rs. 50,00,000. On that date the tenders amounted to Rs. 1,83,24,000, but at lower rates of exchange, and none were accepted. On the 1st March the tenders amounted to Rs. 30,70,000. The rates offered, being still lower, were not accepted. On the 15th March the total amount tendered was Rs. 27,60,000 only, but at slightly improved rates, and three lacs were accepted. On the 5th April Rs. 43,00,000 were tendered, and the rates being again lower, none were accepted, but the tenders on the 19th April having increased to Rs. 1,76,00,000, and being at better rates, tenders for 50 lacs were accepted, and on the 3rd May tenders were accepted for Rs. 48,10,000, after which date the amount for which tenders were invited was raised to Rs. 70,00,000 bi-monthly.

9. To whatever causes the disturbance in the demand for remittance, and the consequent effect on the Money Market in Calcutta was attributable, it obviously was not caused by the rejection of tenders for bills on India, as the tenders were accepted for the full amount up to the end of January, when the total amount tendered, as already stated, suddenly fell from Rs. 5,23,10,000 tendered on the 5th January, and Rs. 3,35,40,000 on the 19th January, to Rs. 33,57,000 on the 2nd February.

10. It might with more reason be urged that the disturbance, of which the reduction in the demand for bills was an evidence, was consequent on tenders being accepted for so large an amount as Rs. 1,40,00,000 a month during the period when the rates of exchange were steadily declining.

11. The remittance to this country annually of so large a sum as

£15,000,000 to pay interest on money expended in India on railways and irrigation works, and for other purposes of Government, to pay for stores annually required for India, charges for effective and non-effective services of British troops on the Indian Establishment, furlough and retired pay of civil and military officers and servants of the Government, and other expenditure which must be defrayed from the Home Treasury, demands at all times much care in order to obtain the amount required on favourat at times much care in order to obtain the amount required on avourable terms; but at a time like the present, when the demands for remittances is influenced by a full in the price of silver, by apprehensions as to the amount of silver which may at any moment be placed in the market by the German Government, and by the unfavourable state of trade, the difficulty of obtaining the required remittance is greatly increased; and I could not consent to undertake to accept any tenders which might be made without reference to the rates of exchange offered, or the amount of bills for which applications might be submitted.

12. I request, therefore, that you will inform the Bengal Chamber of Commerce that, while the Secretary of State in Council is fully sensible of the importance of avoiding any measure which might increase the uncertainty in regard to the India exchanges, he cannot admit that any estimate made in connection with the Budget statement of your Government which had not been then forwarded to or considered by him as to the rate of exchange which drafts on India might realise during the year 1876-77 ought to be regarded as an intimation that the Secretary of State would sell his bills at the rate, and that he must reserve to himself full liberty to take from time to time such measures as he deems called for with reference to the state of the exchanges and the demand for bills on India.—I have the honour to be, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient humble servant,

Ordered that the foregoing despatch be communicated to the Bengal
Chamber of Commerce in continuation of communication from this de-Chamber of Commerce in continuation of partment, No. 20, dated May 2, 1876.

Ordered, also, that this despatch be communicated to the Chambers of Commerce in Madras and Bombay for information.

R. H. HOLLINGBERY,

Assistant Secretary to the Government of India.

THE SOCIAL SCIENCE CONGRESS. ECONOMY AND TRADE.

The President of this department, Mr. G. J. Shaw Lefevre, M.P., ob the chair on Oct. 12 the subject for discussion being, "What took the chair on Oct. 12, the subject for discussion being, "What are the causes and effects of the depreciation of the price of silver, how far is it an evil, and what are the best means of counterbalancing the evil?" The question was opened by papers from Mr. R. Giffen and Mr. H. Cernuschi.

Mr. Giffen maintained that the principal result of the great depreciation of silver would be that in countries having a silver standard the usual effects of a depreciation of the standard would be produced; those countries would sooner or later experience a general rise of prices, probably with the usual accompaniments of speculation and stimulated trade. The weight of the national debts of such countries, so far as regarded contracts in silver, would also be diminished; on the other side, creditors in such countries would have less to receive, though debtors had less to pay than was contracted for, and thus many individuals would lose. The wages-receiving classes in such countries would also suffer at first by a real fall in the wages, and accumulant classes would be straitened. These had been the effects of the Australian gold discoveries and the consequent depreciation in gold which thereon occurred, although the temporary fall in wages and other evils had been neutralised or lost sight of in an advance of wages due to other causes, and a vast industrial progress, which was no doubt partly stimulated at one time by the gold discoveries themselves. As regards the use of silver for other purposes than money, the depreciation meant the supply of an article valued by mankind at a cheaper price, which was an advantage to the world as far as it went. These ought naturally to be considered the main effects of the depreciation of silver, and the reason there was so great an outery about it, exceeding that about many similar events, was to be found in the circumstance that there happened to be a large class, comprising mainly the employés in the public services and merchants trading in silver-using countries, who were losers by the change; but although the losses of these classes were great, there was also much exaggeration about them, and the losses of trades were, after all, within the ordinary chances of trade—the hindrance to trade when there was no longer a fixed relation between silver and gold was only of the same nature as that encountered in trade with countries which had an inconvertible paper money. As regards Governments, the deficits from which they suffered by the adverse change in making their When the gold payments could only be considered temporary. adjustment of prices had been made, they would receive a larger revenue in silver and be as able as before to make their payments good payments. Several difficulties in the way of the Government being able to raise an increased silver revenue were no doubt alleged in the case of India, but the presumption was that if there were such special difficulties they must embarrass Indian finance in other ways, and should be grappled with accordingly. The conclusion, therefore, was that the depreciation of silver gave no occasion for

Mr. Cernuschi advocated a fixed and permanent relation between gold and silver by the adoption of a bimetallic money system. At present silver bullion had no legal value in Europe; the only remedy for the present depreciation of silver was universal bimetallism.

In the discussion which followed, Mr. Hurst, Mr. Smith (Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce), Mr. Langley, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Williamson, Mr. Picton, Mr. Biggs, Mr. Nolan, and others took part.

Mr. Shaw Lefevre, in summing up the discussion, said that Mr. Giffen in another paper had given his opinion that the price of silver had already reached its minimum, and that he did not expect a further depreciation; that already some reaction had occurred, and that the price was now 52d. per oz., in lieu of 58d. as recently. If that were so, and if there were to be no further depreciation, it would probably be unnecessary to adopt any remedy. The discuswould probably be unnecessary to adopt any remedy. The discussion, however, must be taken on the assumption that there would be further depreciation of silver from time to time, and that we had not yet reached the limit. Having read most carefully the most able report of the Committee of the House of Commons, he could not enough feel that the subject of the future price of silver was open to much doubt. It mainly depended on the production of the mines in Nevada, of which we know little. Since he had come into the room he had heard it said that news had recently been received that the production of these mines had fallen off, and that the shares in them had greatly fallen; but it was possible that there were rumours spread about for the purpose of raising the price of silver again. Though the demonetisation of silver in Germany was nearly complete, it was equally certain that France would require very much less silver in future than in the past. Another difficulty was caused by the very great indebtedness of India to this country. This indebtedness till lately was disguised in part by the buyers of loans, by the railway companies, or by the Government for India. The indebtedness amounted to fifteen millions a-year, and before a single shilling of silver could be sent to India, specie or goods to the amount of fifteen millions must be remitted to England. This, again, reacted on the price of silver, as it tended to prevent silver flowing so freely to India as it could otherwise go. If the process was undisturbed by this, he believed the effect of the depreciation of silver would be to cause silver gradually to find its way in greater quantities to India to promote productive exportations for India, while it would encourage imports. He was inclined to agree with Mr. Giffen in this process, though very inconvenient to the Indian Government.

FEMALE EDUCATION IN INDIA.

On Saturday, October 14, Miss Mary Carpenter read a paper on "Female Education in India," and described the results of her recent visit to that country. Normal schools were now being carried on in Calcutta, Madras, Poona, and other places, and they worked very satisfactorily, but the training of female teachers was a necessary step to further progress. The social position of women had greatly improved during the past ten years, and there were many gratifying instances of progress. The natives of India were now prepared to value good schools for their daughters, and she towards that Government would account a with voluntary effort to trusted that Government would co-operate with voluntary effort to provide them. A short discussion followed, and the section then adjourned.

AN INDIAN AND COLONIAL MUSEUM.
On Wednesday, Oct. 18, a paper was read by Mr. Isaac Watts in favour of a proposal that had been suggested by Dr. Forbes Watson for the erection upon the old Fife-house site, on the Victoria Embankment, of two museums-one for the Colonies and the other for

Mr. Watts urged that as the proposed institution would manifestly be of an Imperial character, the cost of the undertaking should be shared between England on one hand and the Colonies and India on the other; that England should provide the site, while the Colonies and India should bear the cost of the buildings. The museums thus established would be systematically used as depôts from which to supply information to the whole country by means of collections of products, and these collections would be available for distribution throughout the principal seats of commerce and manufactures in the whole Engine factures in the whole Empire.

After a discussion, in which Miss Carpenter, Mr. Botley, Professor Sheldon Amos, Dr. Yeats, Mr. E. B. Eastwick, and Mr. Whalley, M.P., took part, the following resolution was unanimously agreed to:

"That the Section recommends the Council to consider the propriety of memorialising her Majesty's Government in favour of establishing an Imperial Museum for India and the Colonies in London in some central position, and, if possible, that special arrangements should be made for loan collections which may be exhibited in country towns."

Miscellancous.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC COLLEGE.—A prospectus of the Royal Polytechnic College, 309, Regent-street, under the presidency of the Earl of Shaftesbury, has just been issued for the autumn season, which commenced on October 9.

ROYAL NAVAL SCHOOL, New Cross.—Mr. W. A. G. Woods (son of the late W. H. Woods, Esq., Surgeon R.N.), who gained the Clothworkers' Scholarship from this school, has recently passed fourth out of fifty candidates for a sizarship at St. John's College, Cambridge.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday for India Council drafts to the amount of 35,00,000 rupees (say £350,000), the whole of which were taken for Calcutta in the shape of telegraphic transfers at 1s. 81d. per rupee. As compared with last week, when the minimum price "for bills only was ls. 8d., the present allotment may be regarded as a rise of ad. to 3-16d. per rupee. The effect on the price of silver in the afternoon was a recovery of 1-16d. per oz., to 52½d.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The following were the exports of specie to the East by the steamers of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company notified in De Quetteville's Indian Circular of October 12th:—From Southampton, per Mongolia, October 5—Gold, to Alexandria, £63,500; Silver, to Bombay, £56,900. EASTERN EXTENSION TELEGRAPH COMPANY .- According to the report of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company (Limited), the gross earnings for the half-year amounted to £98,542, and the working expenses, cost of repairs, income-tax, interest on debentures, &c., to £43,910, the balance of profit being £54,631. One interim dividend of  $1_{1}^{1}$  per cent., amounting to £24,969, has been paid, and another similar amount is payable on the 16th inst., leaving £4,693. The directors regret that the Penang-Madras section, which broke near the Nicobar Islands on March 27 last, has not yet been repaired, owing to the continuance of the monsoon. The Port Darwin section was repaired on Aug. 7. The duplicate cable for the section between Penang and Rangoon is in course of manufacture, The duplicate cable for the and will be laid early next year.

DEATH OF CAPTAIN JOHN MAXWELL MACNEILL.—The death is announced, at the age of forty-three years, of the third son of Sir John Macneill, LL.D., F.R.S., M.R.I.A. He entered the 49th Regiment as ensign in 1852, transferred to the 53rd Regiment in 1854, was appointed adjutant in 1856, promoted captain in 1860, transferred to the 72nd Highlanders in 1861, with which regiment he served until his retirement from the service in 1865. Captain Macneill served as adjutant of the 53rd Regiment in the Indian campaign 1857-58, including the action of Kujwah, relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde, battle of Cawnpore on December 6 (where he was severely wounded), at the action of Khodagunge, and at the entry into Futtehghur, as well as at the affair of Shumshabad, the storm and capture of Meangunge, the siege and capture of Lucknow, and the affair of Koorsie.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—The half-yearly general meeting was held on Oct. 19; Mr. G. Arbuthnot, the chairman, presiding. The chief manager read the half-yearly statement of accounts, recommending a dividend for the half-year of 5 per cent. The Chairman then said there would no doubt be a feeling of regret that the dividend was not so large as the shareholders had been accustomed to receive—namely, at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum. The directors would have been glad to declare a dividend at this rate on the present occasion if they could have seen their way to do so. The past half-year, however, had been marked by great fluctuations in the Indian exchanges, which had varied from 1s. 9\frac{3}{4}d. to 1s. 6\frac{3}{8}d. The Chairman referred with deep regret to the death of Mr. Mackean, one of the auditors of the corporation for several years, and concluded by declaring a dividend of \( \mathcal{E}1 \). 5s. per share for the halfyear. He afterwards announced that everything was going on well at the branches and agencies up to the present, so the directors hoped to announce a good result next half-year.

Foreign Trade of India.—The foreign trade of British India in the financial year 1874-75 amounted in value to £100,691,249, being £6,414,000 more than in the preceding year. The imports amounted to £42,786,282—viz., £34,645,236 merchandise and £8,141,046 treasure, both items showing a considerable increase. The exports amounted to £57,904,967—viz., £56,312,246 merchandise and £1,592,721 treasure, the former item showing an increase and the latter a decrease. Government stores and treasure are not included. The traffic was divided as follows: - With Europe, £70,608,318—viz., £35,102,772 imports thence, and £35,505,546 exports thither; Asia, £25,141,244—viz., £6,518,469 imports, and £18,622,775 exports; America, £2,370,924—viz., £193,506 imports, and £2,177,418 exports; Africa, with Mauritius and Bourbon, £2,201,593-viz., £737,901 imports, and £1,463,692 exports; Australia, £369,170—viz., £233,634 imports, and £135,536 exports. Of the European trade more than six-sevenths was with the United Kingdom, and the latter exceeded by upwards of four millions sterling the corresponding trade of the preceding year.

TRANSFER OF THE INDIAN MUSEUM.—A Parliamentary paper just issued gives the resolutions of the Secretary of State for India in Council respecting the transfer of the Indian Museum to South Kensington, with the opinions of the members of Council recorded The resolution to build on the vacant ground in Charlesstreet a museum and library, at an expenditure not exceeding £75,000, and in the meantime to remove the Museum to South Kensington, was dissented from by Sir G. Clerk, Sir F. Halliday, Sir H. Maine, and Sir E. Perry, but was carried by six votes. A subsequent resolution to the effect that the Museum, as charged upon Indian revenues, should be confined to such an exhibition of objects illustrative of Indian raw products and manufactures as will be obviously for the material interests of the people of India, but that, if the Imperial Government should be prepared to contribute to-wards a general Indian Museum, its further extension would be hereafter taken into consideration, was carried by seven to one, Sir H. Montgomery being the dissentient. It was also agreed that the articles in the Museum not coming under the description of raw products and manufactures should be exhibited in the galleries at South Kensington. Sir Erskine Perry and Sir H. C. Montgomery strongly dissented from the Museum vote.

SUICIDE OF AN INDIAN STUDENT .- On Monday evening Dr. Thomas beld an inquiry at the University Hospital respecting the death of a young man of colour, named Rattanji Varangi Desai, aged 21. The deceased was a married man, and had left Bombay at the commencement of the present year to study law at the University College, Gower-street. He had lived in lodgings with another coloured gentleman at No. 3, Chalcot-crescent, Primrose-hill, Regent's-park, where they have been for the last four or five months. Deceased had frequently given way to fits of despondency, and had often expressed his fear of not being successful in his examinations. On Monday week he left home to go to the Holborn Skating Rink, and returned about midnight, having, during his absence, purchased a revolver and a box of cartridges. Shortly after retiring to bed Mr. Desai Dallotrai, deceased's companion, twice heard the report of firearms, and raised an alarm. The bed-room door of the deceased was immediately forced by Mr. Franklin, the landlord, when the unfortunate young man was found in bed with the pistol lying on his chest. Dr. Reid was called in, and, on examination, found that a bullet had passed through the mouth into the vertebræ, injuring the spinal cord. He died on the following day. A verdict of suicide while of unsound mind was returned.

The New City Line Steamer "City of Edinburgh, 3,500 tons and 500-horse power, is the last addition to Messrs. George Smith and Son's splendid fleet of steamers running between Glasgow and Calcutta. In the arrangement and construction of the vessel, Messrs. Smith have introduced every improvement that would add to the comfort and safety of passengers travelling to the East. The passengers are accommodated in a lofty and well-ventilated house on the upper deck; the saloon has large windows, and punkahs fitted over each table for diffusion of cold air to the passengers. The state-rooms are large, and ventilated by side ports and skylights. Marble baths are also fitted, and many other comforts. The engines are of 500 nominal horse power, and are supplied by steam from four boilers having twelve furnaces, each boiler weighing about thirty-five tons. During the trial trip the engines worked to the entire satisfaction of those present, the vessel making a speed of nearly thirteen knots per hour. The vessel is steered by steam gear in a pilot house placed amidships, where gearing for working by manual power is also adopted, so as to be ready in the event of any accident to the steering engines. The City of Edinburgh is sister ship to the City of London, now on her second voyage from India. Both vessels have been built by Messrs. C. Connell and Co., the engines being constructed by Messrs. John and James Thomson.

CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA, AND CHINA.—An extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders was held on the 18th inst., at the City Terminus Hotel. Mr. Wm. Patterson, who was in the chair, said that the bank during the six months past had been doing a steady business, yielding fair profits with minimum risks. The result of the Parliamentary Committee on the silver question had appeared in a very voluminous Blue-book, which contained a great deal of information as to the past, nothing very fresh as to the present, and less as to the future. did not even conclude with a recommendation, although it was a subject of the utmost importance to India. Owing in a great measure to the depreciation in the value of silver, and the action of the Indian Council with regard to its drawings, coupled with the state of trade, exchanges in the East had fluctuated very much, but, notwithstanding, the result of the Bank's operations had been very satisfactory, and the bank's investments in silver were never smaller than at present. He believed the position of the bank had never been so satisfactory since the panic year of Bombay, now ten There were indications of an improvement in trade, and he believed that Indian produce was now at such prices that even war would not act very adversely, except in two or three articles; so that the bank was on a safer basis than it had been for many years. The report, with a dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, was then adopted.

MILITARY AND NAVAL ITEMS.—B, C, and D batteries B brigade Royal Horse Artillery embarked for India, with head quarters, in H.M.S. Jumna, on the 15th October; A and E batteries remaining at home until December 29. It is announced at Woolwich that Lieut. T. E. Crowe, R.A., has been selected for appointment to Royal Horse Artillery, and joins F brigade in India. Favon, surveying vessel, Commander Wharton, is to leave Port Said to-day (Monday) for the East Indies and China, to complete some important surveys. Major A. De V. Jupper has been appointed to the D battery B brigade Royal Horse Artillery, under orders for India, vice Major R. Gore, promoted into the 7th brigade, and has been succeeded in command of A battery depot Royal Horse Artillery by Captain F. S. Talbot, from 25th brigade. Colonel J. E. Michell, C.B., Royal Horse Artillery, has been selected for appointment to the staff of the Indian army as Brigadier general for five years. On his recent promotion from the Royal Horse Artillery Major E. G. Battiscombe has been appointed to the command of G battery 1st brigade, Royal Artillery, at Aldershot, Captain F. J. Mortimer of E battery 9th brigade succeeding him in C battery D brigade. There is a report at Woolwich that a decision has been come to to increase the establishment of general officers of the Royal Artillery in April next, in accordance with the recent recommendation of the Royal commission on army promotion. Colonel G. Shaw, Royal Artillery, has been selected to receive a dietinguished service reward, vacant through the appointment of Major General Sir D. E. Wood, K.C.B., to be a colonel commandant in the Royal Artillery.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-GEN. S. T. CHRISTIE, C.B.—This Indian veteran who died a few days ago, had seen considerable active service with his regiment, the 80th Foot, in India. He served with the 80th throughout the Burmese war of 1852-53, and he commanded the storming party at the capture of Martaban, and was present at the operations before Rangoon on the 12th, 13th, and 14th of April. On the last-named day he commanded the skirmishers in front of the light guns during the advance on Rangoon, and was with the storming party at the capture of the great Dagon Pagodas. He was also present at the capture of Prome, and for his services on that occasion received the special thanks of the Governor-General of India in Council. He also commanded the flank companies of his regiment at the affair of the stockades on the heights opposite Prome, 12th November, 1842; and also at the repulse of the night attack, for which services he obtained the brevet of lieutenant-colonel. He was actively employed in the Indian campaign of 1858-59, when he commanded a movable column in the Futtehpore district during the siege of Lucknow, and was engaged with the enemy on the banks of the Jumna on March 5, 1858. He also commanded a field force detached from the commander-in-chief's camp during the latter part of the campaign in Oude; was wounded on Dec. 23, 1858, and had a horse shot under him. For his gallant services during the mutiny he was made a Companion of the Order of the Bath. He received a medal for Pegu and also for the Indian Mutiny. He was one of the general officers receiving rewards for meritorious services.

H.M.'s TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Jumna, Capt. D'Arcy, left Portsmouth on Oct. 18 for Bombay, calling en route at Plymouth. She embarked at Portsmouth the head-quarters and C and D Batteries of the B Brigade, R.H.A., from Woolwich, consisting of Lieuts. Tupper and Wilkinson, Capts. Hutchinson, Murray, and Magenis, Lieuts. Parsons, Clarke, Chapman, Stephenson, Baker, Hussey, and

At Plymouth the Junna will embark Sub.-Lieut. Seton Burne, 2nd Bat. 16th Regt., and Major Stirling, Capt. Palliser, Lieut. Riddell, Vet.-Surg. Burton, and B Bat. B Brig., R.H.A. The troops now on passage to India are directed to touch at Gibraltar and Malta "for orders."

The Dutch East Indian Budget.—(The Hague, Oct. 13.)—The

THE DUTCH EAST INDIAN BUDGET .- (THE HAGUE, Oct. 13.)-The oreliminary report of the Committee of the Second Chamber upon the East Indian Budget for 1877 has been distributed. The financial question is (but not the war cost) discussed, more especially with regard to the future. It is observed that the revenue does not increase in proportion to the ordinary expenditure. In order to make up the sum of 10,000,000 florins (the contribution of the Dutch East Indies in the mother country), more than 7½ millions have had to be appropriated from the surpluses of previous years, so that of the latter there now only remains a sum of 6,000,000 florins available for the extraordinary public works commenced in the East Indian colonies. As the receipts depend in great measure upon the Colonial produce, and the variable price of coffee, and as this year the amount to be sold in Holland already exceeds by 80,000 piculs that of former years, it is feared that difficulty will be experienced in balancing the Budget for 1878. Hence the Minister is urged to effect economies in the Indian expenditure, and to seek means of increasing the revenue. Disapproval is expressed at the Minister only having balanced the Budget by increasing the amount of coffee to be sold in Holland, and some members during the debate in Committee advocated the diminution of this amount. On the other hand, a desire was manifested to raise the estimated price of the coffee to 49 cents per half-kilogramme. Respecting the war in Atchin, several members asked the Government to give publicity to the documents communicated two years ago to the States-General.—Oct. 19.—The Minister for the Colonies, replying to the report of the bureaux of the Chamber upon the Indian Budget, said his policy would be one of moderate progress favouring increased educational facilities, an improvement in the means of communication, and an equilibrium between revenue and expenditure. He declared that the publication of all official documents relating to Atchin would at the present time be inopportune. The original instructions given respecting the line of conduct to be pursued in Atchin remained intact.

Chartered Mercantile Bank of India, London, and China.—The half-yearly meeting of the shareholders was held on the 17th inst., at 65, Old Broad-street, Mr. George G. Nicol in the chair. The Chairman said that the report and accounts having been issued some time before, and that being an interim meeting, it was not necessary for him to say much, especially as the shareholders were no doubt satisfied with the result of the last half-year's working. They had passed through a trying period, but on the whole the result had quite equalled their expectations. Of course the shareholders were too sensible to expect two such successful half-years together; but he trusted that the aggregate profit of the year to be announced in April next would be satisfactory. The figures in the accounts now presented were about the same as usual. last meeting he stated that, the capital being fixed in their books at the par exchange of 2s., they did not see any reason to alter that arrangement. But, in addition to their capital, they had large amounts always outstanding, consisting mainly of deposits. These amounts always outstanding, consisting mainly of deposits. of course were gold liabilities, but full provision was made for them, so that in the event of their having to be returned the bank would sustain no loss by exchange. Their position in the books was such that if at the present time they had to be brought home there would be a substantial profit. There could be no liability to loss would be a substantial profit. There could be no liability to loss except on capital, and he hoped that liability would very soon disappear, the present state of the exchanges not being likely to be permanent. He could scarcely give the man idea of the prospects of the Bank for the current half-year. They were labouring under some disadvantages, and two in particular. The stoppage of telegraphic communication with China and the Straits during the last four months had been a very serious hindrance to them, and had in some instances caused not only disappointment but loss. Another disadvantage was the uncertain manner in which the Indian Council conducted their financial operations. When a large amount had to be drawn upon India it was done in what they in the City considered an unsatisfactory manner, and he hoped the mistakes which had shaken public confidence would not be repeated. On the other hand, they had elements in their favour. Cheap money was always a great advantage to them, and the working of the Bank was in a very satisfactory train. After a short discussion the proceedings terminated.

TELEGRAPHS.—From the traffic return of the Telegraph Department for the year 1875-76 we see that there was an increase over the previous year in the number of messages sent of 69,978, of which 12,455 were sent by the State, and 57,523 by private persons. This shows an increase of 15.38 per cent. in the number of inland State messages, and of 43.67 in foreign State messages, and of 7:38 in private inland, and 8:37 in private foreign messages. The principal causes of increase of State messages were, we are told, the tour of the Prince of Wales, the Delhi Camp of Exercise, political affairs at Mandalay and Baroda, and cholera reports. On this the Government of India remarks that "the extended use of the telegraph by the various Departments of Govern ment is an indication of its increasing value for administrative purposes, and, within reasonable limits, such extended use is unobjectionable.

Scenes at the Lunatic Asylum .- A few weeks ago we mentioned that Dr. Nanney, the Superintendent of the Lunatic Asylum at Madras, had informed Government that he had no room in the Asylum strong enough to confine a powerful European man in a state of frenzy. About that time a lunatic gunner had broken up his table and made a club of one of the legs, had sprung up to the ventilator, like a cat, and had forced a passage for himself through the roof. Then he appeared before the Superintendent's house, threatening to murder everybody, and the ordinary attendants were afraid to in-Fortunately he bethought himself of a feud he had with another furious maniac confined in another part of the compound, and went off to have it out with him. While the two were roaring at went off to have it out with him. While the two were roaring at each other like two wild beasts, the Superintendent and keepers managed to secure the escaped madman. Since that time, we understand the maniacal gunner has been under a military guard, and it was therefore with much surprise that the Superintendent, while about to get into a carriage where his wife was seated, last Monday saw this man rush up to him flourishing the post of a bed and calling upon him to prepare for eternity. Dr. Nanney managed to "fix him with his eye" while he expostulated with him on the ingratitude of his conduct towards one who had always been kind to him, and the man desisted, obviously only for the moment, to explain that, while he admitted the Doctor's kindness, he (the Doctor) had listened to bad advice respecting him. During this time the keepers had been gathering courage, and half-a-dozen or more rushing upon him at once, and seizing him by the neck and waist, managed to bear him to the ground and tie him down with ropes. The poor man was then handcuffed with his hands behind his back; but since that time then nandcuried with his hands behind his back; but since that time a special contrivance for pinioning him with less pain to himself has been adopted. It appears that his two military guards had assisted him out of confinement, and gone off with him to drink, and that the frenzy that was so near resulting in murder was partly due to arrack and partly to madness! The guards will, of course, be tried by court-martial. It is quite evident that Locock's Gardens are not at present suited for the reception of such patients, and it may be doubted whether the bungalow situated in the midst of the patients! quarters is a proper place of residence for a Superintendent with wife and children.—Madras Times, Sept. 15.

Summary and Revielv.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, are—from Bombay, October 9; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, October 7; Calcutta. October 6.

Of the scanty news received by this mail much has been anticipated by the telegraph. Even the newspaper accounts of the fatal explosion in the Hughli add little of any importance to the details already published in our columns. Nor is there anything new to tell about the object of Colonel Colley's mission to Khelat. He left Simla on October 2, accompanied by Major Upperton as interpreter, to arrange, so it was supposed, for a meeting of the Khan with the Viceroy. On the 7th they had got as far as Jacobabad. Much surprise was felt in many quarters at the despatch of a fresh mission, while Major Sandeman was still at Khelat. As the Pioneer remarks—

It is impossible that Colonel Colley can have been sent to supersede Major Sandeman in any way, and some of the indignation which has been expressed at Simla at an arrangement supposed, erroneously as we believe, to cast a slur on that very deserving officer, seems to some extent misdirected. It is a subject of regret, indeed, that there should be room for misconception of the kind. Why the Viceroy's letter could not have been transmitted through Major Sandeman, we fail to understand. Mere ceremonial might have given way in a case of this kind.

THE latest mail news from Western India foreshadows the announcements since telegraphed home concerning the scarcity in store for Dharwar and the Southern Maratha country, part of Mysor and North Arkot; and official reports add Khandesh, Nasik and the Dakhan to the list. This extensive district occupies part of the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, and will be a source of much anxiety to both Governments.

Mr. Weld's case has provoked much angry and not quite unreasonable comment in Madras circles. The facts of the case, to which we referred more briefly in a former number, appear to be as thus stated in the Madras papers. A Brahman saniasi, or monk, was buried on the bank of a tank from which some of the drinking water of the cholera-stricken population of Negapatam is taken. On hearing of this Mr. Weld, the Head Assistant to the Collector, insisted upon the body's removal, on the ground of danger to the public health. The family appealed to the Collector, Mr. Thomas, but that officer supported his subaltern's views; and the latter having been advised by the station surgeon that the presence of the body would foul the water of the tank, issued a peremptory order to the son of the deceased monk to exhume and remove his father's corpse within a week, otherwise it would be removed on behalf of Government, and buried in Hathaway's Park. This order was duly obeyed, and the body was re interred by the relatives with all ceremony. Hathaway's Park, it seems, is a large place, containing a native burning-ground as well as a town sewage-farm. Interpreting Mr. Weld's order as a gross insult, the dead man's relatives complained to the Government. The latter took their view of the case, and Mr. Weld was suspended from office for two months. English opinion in Madras at once began to rage against the Government. Mr. Weld was generally picied as a martyr, and the sympathy shown for him is not, we think, wholly undeserved. But that threat of burial in Hathaway's Park goes far to justify the Governor's action.

The opening of the railway bridge over the Narbada by Maharajah Holkar on the 5th October was followed by a lunch—Indice tiffin. General Daly presided on this occasion, and by express desire of Holkar proposed the health of those who had been engaged on the work, which he characterised as the most splendid bridge in India. He then proposed the health of Holkar. In the course of his speech, he gave a whole history of the railway, and told how, when out hunting with his Highness, the latter had asked by what means the railway could be accomplished, and how General Daly had said, "You have millions to spare, lend Government a million and they will do it." The very next morning Holkar, it seems, sent for General Daly and offered to advance the money—and as the result Holkar was present when Lord Northbrook laid the foundation stone of the bridge, and had now just put the finishing stroke to the work himself. General Daly was sorry that Lord Lytton could not come, but he had sent a telegram congratulating Holkar, and promising to visit the bridge on the first opportunity. His Highness though present, being too ill to reply, his Chief Justice answered for him, and gave great credit to all the engineers and others employed. He thanked Lord Lytton for the telegram, believing he was a Viceroy who took a keen interest in all works which united the Native States with the British Government.

It is said that Mr. James Colquhoun Colvin, Magistrate and Collector of Alighar, in the North-West Provinces, who arrived in India in April, 1855, purposes accepting the commuted pension offered by the Secretary of State as a sop to the distressed Civil Service. According to the Pioneer, the names of Messrs. Chase, Clifford, Turner, and Boulderson are "whispered in accents of hope by junior civilian lips in the same connection. With the retirements on the ordinary terms, some announced, some expected in the course of the coming cold season, these extraordinary movements would give ten welcome steps to the service."

SEVERAL appointments in the North-west are in course of re-arrangement. Mr. McConaghey, Settlement Officer of Muttra, goes to Banda as Magistrate and Collector, and Mr. Wall thence to Aligarh. As the revenue affairs of Banda are supposed to require special attention just now, this appointment may be justified by the public interest, although Mr. McConaghey passes over a good many of his seniors.

WE learn that Lieut. Okeden, of the 60th Rifles, has been appointed to officiate as A.D.C. to the Lieutenant Governor of the North-West, Mr. Spence having rejoined his regiment. Dengue is very prevalent in Lucknow among the residents, and especially among the men of H.M.'s 65th Regiment. Colonel Malleson's services have been placed at the disposal of the Military Department, which means, we suppose, that Captain Wilson's appointment as guardian of the Mysor Prince has been made "pucka."

It appears that very satisfactory results have already been obtained in the treatment of cholera, by the use of salicylic acid, which was introduced into India by Surgeon Major Boustead, of the Bombay Army, some months ago. The remedy has been tried lately in Kashmir, and the natives apparently prefer it to every other mode of treatment offered. In answer to correspondents, Dr. Boustead has replied that half a grain for each year of age of the patient is a safe dose to be administered by a non-professional person; but that this dose can be exceeded every hour, if administered under the supervision of a medical man. He adds that it occasionally requires the admixture of a dose of opium, when vomiting and purging are very excessive, and that the acid, or salicylate of soda may have to be administered under the skin.

THE Government Resolution published in the Gazette of India for September 22 is certainly a masterpiece of clear and cogent reasoning on a subject beset with difficulties. It sets forth in the plainest language the evils public and private caused by "the present depression of silver relatively to gold." For that depression five different reasons are offered for our choice. (1), The value of gold being unchanged, the value of silver is fallen; (2), the value of silver being unchanged, the value of gold is risen; (3), the value of gold is risen, and the value of silver is fallen; (4), the value of both metals is risen; but the value of gold is risen more than that of silver; (5), the value of both metals is fallen, but the value of silver is fallen more than that of gold. Most of the proposals hitherto made in Calcutta start with assuming the truth of the first hypothesis. The Indian Government however hold that—

The divergence now noticeable in the values of gold and silver does not necessarily prove a diminution in the value of silver. It may be equally well accounted for by a rise in the value of gold; and, in fact, it is probable that, since the commencement of this divergence in November, 1872, there has been an increase in the value of gold as well as a decrease in the value of silver. The actual values, measured in silver, of general commodities, whether in India or in England, afford, as yet, no evidence of any recent, sudden, or violent fall in the value of silver; and, if a priori considerations strongly indicate that silver must have fallen, such considerations also make it probable that gold must have risen, in value.

The tables of prices in London and in India during this century are appended to the Resolution, as warranting these conclusions:—(1.) That gold has risen in value since March, 1873, and especially since last December. (2.) That it is not shown that silver has fallen in value, i.e., as compared with commodities in general, either in London or in India, during the same period.

Or the three causes fairly assignable for the recent divergence in the values of the two metals, namely, 1, the substitution of a gold for a silver standard of value by Germany, the Netherlands, and the Scandinavian Kingdom, and a virtual movement in the countries of the Latin Convention towards the same goal; 2, the increased production of silver in the United States of America; and 3, the decreased demand for silver in India; the first appears to the Government of India to have been, thus far, the most efficient. The old equilibrium between the two metals "has been disturbed by the recent rapid supersession of silver by gold, as the standard of value, in the richer countries in Europe; a fact calculated, a priori, to raise the value of gold no less than to depress the value of silver." With regard to the other two causes it is argued that the American mines have not hitherto done much, and are still less likely now to do much towards bringing down the value of silver measured in gold; and that the decreased demand for silver in India is merely a return to the natural state of things in that country. It is true that, "if the abnormal demand of the seventeen years, 1855 to 1872, had been permanently maintained, it would have favourably affected the values of the precious metals; but it is not certain that even such a demand would have greatly raised the value of silver relatively to gold; and its recurrence can only be anticipated if money should again be borrowed largely from abroad, either by the Government or otherwise." In view of the uncertainty as to the future relative value of the two metals, the Government believe that "if loans be no longer raised in England, the excess of the export over the import trade of India will not more than suffice to meet the obligations arising from the Secretary of State's demands and those of private remitters; and there consequently appears no reason to expect that India will be flooded with depreciated silver." All things considered, the Government have arrived at the conclusions summarised in our last number. In other words, they have made up their minds to do nothing, convinced that for the present nothing can be done. If they are right in the premises, we cannot quarrel with the decision founded on them. But are they right in assuming that the present crisis springs from a rise in the relative value of gold?

In dealing with the proposal of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce to restrict the coinage of rupees, the Indian Government describe it as a plan for "enhancing indefinitely the value of the rupee," and so bringing about a fall in prices which would involve "an unjustifiable interference with private interests." A monopoly would thus be created, under which the mint stamp of the Government would give an artificial value to every piece of coined silver, while India would be left without any metallic standard of value. But there can be no sound system of currency which is not "automatic."

No man, or body of men, can ascertain whether, at any particular moment, the interests of the community, as a whole, require an increase or diminution of the currency; still less, how much increase or how much decrease is, at any moment, exactly needed. No Government which aspires to keep its currency in a sound condition would be justified in attempting that impossible task; or in leaving the community, even for a short interval, without a fixed metallic standard of value. Under an "open coinage system," these things regulate themselves without official interference. The Chamber is reminded that all those States which have lately abandoned silver as a standard have forthwith adopted a gold standard. When Germany ceased to coin silver she opened her mints to gold. So did the Netherlands and the Scandinavian Kingdoms. "The case of the countries associated under the name of the Latin Convention is not different in principle; their standard was alternative, either silver or gold, according as gold was worth more or less than fifteen and a half times its weight in silver. These countries have now suspended the free coinage of silver, and so reverted for the time being to a sole gold standard; but none of them, except those whose currency is inconvertible paper, have been for a day without a fixed metallic standard of value."

So much for the Bengal Chamber's specific demand. Had the Chamber gone a little further, had it asked, as it ought to have done, for a restricted coinage of silver supplemented by the introduction of a gold coinage, a different answer would have had to be given.

Such a recommendation would not have been open to the objections that appear to the Governor-General in Council fatal, in limine, to the adoption of the Resolution actually advocated by the Chamber, viz., to close the mints, temporarily, to the free coinage of the one metal into legal-tender money, without simultaneously opening them to the free coinage of the other into legal tender money.

At the same time the Viceroy in Council sees "nothing, as yet, in the nature of existing circumstances," however unpleasant, which calls for recourse to "a measure so costly, and of which all the requisite conditions are at present so uncertain." This, to our thinking, is the least satisfactory part of the resolution. The need of a gold currency for India has long been urged by good judges, and the various ways of meeting that need have from time to time been pointed out. The Viceroy himself in this very Minute allows it to be "most desirable in the interests of trade, that the standard of value in India should be the same as the standard of value in the chief countries with which India interchanges commodities." But the demand so often repeated from so many quarters, including the Indian Mints themselves, still finds no better answer than the one here given. The Indian Government eats its lotus and lets things slide.

Under the authority of the Secretary of State for India the Viceroy has conferred the honorary rank of Lieutenant in the 1st Bengal Cavalry on Mr. A. Van C. Skinner, a descendant of the Colonel Skinner who gave his name to Skinner's Horse, now known as the 1st Bengal Cavalry. Lieutenant Skinner, it seems, will not be attached to the regiment for duty, but will be borne on the returns as an Honorary Lieutenant, and be permitted to wear the uniform of the regiment.

THE Times' Calcutta correspondent telegraphed yesterday that the accounts from the distressed districts in Bombay are somewhat better. The Collector of Nasik says that he does not anticipate famine in that district, but that there is a great scarcity of water, grass, and crops. He thinks the supply of grain will be sufficient, and though prices are rising, he hopes that actual famine will be avoided, and recommends a remission of rents in proportion to the district. The Governor has acceded The Collector of Dharwar reports heavy rain, which may tend to preserve the cattle, although the crops are probably beyond recovery. On the other hand, there is no improvement in prospects in Sholapur or Puna, and Belgaum is added to the list of distressed districts. The Bombay papers state that there is great suffering already in Sholapur, and famine prices are fast becoming the rule. Cattle are selling from two to four annas a head, owing to the difficulty of keeping them alive. There is a great want of water. The Government is ordering relief works, and an irrigation canal for Sholapur is proposed. Madras reports are also gloomy. The Collector of Kaddapah states that the rainfall has been scanty, and the crops are poor where there is not a total failure Much distress is apprehended. The Collector of North Arkot reports that there is some distress already, but matters are not yet hopeless if rain should fall soon. The Collector of Karnul reports the prevalence of distress and an alarming increase of crime. The Collector of Bellary also reports a failure of the crops, and great distress. Relief grants have been sanctioned for all these districts. It is stated that the Bangalor and Mysor Railway will be commenced as a relief work.

THE same informant contradicts his previous statement that the Delhi assemblage would cost half a million sterling. This rumour, though widely current, he now, "on the best authority," declares to be quite untrue. A committee has been sitting at Simla for the last two months settling every detail, financial and otherwise, with great care. The Viceroy and others will entertain all their guests at their own expense. It is believed that the total public charges will not exceed onefourth of the sum reported. On the same authority he adds that no pressure has been put on the chiefs to attend, and that those in debt or in poor circumstances will even be prevented from going, although they may be anxious to be present. The Nizam will attend by his own wish. He will pass through Allahabad on the way to Delhi on the 18th of December.

FROM the same quarter we learn that the Yarkand Envoy will go as the Viceroy's guest. He is now staying at Patiala. Several native gentlemen of Calcutta have been invited through the Bengal Government. Orders have been issued that Darbars be held in every district in Bengal on the 1st of January. The Zamindar of each district will attend. A sealed proclamation will be sent to each Collector, which will be opened and read on the occasion. It is generally supposed that these proclamations will not be confined to the Queen's new title, but will announce some new policy regarding a more extensive employment of natives in the public service. The report that the Secretary of State has ordered certain offices to be entirely officered by natives is now contradicted. The Government is still considering the question of their admission to the civil service on other than the present terms.

THE following items have also been telegraphed to the Times:

In Khelat Colonel Sandeman has made favourable arrangements between the Khan and the Sirdars, which the Government hopes will prevent further rebellion and disturbance. Colonel Colley has taken a letter from the Viceroy to the Khan, relating to certain points of these arrangements, and to arrange a meeting between the Viceroy and the Khan at Jacobadad early in December.

Colonel Macdonald, Deputy Superintendent of the Revenue Survey, in reviewing a book by Colonel Thuillier, the head of the Department, mentioned some grave errors found in the Khandeish survey. For writing this article the Government has suspended Colonel Macdonald for three months and reduced him several steps. This and other matters recently brought to light show that a searching inquiry should be made into the working of that Department.

I have mentioned in previous letters that two Mohammedan meetings of sympathy with Turkey have been held in Calcutta, at the second of which sympathy with Turkey have been heat in Calcatea, as the second of which it was resolved that the proceedings of the first were disapproved by the community. The supporters of the first meeting now allege that only seven persons, all Shias, were present at the second meeting, which was held in a private house, and that they had no right to put forward their views as those of Indian Mohammedans, who are chiefly Sunnies. Several angry letters on the subject have appeared in the papers. One writer warns his co-religionists that it is an act of indirect disloyalty to subscribe when the British Government is neutral, and advises them to leave the task of assisting the Turks to the Mohammedans of Persia and Cabul.

WE are glad to learn that a further concession has just been made by the India Office to those officers who elected to abide by the Furlough Rules of 1868 before the 1st July, 1871. The previous concession allowed them to claim Furlough Pay at the old rate of two shillings the rupee only from the 5th April, 1876; it has now however been decided to give this arrangement a retrospective effect, so that all officers who accepted the old rules before the changes introduced in 1871 can now claim the difference between the pay they have since drawn on furlough at the reduced rate and the amount to which they were entitled under the rules of 1868. Lord Salisbury and his Council have done well in thus repairing the injustice which their former concession brought all the more clearly into view.

THE writer of a letter to the Times, on which we lately commented with approval, has since embodied that letter in a pamphlet on "Turkey and India, or Our Indian Moslems, published by Messrs. Ridgway. The main argument of the letter, that we have nothing to fear for India from any line of policy which we may be tempted to follow in respect of Turkey in Europe, is developed in the pamphlet with much force of reasoning founded on pertinent facts. The author, an Indian civil officer who played his part in the mutiny, holds that the mutiny was more of a political than a religious movement, that we have no cause to fear a repetition of what proved "a grand political failure," that the Indian Moslems are generally content with a rule which leaves them free to follow their own ways, and that they have no power of coherence as a religious whole, owing to the mutual hatreds of the leading sects and the Hinduized character of the popular religion. It is hard indeed to say how large a proportion of them belong to the Shiah sect, which bears no love to its Sunni rival; but he is probably right in thinking the former to be much more numerous than the census returns might lead one to suppose. We should have liked to see some reference to the Wahabis whose fanaticism would always be a source of danger, if their numbers and influence were equal to their zeal for the cause of the Prophet.

MESSRS. HARRISON have just published a second series of Captain Kinloch's very valuable and interesting work, entitled " Large Game Shooting in Thibet and the North-West." is a record of the various incidents which occurred during the author's several hunting expeditions, and contains descriptions of the country, illustrated by faithful portraits of the different animals to be found in this portion of the globe, executed by the photo-tint process. The first series (published a few years since) is, we understand, nearly out of print.

NEWS FROM THE ARABIAN COAST .- The Nizam of Haidarabad has been assisting with men and money for some years past, with the knowledge of the Resident and the acquiescence of Sir Bartle Frere, the Chief of Shahar on the South Eastern coast of Arabia, in his attacks on the Chief of Makallah, who will probably be soon subjugated and an Indo-Arabian State established on that coast.

ACCIDENT TO LADY SOUTER.—The amateur theatricals that were announced to take place had to be nipped when they were somewhat more than in the bud. The preparations for a representation of "School" had been actively carried on, when their career was suddenly blighted by the order for the departure of some of the would-be performers. I regret, however, to have to state that even if the performance had not been put off by the Governor's intended departure an accident which happened yesterday (September 26) in the hunting field would have effectually marred the success of the piece. Lady Souter's horse, while walking over slippery ground, and passing through a narrow passage between rocks, fell and trod upon its rider, who was very much hurt, but no anticipation of serious consequences is entertained. It is not long since Miss Cameron was for some time laid up from the effects of a fall from her horse, and we have become quite accustomed to seeing ladies and gentlemen walk about with their arms in slings after the manner of disabled heroes, and Amazonian heroines; it is merely a question whether the casualty is caused by hunting or rinking. Accidents, however, have not a tendency to daunt the fair riders, for as soon as the sling is discarded they are in the saddle again; perhaps they argue that having paid their footing in the hunting-field by a fall or two they are safe for the future.—Ootacamund Correspondent of the Madras

INDIAN LEGISLATION.—Amongst the curiosities of official literature, late Guzettes of India have contained some instructive lists. It is often alleged that one law member comes to India to undo the work of his predecessor, and the next to undo his. The lists referred to are chronological tables of the Acts of the Governor-General in Council. The table for India extends from 1834 to 1876, and it shows in a striking manner the instability of Indian legislation. In 1835 there were 21 Acts passed; of these 19 have been repealed, and the other two partly so. In 1836 there were 32 Acts, all of which are repealed except two in part. 1837 shows 38 Acts—three bits left. 1838 had 32 Acts, of which five fragments remain. 1839 had the same number with equal relics. 1840 shows less activity; 25 Acts, of which seven scraps remain. 1841 had 31 births; 12 bits remain as law or "in suspension." Of the legislation of 1842-43-44, scarcely a vestige remains. Of the following year's work, there is one scrap left, we think. Up to 1850 similar results are shown. In that year there was abnormal activity—45 Acts, of which there remains next to nothing. The next five years produced 153 Acts, of which there are left nothing. The next five years produced 153 Acts, of which there are left a few sections only. The next five years were still more prolific, with very slight remainders, and it is not a little singular, nor perhaps astonishing, slight remainders, and it is not a little singular, nor perhaps astonishing, that of these remains, a fair proportion is law relating to lunatics. In the years from 1860 to 1865 there was a slight falling off in legislative activity, being only about 29 Acts per annum. There are rather more scraps of these works left; but they are not numerous. The same rate was continued during the next five years; but the evidences of cobbling and patching are far more numerous. About half of them have been repealed altogether, and the rest in part. The last five years show a diminution of activity as regards production, the average being only 25 Acts per annum. Whether the work has been better done may be open to question. Of 33 Whether the work has been better done may be open to question. Of 33 Acts passed in 1871 all but four have since been repealed, wholly or in part. Of 27 passed in 1872, six remain unrepealed, one of them being an Act to define the word "coin" in the Penal Code. Of the work of 1873, consisting of 20 Acts, all have been repealed in part, except four, one of which refers to the Nawab Nizam's debts, and another to the one of which refers to the Nawab Nizam's debts, and another to the Prince of Arcot. In 1874 there were 16 Acts, the first of which relates to "Quieting Titles." This Act is said to be "spent," and so it may be assumed there is an end of it. Six are repealed wholly or in part, and one of them has been nibbled at three times, but is not yet slain. The wisdom distilled last year amounted to 21 Acts, of which one was repealed the same year, two since, and six partly so. The same process seems to have been gone through as regards the Madras Acts and Regulations, of which the list appears in the last Gazette. This instability of legislation may be variously read; and we leave our readers to draw their own conclusions. Ours are that there is anything but supreme wisdom embodied in the enactments; and they show ample grounds upon which legal members might fairly modify their pretentions to have everything their own way, and to hold the opinion and experience of others in supreme contempt.

WE are now enabled to give our readers a correct list of all officers retired up to date, under G.O. No. 1 of 1876:-

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MONDAY, October 30, 1876.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

A CORRESPONDENT informs a Bombay journal that the men and women of the Mohammedan creed in Baroda seemed to have been thrown into a ferment by a paragraph which lately appeared in the columns of some Urdu weekly of that or the sister presidency. The paragraph in question announced that the orthodox leaders of Islam had received letters from the wise men of Mecca containing certain predictions relative to the birth of Imam-Mahdi (the supposed harbinger of the millennium) after twenty-two months. The visible signs of his birth are to be that for two consecutive months the days will be indiscernible from the nights; a general holy war will take place throughout the world; and the present hostilities in Rum are said to be evidently one of the precursors of the Imam's birth. At Bhosawal also it was rumoured that a Maulvi had lately received a copy of an Arabic note from one of his friends in Madras, stating that Imam-Mahdi will make his appearance in the month of Jamadulsane, 1295, Hijra, "when Israfil will proclaim that the last day of judgment is come, and the Massieh (Christ) would descend from Heaven." This letter had caused "a great deal of excitement" amongst the Mohammedan community of the station; and a special prayer meeting was held in the Jamma Masjid every Friday. The Imam Mahdi thus referred to is the last of the twelve Imams, or successors of the Prophet, of whom Ali, his son-in-law, was, according to the Shia sect of Mussulmans, the first. twelfth in their reckoning was Abu Kasim, who is supposed to be still alive, hidden somewhere, like the German Kaiser Barbarossa, until the moment when, as the Imam-Mahdi (or Director) he will reappear to convert all nations to the worship of the true Allah. The orthodox or Sunni Moslems on the other hand deny the identity of Abu Kasim with the Imam-Mahdi whose coming in the last days was foretold by Mahomet himself. The Hindus also have their Imam-Mahdi in the tenth Avatar of Vishnu, who is to reappear some day, seated on a white horse, as the destroyer of a sinful world, and the restorer of peace and righteousness on earth; but as yet we hear nothing of his expected advent.

INDIAN EXCHANGE.

[COMMUNICATED.]

To any one accustomed to consider the causes by which rates of exchange are influenced, it ought to be by this time abundantly clear that the long-continued and latterly extreme de pression of rates between Ind and this country has been caused chiefly by the heavy drawing of Council Bills, and not, as is generally supposed, by the increased supply of silver, and further, that there cannot be any material or permanent improvement either in rates of exchange or the market for silver so long as heavy drawing is continued. Under ordinary circumstances the rate for Council B . - should be determined by the price of silver in this country and the rate of exchange ruling in India, but as the amount for which the Indian Council is open to craw is so large in proportion of the whole amount of exchange arising from the Indian trade, the position of the Council becomes virtually that of a forced seller, as there cannot be demand for any considerable amount of Council Bills except on terms more favourable for the buyer than could be obtained either by drawing on England or transmitting silver to India. Hence the low course of exchange that has been ruling with only slight variation since the monetary crisis of 1866, up to the present year, when a further depression was caused by the decline in the price of silver owing to increased supplies of that metal; but this decline was aggravated and confirmed by the continued drawing of Council Bills, the effect of which upon the silver market has been a forced depression of the basis on which the rate of exchange should be fixed. Hence also the anomaly of a heavy and regularly sustained demand for remittance to India by Council Bills, when in accordance with the usual theory in regard to the balance of trade the real demand should have been not for outward, but wholly for homeward remit-

Digitized by GOOSIC

The difficulty of the position, so far as the Government is concerned, lies not only in the large amount of funds to be obtained from India, but also in the course that for years past has been followed to effect the transmission; because, if it is really the case that the consequences of heavy drawing have been as above stated, it must be a grave mistake to assume that there can be little or no material difference between the operation of drawing in England for the whole amount required and that of drawing only for one half and having the other half remitted from India. Regarded as a question of exchange balances, there would, in theory, be no difference in results between the operation of drawing for money at one end and that of having it remitted from the other; but in actual practice, more especially where large amounts are involved, the results as affecting rates of exchange must be widely different.

Such being the case, it would appear that the policy formerly followed by the Court of Directors, of operating at both ends, would cause far less pressure upon the exchange market than that which was subsequently adopted, and still continues, of drawing for the whole amount of requirements at one end, and also that the particular course of operation has become of much greater consequence than ever it was before, seeing that the amount involved is increased from three or four to fifteen millions. Looking, therefore, to the present position of matters and the probable consequences of decided action, the most prudent course that could be adopted would be to revert to the former practice of double operation, and to stop drawing on India for at least six months, so that exchange and silver markets may have sufficient time to recover from the unusual pressure to which they have been subjected.

TURKS AND RUSSIANS. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir,—It is curious to observe with what eagerness the Philo-Turks have taken up Mr. Schuyler's account of the Russian cavalry charge in Turkistan, while they entirely reject his report of the far more recent barbarities of the Turks in Bulgaria, although having been obliged to leave Russia at the instance of her Government, and been consequently accredited to the Porte, he had every reason to look with more favourable eyes on a Turkish deed of violence. Mr. Macgahan of the Daily News was also present on both occasions, and though he is less severe on the Russians in Turkistan, he agreed with Mr. Schuyler in denying the smallest attempt at a rising in Bulgaria to justify the wholesale massacres, and how could they rise without arms? This outery against Russia. is only intended to make us undertake another war for the support of Turkish barbarity; but it would be well if the public would remember how ill our last effort to prop up the chief seat of Islamism was rewarded by the outbreak of Mahometan fanaticism in India before our troops had left the Crimea a twelvemonth. The late Duke of Wellington considered the destruction of the Turkish Government in Europe (in 1822) a small misfortune compared to a possible war between Russia and Austria, and if he had been alive in 1854 we should never have been drawn by Napoleon III., into the most unprofitable Crimean War. The history of the Eastern crisis in 1822 (see Joyneville's "Life and Times of Alexander I. of Russia") is a curious study now, and explains the difficulties which beset the present Czar, for his uncle was plunged into precisely the same for five years before his death, and the crisis was only postponed by negotiations, but not really disposed of till the emancipation of Greece in 1827. Yet Alexander I. had the advantage over his nephew of having been a successful warrior, and come triumphantly out of a long European war; while Alexander II. has alienated the nobles by emancipating their serfs, and has also a large free half-educated population to contend against, who still smart under the defeats and restrictions imposed on them twenty years ago. If the one was forced against his personal desire for peace to prepare for war with Turkey at the very time of his death, we can hardly be surprised if the other has been also obliged to yield to the demand of his Empire.

THE SALT-TAX.—III.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—In France the tax on foreign imported salt was estitimated to yield this year twenty one millions of francs. Is it possible that M. Shaw Lefevre can be correct in stating before the Social Science Congress that salt is not now exported from England to France?

The duty imposed on it (salt) in France is 150 per cent. on its value in the Atlantic ports, and 50 per cent. in the Mediterranean ports. This is practically prohibitive, and no salt is exported hence to France.—Times of the 18th October.

You will find the official Report regarding the salt-tax in India in pages 18 to 21 of the "Statement of Moral and Material Progress," published this month, and reviewed in your paper of the 23rd inst.

The Government congratulates itself on the fact of an increase in the quantity of salt which paid duty in Bengal, and in the amount of tax realised. As shown by me in a former letter, this increase must be entirely attributed to cheap carriage by railway.

The system of a graduated scale of tax increasing as salt is conveyed from the Madras Presidency nearer to Calcutta, and as it is conveyed from Bombay nearer to Jubbulpore, has not been clearly explained. In page 20 of the Blue-book I read—

The aim kept in view in these arrangements was so to modify the duties on the western salt as, on the one hand, to enable it to cope with the lighter taxed eastern salt, and on the other to restrain it from too forcibly interfering with the Rajpootana salt, on which the full duty per maund was retained, and the mileage scheme seemed likely to meet the difficulty. The result has, however, somewhat disappointed expectations, for in the very first year the Bombay salt drove back the Rajpootana salt to almost half its dimensions. That portion of the former which passes up the Nerbudda Valley stops about 100 or 150 miles of Jubbulpore, so as to pay less than the maximum duty, and thence spreads itself over the field formerly occupied by the lake salt.

I presume that the merchants discharge salt from the railway carriages about half-way between Hoshungabad and Nursingpore, paying for doing so not only less carriage hire but a reduced rate of taxation. Are there any means of preventing their sending coolie loads of salt into the Jubbulpore district and thus evading payment of part of the tax? Forty pounds could be sent from Nursingpore to Jubbulpore for a shilling. It is natural that the pure Sambhur lake salt, weighted with an enormous tax, should be driven out of the Nerbudda territories.

The strong political feeling against the salt-tax, which causes so much disease at Jubbulpore and Saugor, is deep.

The remarks of the Deputy Commissioner of Sumbulpore, a town half-way between Calcutta and Nagpore, may be applied to all barriers for collecting the hated salt-tax in India. Government remarks :-

The feeling was very strong against the Customs establishments throughout the country, and the situation in Sumbulpore particularly was anything but easy. The removal of the line under these circumstances was a political gain, and the local authorities bear witness to the popular gratitude in town and country at the freedom of intercourse with the coast now open to them, and at the reduction in the duty which enables them to obtain one of the necessaries of life at smaller cost and in their own way.

their own way.

The Deputy Commissioner of Sumbulpore states that the facts prove "that the salt line simply checked traffic along all the most important "that the salt line simply checked traffic along all the most important trade routes of the country, and no measure could consequently have been better calculated to advance the general prosperity of the people than its abolition." A prolific inducement to crime has also been withdrawn, in the shape of smuggling, and of the conflicts with Government establishments consequent thereon. ments consequent thereon.

What a confession from Government at last!

Popular gratitude for small favours is a very good thing, but how is it that we find no allusion to the popular discontent in the reports of former years? The love of concealing the truth, which now imperils the well-being of our Indian Empire, is still strong in the minds of those to whom England has intrusted the duty of governing it. The popular gratitude has been elicited by the economy of Government in dispensing with the services of a horde of native official extor-Would that we could see any hope of the inhabitants of Sumbulpore ever obtaining one pound of genuine salt for one penny.-Your obedient servant, October 25.

THE VICEROY AND THE HIGH COURTS.

The Friend of India remarks that Lord Lytton's Minute in the Fuller case has raised the question of the amenability of her Majesty's Judges to censure by the Executive; and if Lord Lytton jesty's Judges to censure by the Executive; and if Lord Lytton had attempted to decide the question, when the Judges had appealed to the Secretary of State, he would have been guilty of the grossest impropriety. The Judges occupy a perfectly unique position in the Euglish Constitution. They are the only English officials, outside the Parliament, over the discharge of whose duties the Executive has no control. Though appointed by the Crown, they can neither be censured, nor removed thereby, but are amenable to Parliament only: and can be removed from office only on able to Parliament only; and can be removed from office only on the address of both Houses. By this most wise arrangement they are made independent of the Crown, although they hold office only during good behaviour; all question as to that behaviour being reserved to Parliament itself. Now Lord Lytton in the Fuller Minute assumed the right of reviewing, and of censuring the proceedings of the Judges; and the Court would have betrayed the interest in its keeping if it had not protested against the assumption of this power as a usurpation. The status of the Home Judges is well understood, and it is of great importance that the status of our Indian Judges should be ascertained and defined in the same way. Can the Supreme Government censure the Judges of the High Courts of India as Lord Lytton assumes it can? We should doubt it exceedingly. For the Viceroy to have attempted to decide the question in face of the Judges, protest, would have been an act of group impropriety. the Judges' protest, would have been an act of grave impropriety.

INDIAN AGRICULTURE.

The Englishman points out that English agriculture is a symme-The Englishman points out that English agriculture is a symmetrical system, the parts of which are mutually complementary, and dovetail nicely into one another, and it is a system which is based on a special set of social wants. Take away any one part of it, and the whole would fall to pieces. Destroy, for instance, the demand for dairy produce, and the English system of rotation of crops would cease to pay. Then, again, the perfection to which English agriculture has attained presupposes not only a good market for a certain class of products, but certain moral qualities in the farmer, and a tenure which admits of the application of large capital to the land. Let it not be supposed that we wish to depresent capital to the land. Let it not be supposed that we wish to depre-If she is only furnished with the means, science is ciate science. If she is only furnished with the means, science is as capable of bringing agriculture to perfection in India as in England; but she would, in any case, have to commence her work de novo, and enter on a careful course of observation and experiment on the spot. It is the reverse of scientific to apply to one set of conditions a system which has been constructed to meet, or rather, has grown up in harmony with, another entirely different set of conditions. We fear, however, that there is at present very little chance of the scientific method being applied to Indian agriculture, for the simple reason, to begin with, that we do not possess a class of farmers who could afford to pursue it, if they would. Besides, the results attained would almost certainly be practically useless, as being achieved under conditions which could not be generally complied with. It is of no use to show the people of the country what can be done by deep ploughing and manure, if they have neither the right sort of ploughs, nor the right sort of cattle to draw them, and if inability to pay for wood compels them to burn their manure for fuel. Additional knowledge is a superfluity where one has not the means of utilising the knowledge he already possesses; and that is really the position of the Indian rayat as regards agriculture. If he does not use manure, it is not because he does not know the value of it, but because, if he used it, he would have to starve, or eat raw food, to enable him to do so. If science will undertake to teach him how to get bumper crops without manure, he will, doubt-less, prove a willing disciple. The probability is that, with the less, prove a willing disciple. The probability is that, with the limited appliances at his disposal, he does a great deal better than the most accomplished English farmer could teach him to do; and, to instruct him as to the mode and effect of any appliances beyond his reach, is about as useful as to teach him navigation.

ENCOURAGEMENT OF TRADE.

The Bombay Gazette holds that the only clear and practical issue the Government of India has to decide is, how to improve India's When Lord Lytton's financial minute appeared, we stated our belief that the only way to do this was by Public Works moderately carried out, and that the most effectual means of throttling the struggling trade of the country were exactly those which were indicated in the minute. We are confident that if his lordship and his cated in the minute. We are confident that if his lordship and his colleagues give their attention to this useful subject much more good will be gained than by abstruse studies about the relative values of gold and silver. Unquestionably the most valuable part of the latest financial resolutions of the Government of India is that which conveys to the public the gratifying information that Lord Lytton's original intention of stopping Public Works has been abandoned, and that Government now recognises the importance of continuing to use the resources at its disposal for developing Indian trade and productions, and does not intend to discontinue borrowing for the construction of works of a thoroughly established and ing for the construction of works of a thoroughly established and remunerative character. Nor can it be doubted that it is good policy to endeavour to limit what may be called the gold debt of India, which has already to pay nearly sixteen millions sterling annually to English creditors of one description or another. The debt of India upon guaranteed railway capital alone is close upon seven millions, and this country would have a considerable sum in its pocket if the policy now indicated by the Government of India, that of raising capital in India instead of abroad, had been originally carried out. Many of our native capitalists and the wealthier of the native Princes would probably be very glad of an opportunity of obtaining four or five per cent, upon their money if the Government of India required it for the carrying out of remunerative Public Works. We therefore hail with pleasure the Government of India's willingness not only to carry out a vigorous Public Works relies instead of a goathy and cighty and list to induce Works policy instead of a costly and sickly one, but to induce capitalists in India to invest their money in schemes which have a patriotic as well as a fiscal character. It will do anything but harm to the popularity of the English Government in this country if its people, by the investment of their capital in remunerative Public will be commenced without further delay. It is of course a thousand will be commenced without further delay. times to be regretted that the Government of India and the Secretary of Staff intend to rush, with their eyes wide open, into the strategical and financial, and ultimately economical blunder of constructing the extension from Ahmedabad to Ajmere on the narrow gauge. But better have a railway of some kind in Western Raj-pootana instead of none at all, and pray let us have no more delays in carrying out one of the most important Public Works which has ever been contemplated on this side of India. Before concluding this notice of the telegraphic summary of the Government of India's latest Financial Resolutions, we may state our concurrence in the answer given by it to the Calcutta Trades' Association with respect to the desirability of purchasing stores in this country. What the Government of India has to look to is the cheapest market. If stores can be obtained in India cheaper than they can be in England, by all means let them be bought here; but in a practical matter of business of this kind mere sentimental predilections in favour of encouraging Indian manufactures should not be allowed to supersede the sound doctrine that the public should always buy in the best and chargest market. and cheapest market.

THE DEPRECIATION OF THE RUPEE.

The Englishman thinks that the last Resolution on that subject embodies a much more moderate view of the financial position, and presents much less appearance of hastiness than the previous Reso-There can be little doubt that, as surmised in the present Resolution, there is a double set of forces at work, producing the existing divergence between the values of gold and silver. The adexisting divergence between the values of gold and silver. mission that it is desirable that India should possess a gold standard, in spite of the way in which it is qualified, is a point gained. The text of the Resolution will no doubt show how this admission is harmonised with the assertion that, up to the present time, no sufficient ground exists for interfering with the standard of value. There is an obvious ellipsis; but, however it may be supplied, there is evidence, in what we have of the Resolution, that the mind of the Government is more or less in a state of suspense on the question; and, unsatisfactory as it is that this should be the case, it is better than the perverse one-sidedness characteristic of some late official utterances. The Government has evidently repented of its late fit of wasteful economy in the matter of Public Works; while we are inclined to think it is right in requiring that the money to be expended in their execution should be raised in India. With the existing uncertainty as to the future of silver, and except as part of a larger policy, any addition to the debt at home, not absolutely unavoidable, is to be deprecated.

The Pioneer observes that the financial resolution that has just been published in the Gazette of India is evidently the fruit of much patient thinking—fruit, moreover, which has been pared down a good deal by many different knives, if we may trust rumours from the mountain where it was grown. However, though some valuable reflections may have been lost in this way, the Resolution, as it stands, is all the more trustworthy as far as it goes. It now represents the essence of many opinions, its assertions are regarded as incontrovertible by many different minds. The worst of them is that they do not amount to very much. True, the theory that all this while, in spite of the general impressions on the subject, silver has not fallen in value to any great extent, measured in anything but gold, is pregnant with important lessons. But it has already been introduced to the notice of currency students, columns months ago we drew attention to this theory. We believe the Government of India has altogether the merit of having worked it out. The Silver Committee at home stumbled against it, but failed to appreciate its importance. The Government of India has tested it by means of an exhaustive comparison of prices over a long series of years. In spite of the ghastly figures which represent the value of the rupee for Anglo-Indians at present, it is proved now that the sovereign has gone up in value measured in rupees, to a far greater extent than the rupee has gone down measured in sovereigns. This is the great fact to deal with now in all discussions of the currency problem. And we are not prepared to deny that it recolours some impressions formed before it was brought thus prominently forward. It does not affect the considerations which have reference to the relations between the rupee and the sovereign, but it does affect the purely mercantile aspect of the whole question, and is thus rightly brought to the front in a Minute which partly takes the form of a reply to the letters of the Calcutta merchants. The restoration of a stable equilibrium between gold and silver, even though it might leave exchange at a permanently lower level than that which has hitherto been maintained, would relieve the commercial world from some of its present troubles, and the restoration of a stable equilibrium may be the more reasonably hoped for if it can be shown that silver has not declined in value. However, as we said just now, important as this theory about the actual maintenance of the value of silver, despite appearances, may be to commerce, the change in the proportionate values of silver and gold is the important fact for statesmen to deal with; and the evidence in favour of the theory that gold has risen in value instead of silver falling, leaves the difficulty about paying gold debts in rupees worth fewer English pence than for-merly, exactly where it was before. Nor, though a stable equilibrium may be all that trade requires, would that help a Government whose revenue is in considerable part derived from payments permanently fixed in rupees. Say that the luckless coins find their stable equilibrium at one and sixpence; how would that stability improve the value of the land revenue in reference to the European liabilities of the Government? For the moment we are glancing over the new questions raised by the present resolution, which, of course, claims a far more patient and exhaustive examination; but it is easy to see that in spite of the solid thinking it rests on, there must be a great deal more in the minds of its authors than here meets

A WISE REGULATION.—The Government of India is rightly anxious to prevent as far as possible the spread of epidemic diseases by over-crowding at railway stations and in railway trains. Accordingly instructions are issued to railway companies, with a view to the prevention of such diseases, especially cholera, in railway trains, and the supply of the necessary assistance where cases do occur. Means are to be taken to allow only so many passengers to reach the platform as the train about to start can carry away without overcrowding. Those excluded must wait for the following train. Such a regulation is rendered necessary by the crowds that travel in the season of fairs and pilgrimages, and is not the immediate consequence, as Lord George Hamilton might suppose, of the Prince's visit. At the same time, temporary hospitals are to be established at places along the lines of railway where great crowds arrive or depart, and train-guards will carry along with them the ordinary simple remedies. "The agents and managers of railways should communicate with the local civil authorities on this subject beforehand, in order that the necessary measures may be taken at the charge of such local funds as may be available."

FRIGHTFUL EXPLOSION AND LOSS OF LIFE.

At ten minutes past two o'clock on Wednesday afternoon the residents of Calcutta were startled by a tremendous explosion on board the torpedo boat lying in the River Hughli, at the Police Ghat, resulting in several deaths, and serious injuries to many persons. The explosion was a most frightful one, and by a quarter after two there was an immense crowd collected at the above-mentioned ghat from theighbouring offices and houses. From particulars ascertained on the spot, and confirmed on subsequent investigation, we are in a position to place the following facts connected with the lamentable occurrence before our readers:-During the past few days several attempts had been made to blow up the wreck of the ship British Viceroy, which our readers will recollect had sunk off the Police Ghat about twelve months ago. A torpedo boat, in charge of Sergeant Harrison, of the Royal Engineers, been stationed near the wreck, and as far as we have been able to ascertain, preparations were being made on board to blow up the wreck again this morning. There were something like 2,000 lbs. of gunpowder on board this boat, the greater portion of which was, however, in the hold. Sergeant Harrison who, as above stated, was in charge, ordered an iron cask, believed to contain about 200lbs., to be brought on deck at ten o'clock yesterday morning, and in the afternoon he was, according to the statements of Mr. W. S. Lockhart, Deputy Harbour-master, who was on board about ten minutes before the catastrophe took place, employed in plugging the cask with a wooden plug. It is said that there was a fuse in the centre of the plug. Mr. Harrison called out to Mr. Lockhart, after he had left the boat, and said to him that the powder in the cask that did not go off on Monday last (when an experiment was made) was not in any way damaged. Mr. Lockhart does not seem to have paid much attention to the torpedo boat after this conversation, and the next thing that occurred was the frightful explosion, which has caused considerable loss of life and other damage. When the explosion took place there were, excluding Sergeant Harrison, thirteen men on board the torpedo boat, two of the crew being absent. Eight of these were blown away—at any rate, they are missing, and only portions of bodies can be found; the rest are dangerously injured, and it is believed that not more than one or two will survive. Sergeant Harrison himself must have been blown to atoms, for not the slightest trace of him can be found, and we have it on the statement of some of the wounded men that he was standing immediately alongside of the canister of gunpowder which exploded. All the crew who did not die immediately are now in a dangerous condition, having been removed by the police authorities to the nearest hospitals. The body of a man named Jinat Ali, was found in the jolly-boat which was lying alongside of the torpedo-hoat, and, strange to say, was found whole and entire, although life was extinct. A head, bones, and various portions of the bodies of the missing men were found in different places near the river bank. A piece of copper of considerable weight was thrown up from the torpedo-boat, and falling through the roof of the Port Commissioner's Sloop Cavery, struck a man named Jaffar Ali on the hand, completely smashing the bones above the wrist. Several natives, the crews of adjacent cargo boats, were also injured, and a palki bearer standing alongside of his palki near the Small Cause Court was severely wounded in the leg, causing a fracture of the bones. On the banks of the river several houses are seriously injured, among them the premises of Messrs. Berners, Sanderson and Upton, Government solicitors, of Messis. Berners, Sanderson and Upton, Government solicitors, of Messis. Ahmuty and Co., and of Messis. Black and Murray. At Messis. Moran and Co.'s premises a native employé was struck with a piece of iron, and the Metcalfe Hall building has also sustained much injury. Portions of the bodies of several men were strewed in the garden of the Metcalfe Hall, but the remains are in such a mutilated state that their identification. tification is almost a hopeless task. An inquest will be held on the body of the man who was found dead in the jolly boat, when it is expected something will be ascertained as to the cause of the explosion. In addition to those whom we have already mentioned, three or four others have also been found to have been injured, but not dangerously.—Englishman, Oct. 6.

Miscellaneous.

COURT-MARTIAL.—The Englishman learns from Mhow that the general court-martial ordered on Major Fletcher, of the Royal Artillery, was to assemble at Nusseerabad on the 2nd Oct. Colonel Cahusac, 16th Bombay N.I., is appointed president of the court. The following officers in garrison at Mhow are members:—Majors Franks E-C Royal Horse Artillery; Gordon, 108th Regiment; and Jameson, 25th N.L.I. Lieutenant-Colonel T. P. Smith, R.A., is prosecutor, and Major Jacob Deputy Judge Advocate-General. The charges are said to be in connection with matters relating to the interior economy and discipline of the battery under Major Fletcher's command.

Central Provinces.—The prospects of the crops throughout the Central Provinces, according to the latest district reports, continue favourable, and cholera is decreasing. In Baital, 18:49 inches of rain fell in one day, causing floods, which drowned some people and cattle, and washed away several bridges and houses. The sugarcane, jawar, and other crops on the low lands were also damaged.

A SMALL PONY.—The Punjab may boast of containing the smallest pony in the world, if the following, as published in the Lahor paper, is true:—"His Highness the Nawab of Loharu sent a remarkably diminutive Nepali pony, which is only eight inches high, as a present to the young Maharajah of Patiala. The pony is a perfect miniature of a well-bred horse, and is highly valued by the natives."

DEATH OF MR. G. F. BEHRENDS.—We regret to notice the death of an old fellow-townsman in the Neilgherries. Mr. G. Behrends, for many years a merchant of this city, and more recently an exchange broker, had proceeded to the above-named locality lately for a change of air, and there succumbed to the effects of a long residence in an Indian climate. The deceased gentleman has left many friends who regret him.—Indian Daily News, Sept. 29.

Cholera at Peshawar.—We are sorry to learn from a Punjab paper that cholera of a somewhat violent type has broken out among the troops at Peshawar. Two men of the Sapper and Miners were the first seized, though it is doubtful if their own imprudence was not chiefly to blame for this illness, and the whole detachment has since been removed into a camp near their own lines. Next in order was the Royal Horse Artillery, from which battery as many as ten cases have been admitted to hospital during the 29th and 30th ult.of which four or more have already proved fatal. This battery has been removed into camp. The other European corps in garrison have also suffered, though to a lesser extent.

Public Works.—According to the Allahabad paper, "the administrative authorities of the Public Works Department have sturdily, and thus far successfully, resisted the cry which was raised in the beginning for meeting the pecuniary embarrassments of Government, by curtailing expenditure of a nature calculated to promote the development of Indian resources. The double improvidence of such curtailment could not but be manifest to all thoughtful observers of Indian politics out here, though economists of the Fawcett type seem animated by a more or less unreasonable grudge against the engineers and all their works. For the year, of course, the undertakings of the department are safe from the destroyer; indeed, as we have already explained, projects of retrenchment, which were insisted upon at the beginning of the season, have since been vanquished. But the decisive battle will have to be fought in preparation for the next budget.

Proposed Race Meeting at Delhi.—The Governor-General of India seems fully bent on doing everything or anything to add cclat to the grand doings that are to take place at Delhi in January next. We (Times of India) hear that Captain Roberts, R. H.A., the well-known and popular sporting secretary of the Ambala Races, has been instructed by the Supreme Government to draw up a prospectus for a Grand Race Meeting to be held during the tamasha, and have given him carte blanche with reference to stakes. In addition to flat races, there are to be some very big steeple chases, which for value of stakes and prizes will have never been equalled in India, and to which the Grand National of England will not even compare. It is expected that there will meet all the finest horses in India, for no doubt all the stables in Bengal will put in an appearance, and all the best riders too. In Captain Roberts's hands the Delhi Races will turn out an unqualified success, and most certainly Government could not have selected a better man to take the executive portion of the meeting.

The Delhi Gathering.—A telegram to the Englishman announces the following as the chief appointments to the Staff of the Force Imperial at the Delhi Assemblage:—"The Viceroy's Escort: Brigadier General R. Hume, commanding the Cavalry Division; Major-General C. Chamberlain, commanding, with Colonels Palliser, Graves, and Annesley, in command of the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Brigades Artillery; Colonel C. Evans, commanding the 1st Infantry Division; General Brind, commanding, with Brigadier Generals Biddulph, Kempster, and Macpherson, in command of the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Brigades, 2nd Infantry Division; General Hardinge, commanding, with Brigadier Generals Browne, Phayre, and Rothney, in command of the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Brigades; Principal Medical Officer, Deputy Surgeon General E. Tuson; Commissariat Staff, under Colonel Sibley; Provost Marshal, Lieutenant-Colonel Howey. General and Staff Officers, detailed for duty, required to arrive at Delhi on or before the 15th December."

Ferocious Attack.—James Walker, boatswain on board the B. S. Wallaston, is at present in custody of the police awaiting his trial on a charge of causing hurt to his second officer by means of a knife, while on the high seas. The accused, it appears, had been sent for aft and told by the mate that he had then time to hear any complaint he had to make. This was said because of the man having on several previous occasions brought complaints to him while he was at work. No words of an irritating nature, it appears, passed between them, but so soon as it was uttered the man drew his sheath knife and planted it inside his mouth with such force that it nearly penetrated his throat, and was with the use of no little force extracted therefrom by the chief officer, who came to his rescue. The man next savagely attacked his nose, a portion of which he bit out clean. No time was lost in putting him in irons, in which he was kept till the vessel arrived in port; the weapon it seems, had been well sharpened, and the attack a premeditated one.—Calcutta Statesman. Oct. 1.

Statesman, Oct. 1.

The Doorgan Poojan.—Considerable excitement, we understand, prevails among the Mussulmans of Panduah, owing to permission having, for the first time under British rule, been accorded the Hindoos to celebrate the Doorga Poojah in the main streets of the town. Owing to Panduah containing the shrines of a number of Mohammedan Saints, and being a place greatly reverenced by the Mussulman community, Hindoo processions and the casting of idols into tanks there have hitherto been prohibited. The matter has several times formed the subject of contention, but always, we understand, with the same result, the Sadr Nizamut having, on appeal, confirmed the decision of the local authorities. This year the Hindoos would seem to have appealed to Sir Richard Temple, who, on an exparte representation, has ordered that they are as much entitled to use the public thorougfares for religious processions as Mohammedans. It strikes us, however, that this order does not in the least affect the obligation of the magistrate to step in and put a stop to any procession or assemblage of the kind, if he thinks it likely to result in a breach of the peace. The Mussulmans of the place have memorialised the Lieutenant-Governor on the subject.—Englishman, Sept. 28.

The Delhi Assemblage.—The approach of the Delhi ceremonial no doubt accounts for a revived interest in the old question about a civilian uniform, which we trace in our current correspondence. The black suit of ordinary evening wear is a very good thing in its way, and the abuse of it often heard is thoughtless nonsense for the most part. No clothes a man can wear can be more comfortable than his evening clothes, if these are fairly well made; but why should civilians be constrained to insult the purpose of their black suits by wearing them in the sunshine l Human creatures, it is found by experience, can so little be trusted with liberty in matters of costumes, that if morning dress under existing circumstances be allowed on any State occasion, somebody is sure to come in outrageous trowsers, or a shooting jacket. To save themselves a little trouble, our rulers continually pen that shocking sentence "gentlemen not entitled to wear uniform will appear in evening dress." Why not prescribe a morning full dress once for all, and at all events let the order "full dress" mean evening dress or that? There never was a better opportunity for doing so. If the Viceroy would pass a simple order on the subject before he starts for Cashmere the comfort of civilians at the Delhi gathering would be increased 20 per cent. Fools would sneer, and pretend to think that coats occupied his mind, but he is strong enough to brave that.—Pioneer, Oct. 13.

SENTENCE REMITTED. -- Acts of grace by a ruler in India have a wonderful power of charming away the discontent of the people, if wonderful power of charming away the discontent of the people, it not of winning their affections. And though the native community have been for some time heartily sick of the rule of "the most popular Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal," Sir Richard Temple, by a well-timed exercise of his prerogative of merey, has shown that he understands something of the temper of that community, and has done what will probably stem for a moment the strong current of native indignation which is setting in against him. He has ordered the release of Nobin Chunder Banerjea, who has been undergoing sentence of transportation for the murder of his wife in 1873, under very painful circumstances. Readers have not forgotton the case of the Mohunt of Tarakeshur, which created some sensation at that time. Nobin's wife had been seduced by the holy man, and in the frenzy of his passion he killed her. The native community deeply sympathised with him, and would gladly have seen him pardoned on the plea of insanity. Sir George Campbell was deaf to their appeals, but Sir Richard Temple has now yielded. He finds that the murder was committed under the influence "of the most violent grief and excitement" arising from "extreme provocation." "Under these circumstances and in consideration of the wide sympathy which was and is felt for the prisoner, the Lieutenant-Governor is disposed to think that the period of imprisonment in transportation which Nobin Chunder Banerjea has already undergone will be sufficient for his offence" and orders his release. So the "curses not loud but deep" which Sir Richard has done so much to earn from the natives of late will perhaps for a few days be turned into blessings.—Friend of India.

KILLED BY A WILD ELEPHANT.—"I have just heard of a painful occurrence in the Western Doon, near the village of Ramgurh, below the Sewaliks," says a Mussoorie correspondent. "My informant relates as follows:—Two nights ago, or about the 17th inst., the village was a scene of excitement; two persons killed by a being wild elephant. The cultivator, or deceased, had grown a small patch of Indian corn not far from his hut. During the night he was disturbed by a noise which indicated the destruction of his crops; he rushed out stick in hand (it was very dark) under the supposition that wild pigs had entered his corn-field; on reaching the field he had scarcely time to discover what he was approaching, and ere he could turn to take shelter in his house, the elephant reached him with his trunk and dashed him to the ground; his sister on hearing his cries shouted out, and giving the alarm went in the direction where she heard her brother's cries, but before she could ascertain what the fate of her brother was, the elephant seized his second victim, and subjected her to the same treatment. From the statement of the neighbours who came to the spot as soon as they had scared away the elephant by lighting large fires, they found both the sufferers still alive; the man said that as far as he could discern the elephant left him to seize his sister, and as he was not totally disabled, he was crawling in the direction of his hut, when he encountered the elephant a second time, who threw him forward to the spot where he was found, after which it appears the elephant went in the direction of the hut, attracted by the cries of his sister's children (two of whom were in the hut), and nearly succeeded in overthrowing the roof. The man and woman lived two or three hours after they were found by their neighbours."

INDIAN FORESTS.—"G.P.P." writes as follows in the Friend of India: —Twelve years ago, in 1864, the head officials of the Forest Department stated in their report that "after a systematic working of the forests has been established for a series of years, and the price of timber in the plains has risen, so as to justify a larger outlay on the transport, then the resources of the forests, not now available, will come into play, either by converting the timber on the spot into scantling, which can be carried to the river, or by forming artificial slides and improving the tributaries so as to render them fit for floating timber." In those twelve years hardly any of the improvements suggested have been carried out, although the price of timber has risen to such a height that it fairly allows of their being so. How is it that with the European science of forestry of centuries, compressed into the brains of the younger officials of the Forest Department, they have not been allowed to put into practice in India what they have learnt in Europe—and at such a cost, too? Are the Government waiting for the seniors to take pension, before letting the juniors show what they can do for the money laid out on their professional education? Are the Government afraid that the feelings of the seniors will be hurt by having to assent to the plans of the juniors without knowing the reasons why or wherefore, because they are without experience in scientific forestry? in which case it would be better to relegate the seniors to the professions they were ornamenting ere they were pitchforked into the unlucky Forest Departmenting ere they were piternoised into the unitary rocest requirement, and place the juniors in positions more in accordance with their experience and training. It seldom answers to put the master (i.e., in this case, the junior), under the pupil (i.e., senior) as appears to be the case at present in the Forest Department. When an offer was made in 1871, to Mr. A. O. Hume, the Secretary to the Agricultural, the Department to work the Such Express on the formering or &c., Department, to work the Sutlej Forests on the foregoing or some similar plan, he refused to entertain the proposal, saying as they "had professional foresters coming out from Europe it would be better to await their arrival ere commencing such an operation; besides, he did not believe there was any one then in India capable of carrying out such an idea." That was five years ago; up to this time the professional foresters have not been allowed to ventilate their ideas (one of them was snubbed at the Simla conference in 1875 for attempting to do so!) on the subject, much less to put their plans into execution. The seniors talk, write books, and praise each other's literary productions, and there ends the introduction of mechanical appliances into the Forest Department. By this time a slide, after the pattern of the one at Alpnach, could have been built and in operation, if Mr. A. O. Hume had not refused the offer made to him in 1871. The same offer was made to Dr D. Brandis, in 1874, and again refused. The cost to Government would have been nil, as it could have been constructed out of the sales of the before-mentioned confiscated logs.

THE DELHI GATHERING .- A Bangalor paper states that the young Mahárájá of Mysor will be present at the grand gathering at Delhi. His Highness will, it is said be accompanied by Mr. C. B. Saunders, C.B., the Chief Commissioner, one or two other officers of the Mysor Commission, and a fitting retinue.

SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE POOR OF BANGALOR.—At a meeting held in Bangalor last Sunday to find means to aid the poor of Bangalor during the present scarcity, a subscription of Rs. 11,000 was raised on the spot from eleven persons subscribing 2.1,000 each, and fourteen others Rs. 500 each. It was proposed that the sums collected should go to the purchase of grain, which is to be resold to Also that feedingthe poor at lower prices than the bazaar rates. houses be established in one or two localities, where food is to be supplied to the poor.—Madras Mail, Sept. 28.

THE FAMINE IN BELLARI.—A letter from Bellari says :—Famine is very close on our heels. Prices of food are rapidly rising. No rain has fallen. Relief works have been started in various parts of the districts, and looting the bazaars is probable. The authorities are prepared for the worst.—Madras Mail.

THE GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS. -We are informed that during the Governor's absence on tour the general business of the executive will be carried on at Ooty in the usual way, as if the Duke were still on the spot, but his Grace has ordered that the drafts of all letters which the "Council of Madras" may propose to despatch to the Secretary for India shall be first submitted for his approval. Sanction to their despatch or otherwise will always be communicated by wire.—Madras Times, Oct. 2.

THE GOVERNOR ON TOUR.—His Grace the Governor of Madras and suite have at last torn themselves away from the delights of Capua-on-the-Hills. After the Mysore tour his Grace returned to Ooty for a few days—for a last fond farewell, we suppose. On Wednesday last he arrived in Madras, and his capital had the honour of seeing him in its midst for a period of eight hours, when he embarked on board the I.G.S. Tennasserim for a further tour through his dominions. His Grace intends finishing the year's pleasure by an agreeable aquatic excursion along the Coromandel and Malabar Coasts and to the Andaman Islands. His Grace is accompanied by the ladies of the family. At the conclusion of the tour his Grace leaves for the Delhi Assemblage, when he will be accompanied by the principal officers of State, including one member of the Legislative Council.—Madras Times, Sept. 30.

SELLING CHILDREN AT BANGALOR .-- A correspondent writes :-"Bangalor is a truly wonderful place to a stranger at the first onset of his residence here. One of the peculiarities of the place is, that natives seem to be allowed to do just what they please with impunity, and without any interference on the part of the police. an instance, I would mention that, in addition to other commodities of a questionable nature that are hawked about from house to house, are native children. A stalwart villager brought me a child of about three years of age, which he offered to dispose of for Rs. 20, but would have taken half this sum. The child was offered for sale on the ground that the seller, the reputed father, could not, on account of the dearness of food, keep it any longer. The question is, was this child stolen from its village and brought into Bangalor for sale, or not? Had a police constable been moving about in the vicinity of my house I should have handed the man over to him, but as there was not, and I did not know, of course, where to find one, I let the man go."—Bangalor Examiner.

CRITICAL STATE OF NORTH ARCOT.—Suffering of a severe type is now felt by the villagers in the northern portion of the Chendragherry talook, North Arcot district. The dry crops which constitute their chief support, such as raggy and cumboo, have perished, owing to the long-continued drought. The inhabitants of many villages are now living on the leaves of certain jungle plants, the hearts of aloe plants boiled, and congee made of pounded tamarind stones. Rain has fallen copiously in the last few days, just when it is too late, and the poor ryots are now so disheartened that they utterly refuse to plough their lands for a late crop of cholum, millet, or waragu. There is even a difficulty in getting seed grain of any kind. In this portion of the North Arcot district the prospects are extremely gloomy; but elsewhere there have been copious falls of rain, and the crops generally are in very fair condition. Relief works have been opened in the Chendragherry talook extensively, as well as houses where congee is given daily to the very old and weak who cannot work. In some parts of the Palmanair talook there was lately very nearly a water famine, and the grain merchants raised their rates so tremendously that the poorest of the people could not buy grain, and suffering began to be felt; but the Collector at once opened relief works, and set to work deepening all the wells, and a timely fall of rain has fortunately reassured the people, and prices have fallen slightly. Everything now depends on the coming North-east monsoon. If it is a bumper the district will do pretty well; but if it fails, as it did last year, there must, without doubt, be a famine in North Arcot.—Madras Mail, Sept. 30.

STATION TALK.

ADEN, SEPT. 13.—The struggle between the rival chiefs of Shuhur and Muccallah continues; the former, who is connected with some Arab jemadars serving under the Nizam at Hyderabad, is gradually succeeding in establishing himself firmly in Hadhramant. He has already attacked and partially reduced Tereem, the capital of the province, and he recently obtained possession of several important places between Muccallah and Shuhur, and no doubt must eventually become master of the latter port. The Government of India have allowed themselves to be instrumental in establishing a strong Indo-Arabian State in South-Eastern Arabia. The present ruler of Shuhur is Saleh Ooner alias Niwaz Jung, a jemadar in the service of the Nizam. He and his two brothers, Abdullah, who is o'der and is not in the Nizam's service, and Awadh alias Barak Jung, who is younger, have for many years past, by means of men and money obtained from India, gradually feathered a very pretty nest. The Kayati tribe, to which the Oomer family belong, did a nice piece of piracy not many years ago with our assistance. The Hyderabad faction not many years ago with our assistance. The Hyderabad faction talked over the Resident at the Nizam's Court, who talked over Sir Bartle Frere, who ordered material assistance to be afforded in the way of guns and ammunition to the Kayati family in assisting the then owner of Shuhur, Ali Naji, of the Brek sub-division of the Yaffaee tribe (to which the Kayati also belong) to resist attack on Shuhur by the Katheerees (also Yaffaces). The Katheerees were driven off, but the Kayati, instead of returning Shuhur to Ali Naji, kept it for himself. Of course he never said anything about this to us, and as he kept Ali Naji in close confinement for many years, he avoided the story of his clever trickery becoming known in all its details until it was too late. Of late years he has tried many dodges, purchased ships and steamers only to find he could not fight at sea. At last he has had recourse to legal advice, and now obtains his supplies of men and money via Muscat and the Persian Gulf ports, so that the wary Commissioner of Police at Bombay may not intercept his supplies as formerly. Arms virunque cano; you must draw your own conclusions from the consequences of the establishment of a powerful and warlike State, in intimate connection with India, on the South-east Arabian coast. I will only mention incidentally that the jemadar of Shuhur has a brass band and his artillerymen are Rohillas .-- Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Major Walsh.—We (Times of India) understand that Major Pendergast Walsh, Bombay Staff Corps, is about to return to Bombay, having been completely restored to health by the beneficial effects of a European climate.

MILITARY RETIREMENTS .- I will begin my military notes of the past fortnight by mentioning the fact that the twenty retirements allowed to the Bombay Army under the commutation scheme are all filled up. The following is a list of the Colonels who have gone:

—Colonels Phillips, Hathway, Waddington, Collier, Currie, Lyons, Barras, Prescott, Scott, Westropp, Ashburner, Bard, Bacon, Kemball, Marsh, E. Waddington, Bowen, Jacob, Walker, and Marston. -Times of India Correspondent.

THE LATE MEETING OF MUSSULMANS .- A contemporary, with the view of detracting from the political importance of the meeting of Mussulmans held on Sunday week in Bombay, asserts that the report of it, which we published, was written for the purpose of enhancing its importance, and that it was supplied to us from a native source. This is quite incorrect. The report in question was furnished to use in the ordinary course by our own reporter, an Englishman, who described what he saw, and without any political bias whatever. -Times of India, Oct. 9.

PRESENTATION OF NEW COLOURS.—On Wednesday evening, the 20th September, new colours were presented to H.M.'s 26th N.I. on the Race Course at Poona. The 2-15th and 66th Regiments, 1st Cavalry (Lancers,) were also on the ground. H.E. the Governor and Sir Charles and Lady Staveley and a brilliant staff arrived at 4.15 P.M. After the old colours had been carried slowly down the ranks of the regiment, the band playing "Auld Lang Syne," Lady Staveley presented the colours, and made a little speech. She said she was proud in presenting the colours to one of the bravest native regiments in India, and her Ladyship felt sure that she was placing them in hands of those who would give their lives in their defence.

Mr. Moylan.—We hear that after Mr. Billimoria had been acquitted by the jury in the recent defamation case, Government instructed the Public Prosecutor to charge him with offering an illegal gratification to Mr. Moylan, the latter being a Government servant. The Public Prosecutor consulted the Advocate-General, who thought that the charge of illegal gratification could not be brought against Mr. Billimoria, as Mr. Moylan had distinctly denied during the late trial that he had either been offered or had accepted the sum of Rs. 500 from Mr. Billimoria. Under these circumstances it is believed that Government will not press the matter. We hear that it is the intention of some of the mechanical engineers to memorialise Government for Mr. Moylan's removal from his appointment. Times of India, Oct. 9.

THE LATE MR. C. M. I. POLLOCK.—In the course of the hearing of a motion in the "Throstle Mill Case," which was made before the Chief Justice on Saturday morning, the name of the late Mr. Pollock was mentioned as one of the parties interested, when his Lordship took the opportunity of expressing the Court's regret at the demise of that gentleman, in a few appropriate words, bearing testimony at the same time to his popularity and worth as a member of the legal profession during his lifetime. His Lordship said:—"I may take this opportunity of mentioning, on behalf of the Bench, how deeply we regret the death of the late Mr. Pollock, who was well known amongst us. He was for many years a solicitor and an officer of this Court, was always most courteous in his bearing, and an extremely popular member of society. His death, under very painful circumstances, must be a cause of regret to the profession generally. I have known him personally for three and-twenty years,

AN OLD VETERAN.—One of the oldest Europeans in India has just departed this life at Panchgunny—Alex. Wilson, who was born in the year 1793, joined the East India Company's service in the year 1816, was present at the taking of Kirkee in 1817, (medal and clasp) and at the capture of Benibooalli and Kolapoor, and was all through the Mahratta campaign. He retired from the service on the pension of a serjeant major in the year 1842, when he returned to Scotland; but having left two sons in the country, he after a sojourn of fourteen years in his native land returned to he, after a sojourn of fourteen years in his native land returned to India, and shortly after his arrival obtained employment in the Bombay Water Works; he was not strong enough to continue at work, and retired to Panchgunny where he has resided for the last eighteen years. Although at the advanced age of eighty-three years and two months he retained his faculties up to a week before his death. He was a good Christian, was highly esteemed by every one who visited the station, and his death is deeply felt by his sorrowing widow and son. Requiescat in pace.—Deccan Herald.

MAIL ROBBERY.—That was a very exciting little tragedy which was performed on Sunday week on the road between Puna and Ahmadnagar. The mail cart was spinning merrily along between the two insignificant changing stations of Ghargaum and Lohni; the night was dark, and probably the passengers in the vehicle, Mr. Framji Nassarwanji Setna, Deputy Collector of Ahmadnagar, and his servant, were asleep, when suddenly a band of men rushed out from the jungle at the road-side, and seized the ponies and cut and hewed at the driver and the passengers with hatchets tied on sticks. The driver's hand was nearly chopped off, and he ran on a mile towards Lohni, when he met some men, but fainted before he could tell them what had happened. The servant was dragged out and belaboured on the road so that, besides other injuries, one or both of his legs were broken. Poor Mr. Framji, who occupied the seat behind, tried to ward off with his walking-stick the blows which a miscreant was dealing at him with a hatchet, but in vain. a miscreant was dealing at him with a hatchet, but in vain. He was soon disabled. His leg was nearly hacked off at the knee, his head cut open, and his body mutilated in various places. He is now lying in Ahmadnagar, where it is doubtful whether he will survive his terrible injuries. When the passengers had been thrown on the road for dead, the robbers proceeded comfortably to rob the mails! And all this took place in the year of grace 1876! There used to be a time when highway robberies were common enough in India; but we had hoped that under the British Government, whose enlightenment is so much talked about, such an occurrence as this Ahmaduagar mail robbery would have been impossible at the present day.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 2.

LEGISLATION.—The greater part of our space to-day is occupied by a report of the proceedings of the Legislative Council on the afternoon of Wednesday last, when the House sat for over three hours and transacted a deal of important business. The Cattle Trespass Bill and the Sale of Poisons Bill were read a second time and referred to Sub-Committees. The Local Health and Improvement Bill was read a second time and referred to a sub-committee, after a speech on its merits by Sir Coomaraswamy, who objected to a larger experiment being entered on than its introduction into one or two towns, at first. The question of the proper site for a coolie depot which should occasion require might be converted into a quarantine station was discussed; and on behalf of Government it was promised that if the hon, member would let his motion drop for the present, Government would undertake that before coming to a final decision as to the site to be used the advice and opinion of this Council should be sought. With regard to the question whether her Majesty, by virtue of her prerogative over Crown colonies may constitutionally introduce the ecclesiastical law of England as regards the power and jurisdiction of such Bishops into this Island, without an order of the Privy Council, the Queen's Advocate replied that it was a very grave question of law, and one on which, so far as he could gather, there was no authoritative decision. The course for the persons who felt themselves aggrieved was to carry their case before those authorities whose deaggrieved was to carry their case before those authorities whose decision would be binding in the matter. It would be improper in Government, he thought, to give any expression of opinion. In reply to the question by Mr. Mitchell as to the jurisdiction of the Bishop, the Colonial Secretary replied that Government was perfectly well aware that the Bishop was exercising jurisdiction in Ceylon, and Government believed he acted perfectly legally in doing so. As to whether there was any difference between the Bishop's and previous letters patent, he believed that there was no difference. His Excellency had referred the question to the Bishop, and there was no doubt his Lordship would take the opportunity of publishing the letters patent and would enable him to lay the papers before the Council. In answer to a question by the same hon, gentleman as to "whether any order of the Queen in Privy Council, or any Act of Parliament exists, introducing the ecclesiastical law of England in Ceylon, as regards the powers and jurisdiction of Bishops of the Church of England"—the Advocate said he knew of no such Act of Parliament or order of Privy Council, and he believed there was none in existence.—Ceylon Times, Sept. 29.

Annual Musketry Returns.

The C. in C. directs the publication of the Annual Musketry Returns of the British and Native troops serving in this Presy. for the course 1875-76, with the following remarks:—

In both European and Native corps (Cavalry excepted) the mean results show a great improvement on that of the preceding year.

The European Infantry figure of merit is 8.30 and the Native Infantry 5.33 points better than in 1874-75.

5·33 points better than in 1874-75.

The system having been changed with regard to the practice of Native Cavalry by doubling the mean figure of merit for 18,4-75 it becomes 32·68 against 28·07 of this year, or 4·61 points less.

Under para. 227 Musketry Regulations for Native troops, the undermentioned corps are considered to be classified as indifferent, viz.:—

41st, 38th, 32rd, 40th, 7th, 1st, 25th, 13th, 19th, 37th, and 27th N.I.

The following regiments show a marked improvement on 1874-75:—
The 76th, 67th, and 1-21st Regiments of Foot, and the 24th, 23rd, 30th, 21st, 26th, 6th, 22nd, 4th, 8th and 19th Regiments N.I.

BILLS ON INDIA.—As anticipated, there has been a considerable improvement, amounting from 4d. to 4d. per rupee, in this week's allotment of India Council drafts. The amount was again 35,00,000 rupees (say £350,000), but apparently only £340,000 was placed—namely, for Calcutta, £190,000 in the form of bills at 1s. 8 9-16d. per rupee; and for Bombay £150,000 in telegraphic transfers at 1s. 8 9-16d., and in bills at 1s. 8 d., the latter receiving about 57 per cent. of applications. After this announcement bar silver was in increased demand, and 531d. was paid for an amount in the market. Consequently, silver is 1d. an ounce higher than the quotation of a week ago.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The following have been the exports of specie to the East by the steamers of the P. and O. Steam Navigation Company according to the dates given :-- From Southampton, per Peshawur, October 19:—Gold, to Alexandria, £73,000; Silver, to Bombay, £151,850; Gold, to Ceylon, £260; Silver, to Calcutta, £21,150; Silver, to Penang, £27,900; Silver, to Hong Kong, £1,200; Silver, to Shanghai, £37,470. Per Mirzapore, October 26:—Gold, to Alexandria, £101,000; Silver, to Bombay, £165,000. By the Mexamuria, £101,000; Silver, to Bombay, £105,000. By the steamers of the Messageries the exports were as subjoined:—From Marseilles, per Mexis, Sept. 28, 1870:—Gold, to Egypt, £52,000. Per Hoogly, Oct. 5—Gold to Egypt, £75,320. Per Djennah and Peluse, Oct. 8 and 12—Gold, to Aden, £1,700; Gold, to Alexandria, £29,000. Per Tage, Oct. 19—Gold, to Alexandria, £86,000. Per Iraouaddy, Oct. 22—to Singapore, Silver, £60,500.

MEMORIAL TO THE LATE GENERAL SIR HOPE GRANT .-- A new Wesleyan church was opened at Aldershot on Tuesday, when a memorial window to the late Lieut.-General Sir Hope Grant was unveiled by Lieut.-General Sir Thomas Steele, K.C.B., commanding the division.

LORD SELBORNE ON INDIAN MISSIONS.—At a meeting held at Alton a few days ago, under the presidency of the Bishop of Winchester, in aid of a fund now being raised in the diocese for the endowment of a missionary bishopric in India, Lord Selborne supported the object in an eloquent speech, observing that when we considered the magnitude of the population of India, the wealth and civilisation of the inhabitants and our vast imperial interest in the country, it was not too much to say that, as a mission field, it outweighed in importance all others combined.

SINGATORE GAS COMPANY .- An extraordinary general meeting of this company was held on Oct. 24 at the Guildhall Tavern. Mr. H. P. Stephenson, the chairman, who presided, in moving the adoption of the report, an abstract of which has appeared, said he did so with more than usual satisfaction on this occasion, because although they stuck to their stereotyped dividend at the rate of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. per annum, they were able, in addition, to write their usual 1 per cent. off the capital, and to go back and write off 1 per cent. for the half-year ending the 31st of December, 1872, when their profits did not permit them to do so; and also to write off the £137 travelling expenses suspense account. They were able to do this at a time when they were rather hard pushed through the rates of exchange. loss for the half-year on this account had amounted to £384, which was a serious matter to them. They had more capital called up at present than they required for working the concern, and this would be employed in paying off those debentures which would shortly become due. They had been accused of not being a progressive company, but he should congratulate himself if they could see their way to maintaining their 7½ per cent. dividend, and making that perfectly safe. Mr. R. S. Foreman, a director, seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously, the dividend, less income-tax, being declared payable on and after Nov. 20. Votes of thanks to the chairman and directors, the local committee at Singapore, and other officers, then terminated the proceedings.

EASTERN EXTENSION AUSTRALASIA AND CHINA TELEGRAPH COMPANY (LIMITED).—The ordinary general meeting of this company was held on Oct. 25, at the City Terminus Hotel, Mr. J. Pender, M.P., the chairman, presiding. The report, an abstract of which has already appeared, was taken as read. The Chairman, in moving its adoption, said the total earnings for the half-year ending June 30 last had been £98,542, showing a decrease of £12,212. The net revenue for the past half-year was £54,631, as against £82,280 in the corresponding period of 1875, showing a decrease of £27,649, caused by the breakage of the Penang-Madras and Australian cables during April, May, and June. Two interim dividends of 1\{\right\} per cent., each had been distributed, amounting to £49,937, and leaving £4,693 to be carried forward. The balance of the old debenture debt, amounting to £3,200, had been paid off during the half-year. Of the new issue of £320,000 debentures, £278,500 was issued to the 30th of June, and the balance had since been half-vear. placed. The increase in the cost of repairs for the past half-year The Rangoon cable was being manufactured, and would be shipped before the end of the year; 472 miles had been completed, and payments had been made under the contract to the extent of They had been able by their general and local traffic to maintain their dividend of 5 per cent, and he sincerely hoped that, when the cable was once restored, they would have a "run" of better luck than they had during the past six months. Submarine telegraphy was yet in its infancy, but every day they were gaining more experience. They had found that, so far as the cables and the material of which they were composed were concerned, the cables rather improved than deteriorated at the bottom of the sea. If they could get good ground to lay it in, the "life" of a cable would be long. The Right Hon. W. N. Massey, vice-chairman, seconded the adoption of the report, which was unanimously agreed to without discussion. The proceedings terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman and directors.

ANTIBILIOUS PILLS. SEVENTY-SIXTH YEAR.

GOOD FAMILY MEDICINE CHEST. with a prudent use, has saved many a life and yet we think the idea might be improved upon, and reduced to a more simple form. Take some good compound such as pound, such as

and we find that the desired end may be obtained without scales and weights, and little mysterious compartments, and enchanted bottles with crystal stoppers.

Others might be used, but

COCKLE'S PILLS,
as tested by many thousands of persons, and found to answer their purpose so well, may be set down as the best.—Observer.

Summary and Revielo.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, October 16; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, October 14; Calcutta, October 13.

THE Indian papers abound as usual in printed matter, but yield a very small crop of news. One item, however, the threatened famine in Western India, was already looming before the public as an unpleasant certainty. There was every reason to fear that the famine which was even then brooding darkly over Sholapur and the Southern Maratha country would be shared by Khandesh and even Nasik. October had opened with the gloomiest prospects around Bhosawal, where the rainfall up to date had only been eleven inches, while the rain had been followed by twenty days of a dry wind and a hot sun! The cotton crop was almost a complete failure, and the early grain crop was drooping fast. The late, or "rabi," crops were being sown in land as dry as dust, and unless rain fell in abundance shortly they would be utterly lost. Such a season has not been known there for twenty years. "The fruitful valley of the Tapti," says the Bombay Gazette, "is at the present moment almost an open plain, without a trace of vegetation, except the mango groves! Add to this that the heavens are like burning brass, and there is no sign of rain. What the people are to do, if no rain falls, it is hard to conjecture. They must be assisted by Government or they will break the laws. Some 2,000 are already at work near Bhosawal, and plans on a small scale are being prepared to give employment. Grain, through the laudable exertions of the officials, is being poured in the rail, and prices have been hitherto kept down accordingly; but in spite of this supply, they are now rising again rapidly. The Bhils of of this supply, they are now rising again rapidly. The Bhils of the Satpura and the village Bhils are becoming troublesome.

Altogether the position is critical. The Collector at Bhosawal has been out on tour, trying to make arrangements to meet the calamity if it becomes more serious, as there seems every likelihood it will. The scarcity of fodder and water is already being felt severely, particularly in the vicinity of Jalgam and Bhosawal. Thousands of cattle will die if no rain falls."

It appears from a Punjab paper that a failure of the crops in Ladakh has caused considerable distress from the scarcity and high rates of food-grain. The Maharajah of Kashmir, in order to encourage the import of food-grain, has taken off the octroi duties; but matters looked somewhat gloomy still, betokening even a positive famine, if vigorous and well-considered relief measures were not adopted.

In the dearth of news the Bombay papers discourse of a rumour which has been "semi-officially circulated," that the Government of India intend to take possession of Quetta, and to secure a permanent hold on Khelat by means of military occupation. The Bolan Pass is, we are told, to be regularly surveyed. These measures are to be regarded as the first steps taken by the Government of India towards gaining a substantial foothold in Central Asia. So at least says rumour, The despatch of Colonel Colley from rightly or wrongly. Simla is held by the Pioneer to point in this direction. Major Sandeman had thoroughly done the work entrusted to him, which was that of a peacemaker only. "But if the present Go. vernment aims now at inaugurating a policy in Khelat, it is intelligible that it should want to work that out through an envoy whom it has had an opportunity of personally instructing. That may be the solution of Colonel Colley's mission and its justification,-though the selection of an officer who is a stranger to India would seem an experiment involving some

In spite of all the precautions taken by the authorities, cholera had broken out amongst the troops at Peshawar. The correspondent of the Pioneer reports that up to the 30th September there had been two cases amongst the Sappers, four in the 51st, five in the 8th, four in the Artillery, and one amongst the lines of the 14th Sikhs. Only one case, however, that in the Native Regiment, had proved fatal. All the troops attacked have been sent into camp.

THE Viceregal Council met at Simla on October 9, when the Ondh Laws and Land Revenue Bills were passed. The Viceroy made a very able speech in vindication of the Government from the charges brought against its policy regarding the Oudh land tenures in Monsieur Emile DeLaveleye's recent work on Printe tive Property. At the Council a number of Oudh talukdars were present, who offered an address to the Viceroy, thanking his Government for what they had done in this connection.

FROM Madras we learn that the Duke of Buckingham intends to represent the Madras Presidency at the Delhi Assemblage with unusual splendour, and that great preparations to that end are already in progress. Captain Gordon, A.D.C. to his Grace, had just started for Delhi, to help in marking out the Duke's Camp, and he will remain there, till the affair comes off, in charge of the camp. The Duke's magnificent service of gold and silver plate was to be forwarded to the same destination. The other local Governments will play their part in the coming hospitalities. In the North-West Provinces Rs. 35,000 have been allotted among the several Commissioners for the cost of fireworks and illuminations. According to the Pioneer "the Chiefs of Central India approve emphatically of the Delhi Assemblage, only declaring that it ought to have taken place be-They are prepared to attend it with all possible eclat. The Maharaja Holkar even, who has not the reputation of being wantonly extravagant, never for a moment wavered about this call, and is quite prepared to spend a lakh on the journey." No doubt he is; but out of whose pockets will the money eventually come? It is easy for a native Prince to make a grand show, so long as forced loans from bankers and merchants or new imposts on the peasantry can secure him the wherewithal Digitized by GOGIE

A HAIDARABAD letter to the Times of India states that the question of the Nizam's visit to Delihi is beyond a doubt. "There is not, and there never has been, since the invitation was presented to him and accepted, the slightest intention that he should not leave the walls of the palace. His projected journey is causing a very pleasurable excitement. His Highness will go up with the state and retinue befitting his rank." Sir Salar Jung had just paid his first visit to the Nizam since his own return home. He had to sit on a low chair, being quite unable as yet to adopt the posture customary on such occasions.

It appears from the latest census returns that the population of Calcutta on the night of the 6th April last was 409,036 souls. The population of the Fort was found to be 2,803, and that of the ships and boats in the port 17,696, giving a total of 429,535, or about two-thirds of the population of Bombay. If Howrah and the suburbs were included, these figures would have to be largely increased. The apparent growth of the city population since 1866 amounts only to 50,000, but it is probable that many thousands more have migrated from the city into the great manufacturing suburbs on either side the river. The most densely peopled parts of the town are the Jorásánko, Kolhutola, and Bow Bazaar wards. These wards, which form the heart of the city from a census point of view, are crowded with a most heterogeneous population. In the words of Mr. Beverley, "Burra Bazaar and Colootola, indeed, may be fitly described as a colluvies gentium, most of the nations of Europe and Asia being represented among their inhabitants. Here reside the bulk of the Armenians, Jews, and Parsees, as well as the numerous traders from Central, Western, and Southern India. In Colootola and Bow Bazaar are also found large numbers of Chinese and Mughs; and these wards are par excellence the home of the Indo-Portuguese and East Indians. Colootola contains a number of large bustees, 68 per cent. of the population being still lodged in kutcha huts. Bow Bazaar has also some of the most crowded collections of huts in the town, occupied mostly by the kintals of the Mughs and Portuguese." In Kolhutola there are 214, and in Burra Bazaar 108 persons to the acre, against 30 in palatial Chowringhee, the white town or west end of Calcutta. Of the whole city population 187,303 or 45 8 per cent. live in pakka or solid brick houses, the number of which is 16,896, as against 16,022 in 1866. Of these pakka houses, 7,037 are one-storeyed, 8,636 two-storeyed, 1,187 three-storeyed, 34 four-storeyed, and 2 five-storeyed. Of the kachcha or mud-built houses 1,120 have an upper storey, and 2,289 or 10 per cent. are tenanted by three families. The whole number of families returned is 80,664, giving an average of five souls to a family.

SIXTY-TWO per cent. of the people are returned as males, against thirty-eight per cent. females. That the excess of males is due to the floating character of the population may be inferred from the following facts:—

Up to ten years of age the numbers of the sexes are nearly equal, the males being 26,356 and the females 25,324. Between the years of ten and twenty we have 33,597 males, against 20,759 females; between twenty and forty there are no less than 149,400 males to 58,923 females; between forty and sixty there are 58,003 males to 31,239 females; while, of sixty years of age and upwards the sexes are nearly equal again, the males numbering 10,150, against 10,784 females. It will thus be seen that the excess of males in the population above referred to occurs principally in middle life, between the ages of twenty and sixty, the sexes of the young and old being nearly equal.

The excess of males between these ages represents the number of strangers who flock to Calcutta to earn a livelihood as traders, clerks, servants, labourers, porters, and so forth. Of these strangers more than nine thousand come from Europe, 177 from America, 56 from Africa, and 9 from Australasia. Altogether the non-Asiatics are 2 per cent. of the population. Many of these, however, have doubtless been born in Calcutta, though of European parentage. Of Asiatics, not natives of India, a considerable number are Jews and Armenians, but it is supposed that some of the latter have returned themselves as Europeans. Chinese number 825; including only 64 females, who are believed to be of mixed race, the offspring of marriages with Eurasian women. The Arabs number 190, and the Persians 230. Of the natives of India about three-fourths are Bengalis. The Uriyas, so largely employed as domestic servants, are returned at 19,189, showing a decrease of more than 4,000 since 1872, which may perhaps be explained by the fact that many Uriyas return home in spring to cultivate their lands. The Marwari cloth-merchants are 1,944, the Madrassies 1,216, the Maghs 814, the Panjabis 527, Burmese 135, Parsis 151, Assamese 71, Natives of Western India 828, and Natives of India whose countries are not stated 860.

CLASSIFIED by religion the Hindus stand first, with a total of 278,224 souls, or about two-thirds of the whole population. The Mohammedans number 123,556, a much larger proportion than in Bombay. Of the remainder, 23,885 are returned as Christians, 952 are Jews, 1,878 Buddhists, of whom 252 are Jains. The Brahmists, or members of the Brahma Samaj, count only 479. A very small surplus consists of Deists, Unitarians, Free-thinkers, and Positivists. Among the Hindus the most numerous castes are the Brahmans and the Kayasths, being 33,914 and 32,073 respectively. Mr. Beverley remarks that "the comparatively small number of artisan castes (12,864) would seem to show that caste is fast dying out in the town as an exclusive system of hereditary occupations." The Mohammedans of Calcutta are nearly all Sunnis; the whole number of Shias being only 2,155. mosques, durgas, and imambaries in Calcutta number 117. Among Christian sects the Church of England takes the lead with 9,962 members. The Roman Catholics are 9,087. the other sects Presbyterians count 1,341, Baptists 540, Methodists 311, Congregationalists 73, Lutherans 31, Armenians 576, Greeks 120, and 1,844 are simply Christians who, if they belong to any particular sect, I ave not stated it. The native Christians appear to number only 2,635, a large increase, however, in the last ten years. Besides the Armenians by religion, 79 Protestants, 34 Roman Catholics, 12 Presbyter.ans, 5 Baptists, and one Mohammedan are Armenians by race. The Greek community includes 5 Protestants and 8 Roman Catholics, while 5 Jews by birth have returned themselves as Methodists, and 3 as Mohammedans.

Among the Eurasians or mixed breeds the proportion of males to females is only 48 per cent., a phenomenon which Mr. Beverley owns himself unable to explain. Still more perplexing at first sight is the great number of native widows in Calcutta, 55,483, against 58,977 wives, and only 13,476 widowers. But it must be remembered that Hindu widows help to swell the licentious classes of every Indian town. Mr. Beverley of course does "not mean for one moment to imply that all the 55,000 widows are women of ill-fame, but the number is so disproportionate to the total number of females in the town that we cannot explain it by mere natural causes. The number of widows is in fact very nearly equal to the number of wives; while, even supposing the husband of each wife to be living in the town, we have 223,539 males (including children) living without wives in the town. It is quite possible, then, that special influences are at work, attracting widows to the town from the outside population." It appears that the total number of persons in the town who can read and write is 110,565, of whom more than ten-elevenths are males. Of the total males of all classes 35.6 per cent. can read and write; of the total females 6.7 per cent. Of Hindu males 42 per cent. can read and write; of Mohammedans 16.5, and of others (mostly Christians) 68 per cent. Fifty-four per cent. of Christian females can read and write against 3.3 per cent. of Hindu females, and only 3.24 per cent. of Mohammedan females. These numbers speak for themselves as to the backwardness of the Mohammedans and of native women of both sects. The work of female education is all to do when even in Calcutta little more than three per cent., or about one in thirty, of the Hindu females can read and write.

According to a Bombay telegram of November 2, it is reported that Sir Richard Temple, Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, will succeed Sir P. E. Wodehouse as Governor of Bombay.

A BECENT telegram from Berlin to the Times states that the official Turkistan Gazette contradicts the rumour that a Russian envoy has been sent to the Amir of Kabul.

and the Persians 230. Of the natives of India about three-fourths are Bengalis. The Uriyas, so largely employed as domestic servants, are returned at 19,189, showing a decrease of more than 4,000 since 1872, which may perhaps be ex-spondent of the Pioneer puts the probabilities thus:-Famine in Sholapur, extreme dearth in Punah, great scarcity in Khandesh, Nasik, Ahmadnagar, Dhawar, Kaladgi, and Belgam. In all these districts only a fraction of the Government revenue will be collected, and large sums must be spent on relief; but if panic and exaggeration be avoided, we may hope to relieve all real distress at one-sixth of the cost, without any of the waste which too often characterised the management of the last Bengal famine. The Supreme Government refuses to sanction the Dhund and Manwar Railway, on the ground that works which ness ssitated a lasting outlay should not be chosen for relief works. Roads and irrigation works will be undertaken in the distressed districts. The Bombay Government seems acting with great and well-directed energy. It is stated that Sir P. Wodehouse has asked to be excused from attending the Delhi Assemblage. There is little further news regarding Madras. There will be scarcity in several districts, but affairs are better than in Bom-

THE Times Calcutta Correspondent learns that the Government expect great indirect results from the conference during the Delhi Assemblage between all the heads of administrations, the great Chiefs, and deputations from external Allies. Important questions will be discussed, such as the famine, next year's Budget, and so on. It must not be forgotten that the Chiefs will spend enormous sums. One Chief is giving 60,000 rupees for the use of a house in Delhi. From Madras he hears that the Duke of Buckingham is making great preparations, and has ordered a silver howdah, and takes his body All collectors are directed to hold their guard with him. The Government is determined to put a stop to the anarchy and disorder which lately prevailed in Khelat, and to abandon a non-interference policy, so far, at least, as that country is concerned. The Khan and Sirdars both express their readiness to abide by the Viceroy's decision. The Government will probably restore the Khan's subsidy and assist him in getting the country nto order. Sir George Couper will be confirmed as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, vice Sir J. Strachey, appointed Finance Minister. The rumour that Sir Lewis Pelly will succeed Sir R. The Government is considering the question of uniting Oudh to the North-West Provinces, a change which has long been advocated, and which will effect a great financial caving. If the alone he carried out and which will effect a great financial saving. If the plan be carried out, Outh will probably retain a certain degree of independence, and the Lieutenant-Governor will reside at Lucknow for a portion of each year.

THAT the new short service system is wholly unsuited to the conditions of Indian army service, so far as the British soldier is concerned, we have repeatedly pointed out. From the mere money point of view it is obvious that a more wasteful system could not be devised, while in respect of military efficiency it cannot be compared with that of the old Company's European army. But a fresh argument against short service for India is supplied by successive Reports of Sanihary Commissioners from 1863 to the present day. In the Report of the Army Sanitary Commission for 1863, which embraces the experiences of ten years, from 1847 to 1856, we find that among soldiers of only one year's residence in India the mortality was 65.2 per 1,000. Between the first and the second year the death rate was 53.6. Between the second and third years it rose to 56.2, while between the third and fourth it fell to 49.3. Between the fourth and fifth. years—the period at which Mr. Hardy would recall the soldier to fill up his reserves—the mortality descended to its lowest figure, 44.1. Thus for the first quinquennial period the average rate of mortality was 53.7. In the second quinquennial period (five to ten years) it was 47.0; in the third (ten to fifteen years) it was 52.8, while for the twentieth year and upwards it was 62.5—less even than the mortality of the first year. These figures refer only to the Company's European troops. In England, on the other hand, the first five years of a soldier's service have always been far less fatal than the second. In spite of the reduced death rates of the last ten years, the relative unhealthiness of young soldiers in India is just as remarkable now as in bygone days. The Indian Sanitary Reports for 1874 lay much stress on "the influence of newly arrived regiments in increasing the ratios of sickness and mortality in different groups, and at individual stations." In Bengal the number of European soldiers admitted into hospital averaged generally 1,358, of daily sick 57, and of deaths in that year 13.58 per 1,000, whereas in the newly arrived regiments the respective averages were 1,818, 70, and 26:18 per 1,000. A comparison of the death-rates for specified diseases shows the same differences between seasoned regiments and new comers. While 1.70 per 1,000 died in the army generally from enteric fever, the deaths among the new regiments averaged as much as 10:17. Of the new men 2:80 died from apoplexy, and 2:03 from dysentery, against 95 and 1.23 in the army at large. The deaths from liver disease were 2.80 and 2.16 per 100 respectively. Had the comparison been drawn between the old regiments alone on the one hand, and the new on the other, the difference in the figures would have been yet more striking. As it is, they point a dismal moral against the wastefulness of the system now in force. As the Times of India puts it, "To send a regiment home after it has undergone this process of seasoning, and replace it by another, which must go through the same melancholy course of weeding out, seems very like a wanton, because an avoidable, sacrifice of human life." The true remedy for this needless waste of life and money is not to be found in any plan which has yet been propounded for reconciling the principle of short enlistments with the special requirements of Indian service. It can only be found in a return to the old system of enlisting soldiers for British regiments permanently quartered in India. In a local British army recruited, let us say, for ten years' service, with power of re-enlistment for five years more, lies the only way of escape from the difficulties entailed by the various changes and reforms of the last eighteen years.

In spite of all that has been said and written about the recent fall in the value of silver, fresh utterances on the same subject continue to claim our attention. Mr. Hynes, of the Madras Mint, in a pamphlet published out there, gives many excellent reasons for introducing a gold standard into India, where, by his showing, gold is at this moment stored among the people to the extent of more than 100 millions sterling. Mr. J. Maclaren's pamphlet on "The Indian Exchange," lately published in London, deals mainly with the question how farthe present cheapness of silver at home can affect the purchasing power of the rupee in India. His chief aim is to show-"first, that a very long period must elapse before the currency of India can be sufficiently expanded to restore the former rate of exchange by a general rise of prices in India; and, secondly, that the so-called demand for silver caused by a fall in the value of that metal, cannot give rise to any increase of its price. Without putting forth any definite scheme of his own, he seems to favour the idea of closing the Indian mints to the free coinage of silver, as a temporary expedient which could easily be laid aside if it failed to answer its supposed object. The root of the present evil lies, he thinks, in the "power ot." sending cheap silver to India, and there converting it without expense into money," thereby entailing such heavy loss on remitters from India. In view of the present state of the French currency, he can see "no reason why the rupee currency of. India, when silver is demonetised and the rupees have become tokens, should not be equally so managed" as to involve neither loss nor gain to any party. The indefatigable M. Cornuschi has republished in a pamphlet form under the title of "Silver Vindicated" the paper which he read the other day before the Social Science Congress at Liverpool. As our readers are already aware, his special remedy for all the troubles and alarms arising from the present state of the silver market is "Universal Bi-Metallism," or the double standard in gold and silver, based on the French proportion of 151 of silver to 1 of gold. In the clear and trenchant language of which he is master, M. Cernuschi deals with the Silver Crisis, the Indian Exchange, the expedients hitherto proposed, and the objections to his own remedy. We are glad to hear that he has gained a powerful convert to his ideas in the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce, whose prayer for an international conference on M. Cernuschi's proposals has already, we believe, been laid before the Ministry. To the same effect has the Netherlands Society for the progress of industry addressed the King of Holland, pointing out the important part played by the double currency of France in averting the danger threatened to goldusing countries by the sudden influx of gold from California and Australia, and urging the necessity of restoring a stable value to silver by a general adoption of the French principle, based on the French proportion of 1 to 151.

ANOTHER stout champion of the same cause is Mr. Stephen Williamson, whose "second letter" to the President of the Liverpool Chamber expounds at due length his "Reasons for the adoption of a Bi-metallic Money System." With regard to the proposed ratio of 1 to  $15\frac{1}{2}$ , Mr. Williamson so far differs from M. Cernuschi that he would leave that question to be settled by competent judges. He would also be content to see the experiment of free gold and silver coinage carried out, in the first instance, by Great Britain and the United Scates, in concert with France, leaving Germany and other Powers to follow in good time the example thus set. For our part, we should like to see the experiment at once begun in India. Even if it led to the final adoption of a single gold standard in India also, such a result would at least be preferable to the maintenance of a silver standard under existing conditions. But we still hold with M. Cernuschi and his friends that nothing is so likely to ensure stability of exchange between the two metals, and therefore to promote the interests of sound trade, as the general adoption of that self-adjusting system of double currency which France accepted in the beginning of this century, and which England a few years later rashly discarded after using it more or less unskilfully for five hundred years.

WE learn that Mr. Valentine Prinsep has been commissioned by the Governor-General of India to paint a large picture in commemoration of the assumption by her Majesty of the newlycreated title of Empress. He will shortly proceed to India in order to be present at the formal issue of the Imperial proclamation at Delhi, which ceremony is to form the subject of the painter's composition. The picture is intended as a gift from the Governor-General to the Queen, and as a record of a very interesting event in her Majesty's reign. It is to be hoped that Mr. Prinsep will find time to draw a few homelier pictures of the country in which more than one of his gifted uncles turned their artistic skill to good account.

INDIA'S MORAL AND MATERIAL PROGRESS.—II.

UNDER the head of Finance there is not much of importance to note. A movement against the sale of spirituous drinks under the present system was met by Sir R. Temple with an assurance that the amount consumed per head in Bengal is very small indeed, and that the excise system tends to check rather than encourage the use of "liquors, spirits, and drugs." Further restrictions would only lead, he added, to fresh evasions of the law. The mass of the people, it seems, are still sober, but drinking has spread among "some sections of the educated classes of Calcutta, and other large centres," especially among youths and young men. In Bombay and Oudh there was a good deal of opium smuggling. In the Central Provinces some steps were taken to check the comsumption of ganja, a drug made from hemp. The salt-revenue of Bengal was larger than it had ever been for ten years back, and this owing to increased consumption. The local manufacture held its own fairly against the imported salt. There was a marked increase in the imports of salt from Italy. In Orissa, where salt is used for exchange and barter, the lowering of the duty served to stimulate production in the northern and encourage the import of Ganjam salt into the southern More salt of a better quality was consumed in Bombay, with improved results on the revenues. Most of the salt makers in the Konkan refused at first to take out the licenses required by the Bombay Salt Act of 1873, but their resistance has since been gradually overcome by good management on the part of those who had to work the Act. The Kharagora salt-works, as finally opened in 1873, were already yielding more than a million maunds of first-class salt, of which an increasing quantity found its way into the Central Provinces and Berar, supplanting in great measure the more heavily taxed salt from Rajputana. The removal of the old Customs line has been hailed as a real boon by the people of Central India, who are no longer tempted to fall back on smuggling.

The gradual extension of the road-cess throughout the more settled districts of Bengal had caused no discontent among those who paid it. The Zamindars no longer opposed a measure which encroached upon none of their rights. The circulation of the paper currency had largely increased in Bengal, where the notes are freely used by the mercantile classes for purposes of remittance. The imports of silver during 1874 were more than a million above those for the previous year, nearly half a million being sent by Germany alone. Hence arose much of the increased export of cotton, while, owing to the uncertain state of the silver market, the value of silver fell to 55\frac{1}{2}d. per ounce. Gold on the other hand rose in price, and was largely imported.

The survey work in the different provinces made good progress. In the Central Provinces the Revenue Survey was completed. The survey of Berar disclosed the fact of an important difference between the areas of land actually measured and the much smaller areas assessed for land revenue. With regard to the Statistical Survey under Dr. Hunter, it appears that its successful completion over British India is now assured, but that in the Native States the work is still very backward.

There was a sensible increase in the land-revenue of Bengal The advantages of our settlement system in and Madras. Bombay are strikingly illustrated by the account of a táluk, once among the poorest in the Dakhan, which now yields with ease a revenue more than treble that of thirty years ago. Of the arable land in this táluk more than 50 per cent. was waste in 1838, but only 1 per cent. in 1871. In the Kaladgi and Dharwar districts the general improvement has also been very great. That the present rates of assessment are moderate may be inferred from the fact that the value of land in Punah and Sholapur is reckoned at from eight to twelve years' purchase of the revised assessment. In almost every other Province the land-revenue continued to increase. Under the revised settlement in Ajmir a much lower assessment than before has now been carried out. In the Punjab new settlements have been completed in Dera Ghazi Khan and Hazara for twenty and thi ty years respectively. Increased cultivation and a rise in the value of land bear witness to the lightness of the new assessments.

The condition of the rayats in Bengal Proper has greatly improved during the last few years. Under the rent laws of 1859 and 1869 a large number of tenants-at-will have been converted by lapse of time into occupancy tenants, who cannot be ejected while they pay their rents, and whose rent can be raised only by a court of law. At the same time the disputes between landlord and tenant as to their several shares in the enhanced profits from the land have grown more and more frequent, nor is it always the Zamindar who has come off worst. A certain improvement in the general bearing of the Zamindars towards their tenants and in their views of public duty is attested by Sir R. Temple himself. The tendency to "sub-infeudation," or underletting of the land, is greatly increasing in Bengal; but it seems that the small underholders eke out their means by following other pursuits than husbandry. With regard to the illegal cesses in Orissa, it is true that they give room for much oppression; but the growth of a new spirit of intelligent self-reliance among the peasantry tends to restrict the tyranny of the zamindars, while some of the cesses are readily paid by the rayats in preference to paying the same amount as regular rent. Nor has the Punjab Tenancy Act produced that crop of litigation between landlord and tenant which many people once feared it would. In the year under review only one landholder in 1,180 and one tenant in 1,160 were sued. For the settlement proceedings in the Central Provinces the Government have laid down a good rule, which assures all cultivators a steady tenure of their holdings, so long as they pay the rent fixed at the time of settlement.

The proceedings of the Inam Commission in Madras were nearly brought to a close in the year under notice. They have resulted in a clear gain of £80,000 a-year to the revenue, while the holders of the estates thus brought into the fiscal net now enjoy a clear Government title to their lands. With regard to the condition of the cultivating classes, or rayats, it appears that the amount of debt among those in Bengal, however great, is "not excessively burdensome." In Madras also the peasantry, as a rule, are fairly prosperous, to judge from the ease with which the land-revenue is collected. The bulk of the Bombay peasantry appear to be fast recovering from the distress into which unfavourable seasons and other causes had lately plunged them. It is admitted, however, that the money-lenders too often use the law for purposes of mere extortion. The transfers of land in the Punjab were compulsory only in one case out of 540, and the bulk of the land transferred passed into the hands not of money-lenders but of agriculturists. In the Central Provinces there was a large decrease in the number of compulsory registrations, and the sales of land in Berar were very few compared with the number of decrees issued.

GANG ROBBERIES. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

No body of people has ever shown greater indifference to the form of its government than the village communities of India. Provided they are left in peaceable possession of their land, and the assessment on it continues moderate, Hindoo, Mohammedan, and English ruler is accepted in turn without the smallest exhibition of dissatisfaction.—Chesney's "Indian Polity," page 215.

SIR,—In my letters of the 8th and 21st of July, 1873, I attempted to warn the nation against the dangers attending the prevalence of dacoity or gang robbery in India, and to show that it invariably indicates incipient rebellion.

When bands of from twenty to forty men attack villages, and plunder, torture, and kill openly with lighted torches, a contempt for the Government is displayed, which contempt must be punished or anarchy will ensue. As we now see taking place in Sicily, so in India witnesses will not some forward unless they have some hope of protection from the vengeance of the friends of the robbers.

In Bengal, according to the official Blue-book published this month (page 7), felouies against the person and property have risen from 1,202 to 2,010; gang robberies are perpetuated, and the attention of the police has been called to the discreditable fact that some of the old gang leaders remain at large.

In the Bombay Presidency there has been a great increase in the more serious offences against the person. The year under review in the Blue-book has been—

Marked by the presence in the Poona and Tanna districts of armed robber gangs; in the former district sixteen, and in the latter thirty-one dasoities occurred. Bodies of men entered villages with the utmost effrontery, and, owing to the terror they inspired, there was the greatest difficulty in obtaining information against them. An armed police force of 175 men was detailed to operate against these dasoits, and rewards ranging from £100 downwards were announced for the capture of their leaders. A great deal of hard work and expense was undergone by the parties in pursuit, the ghats being an inclement country during a monsoon; but the gang was only once surprised, and then unsuccessfully. But though the leaders escaped, eight of the robbers were captured and sentenced to penal servitude for life, and check was given to the restlessness excited.—Page 7 of the "Blue-book."

The police are not usually so successful in tracing up gang and other robberies as in other serious crimes; special measures appear to be required to check the depredations of wandering and criminal tribes in the Southern districts, and an inquiry into the whole subject has been directed.

It is useless in India to attempt to break up gangs of dacoits by sending 175 armed policemen scampering after these invisible foes. This is the dodge which has been tried with so little success in Sicily. Even Aurungzebe's police did not rely on so ineffectual a device for catching Mahrattas.

When crime is openly committed by a gang of thirty men, the detective police, if good for anything, should be enabled to lay their hands on one or more of them, and the conviction of one should lead to the conviction of all, unless the peasantry be disaffected towards the Government, or be living without hope of protection from the robbers. I have frequently pointed out that, if one or more firearms were intrusted to the loyal headmen of villages, the detection of gang robbers would be facilitated by the opportunity of wounding and thus marking one of the gang.

I was glad yesterday to learn that after four years of defiance of the law, during which felonies have been constantly perpetrated with impunity, the special police have succeeded in capturing two notorious leaders of a gang of robbers who have disturbed for so long the peace of the Tanna, Poena, Ahmednuggur, and Nassick districts. (See the Resolution of the Bombay Government of the 12th ult.) Captain Daniel ought not to rest until he has seized every member of the gang.

I grieve to read in page 8 of the Blue-book that in the North-Western Provinces, formerly the best governed in India, and of which the chief cities are Agra and Allahabad, 120 gang robberies have been committed during the year under review.

Let us always bear in mind that there are two causes for the prevalence of dacoities:—

1st.—The discontent of the peasantry.

"The result of the Revenue Survey operations was an increased assessment to the extent of £18,263. The increases were carefully considered, and are believed to be moderate. Remissions were also made chiefly in the Poonah and Sholapur Collectorates, in consequence of the fall of prices being occasioned by the cultivators' difficulty in meeting the claims upon them.—Page 23 of the "Blue-book."

Why has the report of the Poona Commission on the agrarian disturbances not been published?

2nd.—The neglect of measures for protecting the peasantry against the covetousness and vengeance of the robbers.

What I wish to impress upon the minds of the old ladies in England is, that, in the event of a widespread rebellion, their 4 and 5 per cent. might fall from 100 to 60, and some uncertainty might arise regarding the payment in full of their dividends. I do not for a moment mean to hint that the daring Secretary and mellifluous-tongued Under-Secretary would think of imitating the Turkish Government, but they would borrow recklessly and expend prodigally, as they did in 1874, and it would be difficult just now to increae the Indian revenue by ten millions sterling.—Your obedient servant, October 27.

INDIAN CURRENCY REFORM.

The Pioneer thinks it is plain that if Government stopped the coinage of silver, and opened its mints for the coinage of gold, the new metal would eventually come in, much as silver comes in now. Merchants would buy gold and ship it to India to pay for produce as they have heretofore been in the habit of shipping silver. The attitude of non-interference with the bullion market always maintained by the Government need be in no way altered by the change in the nature of the metal to be dealt with. As to the inconvenience of employing a gold currency in India, by reason of its involving a large unit, its opponents seem to have lost sight of what would be the natural course of things. It is not proposed on the plan we are considering to demonetise silver forcibly, but simply that the coining of silver should be suspended, and that gold only should be received at the Indian mints. Assuming that the plan proved successful, and that gold were brought to the Indian mints, the amount of that coinage would reach in the present state of trade about three millions sterling a year. For the moment we ignore the considerations which tend to show that the passent state of trade is one That is a contingency that the opponents of gold that cannot last. almost invariably disregard, and we must deal with their arguments on the basis of their own hypotheses. Now, we know that about 200 millions sterling of rupees have been coined and put into circulation in India during the last forty years. A large part of this sum may have been withdrawn from the currency and melted down for ornaments. On the other hand, the coining of rupees did not begin in 1835. There must have been a considerable stock of money in the country before that time; however, without now attempting to make an accurate estimate, let us, for the convenience of the present discussion, assume the existing stock of rupees to amount to 100 millions sterling. Then at the end of the first year, instead of there being 103 millions sterling of rupees in circulation, there would be 100 millions of rupees, and three millions of gold coins.

At the end of the second year there would be six millions of gold and 100 millions or something less of silver as before, instead of 106 millions of rupees. This would be the amount of the currency, supposing things to be left to take care of themselves, and the annual balance of trade to remain unaltered. Is it not plain, from the mere statement of the case, that the disturbance caused to the operation of the currency within India would be very slight? Most operations conducted by the agency of money would be effected as before, entirely through the medium of silver. Mr. Goschen, in a speech which seems to have given so much satisfaction to the Economist and to the members of the Home Government, laid great stress on the inconvenience to a poor community of substituting gold for silver as the standard coin, and was full of pity for the unfortunate people of Germany, who, by the demonetisation of silver lately effected in that country, are now compelled to employ the new gold coins for all the operations of daily life, instead of the silver ones with which they are accustomed to transact business. But it is obvious that all this sympathy is quite beside the mark in any supposed bearing it has on the matter at issue. Silver would be available in India, at any rate for many years to come, to any extent, and we have proof at all events that there is room in Indian business for some amount of gold coins, in the fact that not only are there many millions sterling of 10-rupee notes in circulation at the present moment, but that there is a use for notes of much larger denomination. It may be safely predicted that the class of transactions now dealt with by currency notes would, with equal convenience, he effected through the medium of gold coins of 10 rupees, and that the general business of the country would continue to be carried on by silver, where silver is used at present, just as if no gold coins were in the country. But although the effect of the proposed measure would thus cause no appreciable disturbance to Indian internal trade, it would have a most important effect on the Indian exchanges, and would go far to remedy the present alarming condition of the Indian finances. If silver is no longer received at the Indian mints, while gold coins are, simultaneously with the change, received mints, while gold coins are, simultaneously with the change, received as legal tender, those who have to make payments in India will be obliged to remit gold. Now, upon the details of the proposed gold currency we will not enter, because they are not essential to the principle involved. It might, for example, be determined to accept the sovereign as a legal tender at the rate of one shilling and ten pence the rupee. Assuming, however, for the sake of argument, that Colonel Smith's arguments were adopted, and the sovereign admitted at the value of Rs. 10, then the effect of giving this arbitrary value to the rupee must, necessarily be this, it would be imtrary value to the rupee must necessarily be this, it would be immaterial to the merchant who has to make payments in India whether he made them in sovereigns or in bills of exchange payable in rupees. The sure and certain effect of this must be to send up the Indian exchanges to the par rate of two shillings the rupee, omitting the trifling abatement for the cost of sending gold bullion from Europe to India; in short, to rescue the Indian Government from its impending ruin.

THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT AND MR. WELD.

The Pioneer remarks that the Madras Government does not require to be told that an official, civil or military, who should dare to act in opposition to medical opinion would run the risk of dismissal from the service. With the zillah surgeon holding the same view as himself, it would have been gross neglect of duty on Mr. Weld's part had he remained supine; and if cholera had broken out within a few weeks afterwards, we should like to know what the Government would have said to his explanation of the presence of the corpse on the tank border. "He was a saint, therefore I let him alone." Would Mr. Weld have been patted on the back and told he had done right, or would he have been promptly wigged? We at least know which he would have deserved. Before leaving this point, it should be observed that the G.O. speaks of the corpse as "buried at a distance of 15 or 20 yards from the water, with a thick wall and a flight of steps intervening;" but from private information we are inclined to doubt the thickness of this wall and efficacy of these steps as hindrances to percolation. It is said that the foundations of the wall do not go so low as the bottom of the grave wherein the body is laid, and that the steps are nothing more than bricks or stones placed stepwise, but not cemented together. Mr. Weld could doubtless have spoken as to this had he been allowed to make a defence; but the Government preferred to take the ipse dixit of the son, who was kind enough to forward a plan of the tank with his petition. The third point is the most important of all. Mr. Weld stated that if the relatives did not within seven days remove the corpse he would have it buried "in the place called Hathoway's Park," or "dealt with in any other manner which may be convenient." The son of the deceased says in his petition:—
"The so-called park is notoriously the place set apart by the Municipal Commissioners in the south-west of Negapatam for the deposit of the night soil and rubbish of the town, and where, I believe, dogs of the night soil and rubbish of the town, and where, I believe, dogs are buried. Surely Mr. Weld could hardly expect me to . . . . understand that that place of filth was henceforward to form the future burial-ground for Hindu s univisis. That cannot be. The use of the words 'Hathaway's Park,' therefore, in the notice in question, was clearly to insult and annoy me and my family." These be "prave 'ords," but unfortunately they are not quite consistent with facts. Hathaway's Park is here represented to be neither more nor less a place of deposit for municipal awarenings and the bodies of slaughtered does. Hathaway's cipal sweepings and the bodies of slaughtered dogs. Hathaway's Park is in sober reality a place thirty-two acres in extent, two of which are devoted to the purposes named, while the remainder is divided between a Hindu burning ground and cultivation. Take this fact with Mr. Weld's words as quoted by us from his formal order, and then let any one, not absolutely Hindu-mad, say that there is the very slightest ground for alleging that he referred to the oljectionable corner of the park. But here as clsewhere the Madras Government has taken the ipse dixit of the complaining sheristadar, who belongs, be it remembered, to another distric His statements are "not weighed or winnowed," but "swallowed in the mass unchewed and crude." There is not, we assert, a tittle of evidence to show that Mr. Weld intended to insult the Hindu community in general, or the family of the deceased in particular. Hathaway's Park was in all probability mentioned as being the only plot of land available for burial purposes, but the addition of the words "or it will be dealt with in any other manner which may be convenient," goes far to show that Mr. Weld was ready to meet the wishes of the relations, so far as he could do so consistently with deign his date. with doing his duty.

INDIAN PECULIARITIES.

"What is the Hindu dance but to open and close the hands?" says the Pathan proverb; and, in truth, a natch, that supremest of pleasures to the dreamy, indolent Hindu, is apt to be somewhat of a penance to the more bustling Englishman. Than a natch, indeed, we know of nothing that brings into such strong relief the funda-mental differences of character and disposition that exist between the two races.

From sunset to sunrise the Indian will loll about his cushions and drink in the thin wail of his national music, and watch delightedly the posturings of much-adorned, many-tinkling young women, who, with languishing, outstretched arms, move so many paces forwards, then so many paces backwards, and then, slow-gyrating, spread out their garments, fan-tail pigeon fashion, and look as much as in them lies like drived devices. look, as much as in them lies, like dying ducks. And so on ad infinitum. It is a graceful performance, beyond a doubt; probably, there is in it more real dancing than will often be seen in a ballroom. Nevertheless, the Englishman wearies of the lazy on-looking in less than half an hour, although in a ball-room, doing his own dancing, and rejoicing in the physical exertion, he would, probably, be found indefatigable, and would certainly be an object of much wonder, and some contempt, to any natch-appreciating Oriental.

And the very best part of the orientalism that shows itself in a natch does not commend itself to the Englishman. The practical equality of man and man for all purposes of social intercourse; the feudal inter-dependence of master and servant; the freedom from affectation and bumptiousness ensuing on every mau's assurance of his proper position, and the immutability of caste distinctions—these are matters strange, foreign, and, in their outward development, somewhat exasperating to him; and his sense of order and the fitness of things is vexed by the crowd of half-nude natives that surges complacently all round and about the dancing enclosure, and he is really shocked when a fat Babu, fat baby on hip, penetrates into the enclosure, and mingles with the instrumentalists, and looks as unconscious of any breach of order and as happy as if he were an integral part of the tamasha.

On the other hand, it is extremely probable that the crowd thinks the Englishman extremely stuck-up, and stupid, and disagreeable.

Then, again, the Englishman, if he goes to an entertainment, expects to be regaled with supper, and strong meats and drinks, while the ideas of the veriest gourmand amongst Hindus do not soar beyond a profusion of ghi and sweetmeats; and champagne and turkey are equally abominations to him, even though, in the fulness of his hospitality, he will provide these for his Western guest, of such strange appetites. It is sad, indeed, when two would-be friends have not even a community of interests in their dinner table.

Studied superficially, even the divergence of taste and habit between Europeans and natives, which a natch discloses, show how immense are the difficulties in the way of any real social intercourse between the two peoples, however much this may be desired on both sides.—Englishman.

Miscellaneous.

LIBEL AGAINT the "STAR OF INDIA."—An inspector of police at Ajmeer, has, we read, filed a suit for libel against the Star of India newspaper, laying his damages at Rs. 10,000.—Englishman, Oct. 10.

SUICIDE OF A JOCKEY .- The Englishman hears that Hastings, the well-known jockey, when coming to Calcutta, on board the Socotra, from Ceylon, where he had ridden successfully in some of the races, threw himself overboard when the steamer was off Ceylon, and was drowned.

RUMOURS FROM KABUL. - Indian Public Opinion has received advices from Central Asia confirming the reports that "there has been a Russian agent at Kabul, whose political mission, however, has heretofore been kept secret, and that Russia is reported to be making great preparations for an advance upon Merv, although when it may be actually made is, of course, uncertain, and contingent on future political events, which it is impossible to foretell with any approach to accuracy."

AN ACCIDENT TO THE PRINCIPAL OF THE DACCA COLLEGE.—The Bengal Times informs us that the late accident at rackets to Mr. Ewbank, Principal of the Dacca College, has resulted in the total loss of one eye, which he has had replaced by a glass one.—Englishman, Oct. 9.

CANDIDATES FOR AN INDIAN JUDGESHIP.—Among the candidates for an Indian Judgeship recently vacant was Mr. Montagu Williams; and it is said that had it not been essential that the holder of the offices should have been in the Indian civil service, the well-known London lawyer would have obtained the berth.—Indian Daily News, Oct. 9.

SILVER IMPORTS.—The Indian Daily News report: that silver bullion valued at about twenty-three lakhs of rupees, consigned to different parties, has lately arrived at Calcutta, and will, it is believed, shortly be made over to the Calcutta Mint. It is also said that advices have been received of a further consignment of about forty lakhs of rupees.

SIMLA.—Simla is not to be abandoned, though Peterhoff may be. A palace, built on Observatory Hill, remarks the Simla paper, will make any Viceroy hold a favourable opinion of this place, and as the Viceroy must be near his Council and the public offices, house proprietors at Simla may calm their anxieties, but it is to be hoped will repair their houses and not raise their rents along with their spirits.

Hospital Nurses.—The board of directors of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company have, on the recommendation of their agent in India, authorised the grant of an annual subscription of Rs. 200 to the Calcutta Hospital Nurses' Institution, in consideration of the company's servants, when in hospital, having the benefit of the services of the nurses, and of the institution being to a large extent dependent on voluntary subscriptions.

The Dengue.—This very painful disease has made its appearance again in Calcutta, there being several people who have been lately attacked with it. No doubt, Dr. Charles's most invaluable remedy will be called into requisition again. As the remedy is only known to the Christian population, it would be well for the Government to request that eminent physician to make his antidote known for the benefit of the poor as well as the rich.—Calcutta Statesman, Oct. 8.

STATE RAILWAYS.—We hear that the completion of the Nimach State Railway from the Fattiabad Junction to Ratlam, and on to Nimach, is to be pushed on at once. The line to Ratlam is to be opened in December. The Rajputana State Railway is also to push on the surveys from Nassirabad to Nimuch, so as to complete the Central India Railways during the next two years. The break beween Chural station and Mhau, owing to the late heavy rains having damaged the tunnels, is likely to be delayed in completion until the end of the next working season.—Englishman.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE AT A WEDDING PARTY.—At a wedding party last Friday night, at a house in Dhurrumtollah-street, a gentleman guest attempted suicide. He wounded himself in the throat with a knife. As the wound is not deep there are hopes of his recovery. As soon as the rash act was made known the ladies beat a hasty retreat out of the house. The nurel man was on the wedding day engaged in decorating the house, ha i ig very good taste as a florist, and at the time he made the attempt on his life he was in the refreshment-room; he was not intoxicated, and the cause is at present unknown.—Calcutta Statesman, Oct. 10.

Loss of the "Cawdor Castle."—A Court of Inquiry will shortly be held to ascertain the circumstances attending the loss of this vessel, which foundered at Kedgeree on Saturday afternoon. As was to be expected, the commander of the vessel blames the pilot, and the latter officer will have to be tried at the Marine Court. Three Europeans and five Chinamen are stated to have been drowned, but all the others have been safely picked up. A subscription has been opened on behalf of the destitute seamen, a portion of whom reached town the day before yesterday, on board the steamer Undaunted, which had been sent down the river for that purpose by the Bankshall authorities. The Cawdor Castle was, we understand, insured for a sum of £55,000.—Englishman, Oct. 13.

Case of Major Popham.—The consequences of borrowing money, even with the purest and most innocent motives, have been evidently serious to Major Popham, of the 16th Bengal Cavalry. He says that he borrowed money of the shroff of the regiment, in his capacity of money-lender, which appears to be the man's special occupation. The regimental accounts, however, turned out to be short, and in explanation the shroff said he had lent the money to Major Popham. A Court of Inquiry, we learn from a contemporary, has just closed an inquiry at Bareilly into the matter, but the result is not known. A material point will be whether the totals of the missing money and the loan to Major Popham agree. There was, it is said, no concealment on the part of the Major, but nothing more has transpired at present.

PROPOSED SCHOOL FOR ENGLISH GIRLS.—It is said by a Calcutta paper that a proposal has been made to start a boarding-school for European girls at Mussourie, the servants of which will be Europeans. The difficulty and cost will probably be great, but the low rates of exchange have already introduced many important changes.

The educational establishments at Mussourie are already numerous, so that the precise object of this new scheme is not very apparent, unless existing schools there are inefficient. If, however, a good boarding-school could be established in such a healthy locality, it would be sure to receive support from the English families in the Punjab, North-West, and Bengal. The Calcutta paper, in which the proposal is published, thinks that the prospects for Europeans are so bad in India that the sooner their children are sent to Europe the better.

The LATE Explosion on the River.—A man, named Sarrabaddi, who was wounded in the recent explosion, died yesterday morning from the effects of the injuries he received. He had been taken to the Mayo Hespital with a contused wound in his spine and in the right side of his abdomen. Peritonitis had some time previously set in, and his recovery from the first was considered doubtful. The coroner and a jury viewed the body of another man named Jinat Ali, who was killed during the explosion, and the inquest, at which all the circumstances connected with this tragic occurrence will be brought forward, will be held on the 12th instant. The khalasi, belonging to the Port Commissioners' heave-up boat No. 9, who had been received into the Mayo Hospital as one of the sufferers by the late explosion on board the torpedo-boat, died yesterday, from the effects of the injuries received.—Englishman, Oct. 13.

Money Advances on Crops.—A case of some interest to those who are in the habit of advancing money on growing crops has just occurred at Calcutta. Messrs. Moran and Co., of Calcutta, have been in the habit for several years of advancing money to a certain indigo factory, and at the close of the season receiving the crop in payment. The owner of the factory, a Hindoo, died, leaving two widows. The factory was mortgaged to a native banker, but Messrs. Moran and Co. made an advance of Rs. 83,000 as usual on the crop of 1873-74, but the produce for the first time was not forthcoming. Moran and Co. filed a suit against the two widows, and lost it; they then appealed to the High Court, Calcutta, and again lost their case; and now they intend, it is said, to appeal to the Privy Council. The Court has decided that Messrs. Moran and Co. have no claim upon the crops in the absence of clear and unmistakable proof that these widow ladies knew personally of Messrs. Moran's advances.

A Dreadful and Destructive Disease.—An eye-witness writes as follows to the Englishman:—A dreadful disease, becoming well-known under the name of kotkotia, has broken out in several parts of North-Eastern Bengal. It is rumoured to have first made its appearance in some villages near Ampta, whence its ravages have extended to the extreme eastern part of Calcutta; but now it has spread all over the country lying on both sides of the Ganges. It is somewhat like the poison of the cotra. It first attacks either the toes or the fingers, and then affects the whole body, when it becomes dangerous and destructive to human life. Yesterday, at about five o'clock, a carpenter and a Hindustani of Sibpore were attacked by this disease, and there being no remedy at hand, they first bound their fingers with strings, and then applied a native antidote, named Gritokumari, by which means they have been cured. However, as the d'sease is most prevalent here, I think it is necessary for our medical practitioners not to leave a stone unturned to find some sure and immediate remedy for the poison; and I shall feel much obliged if you will kindly give this letter a prominent insertion, so as to attract their attention.

The Proposed Indian Settlement in New Zealand.—We have before us the reply of Sir Douald Maclean, the Minister of the New Zealand Government, most concerned in the disposal of land, in answer to a proposition forwarded from India, to start, on terms favourable as to periods of payment, a special Indian settlement in the colony. The settlement in question, if established, would be more or less of a private character; but, if the principles of the scheme were accepted in one case, they might be in another. It is the opinion of the Minister, that such a settlement would be successful; but, until certain measures have been discussed, and decided upon by the local Parliament, it is impossible for him to give a final answer. The management and disposal of lands acquired under the Immigration and Public Works Acts will have to be considered. When it has been settled whether they shall be transferred from the provisional to the general Government, Sir Donald Maclean will be able to give a final answer to the proposal submitted to him, and he has promised to send, at the same time, whatever regulations may have been enacted for the disposal of the waste lands under the Crown, as well as any further information that may be required.—Pioneer.

THE CROPS.—Reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 5th Oct., 1876, state that.—In Madras good rain is reported from Madura; elsewhere it has been light, and prospects are said to be unchanged. In Mysore showers have fallen throughout the province with good effect, but much more rain is required to ma erially improve the condition of the crops. In Bombay there has been no rain in Sind, Guzerat, or the Konkan, but prospects are there good. Very little rain has fallen in Kandeish and the Deccan districts, and the kharif crops are withering, and the sowing of the rabi being retarded. In the Southern Mahratta Country the fall has been somewhat more copious, but partial; where none has fallen prospects continue to be In Berar no rain has fallen, and some is wanted for the rabi sowings. In the Central Provinces slight falls are reported from only four districts; prospects are good. No rain has fallen in Central India, where the crops promise well. In Rajpootana rain is reported from Aboo, Marwar, and Meywar; prospects are excellent. In Bengal there has been general rain, and the prospects of the rice crops are everywhere good. Reports from Assan are favourable. Rain has fallen in the North-Western Provinces only in Benares, Allahabad, and Kumaon; the crops are in good condition. In Oudh rain fell at Lucknow and Fyzabad; prospects are favourable. No rain is reported from the Punjab, except showers at Lahore and Peshawur; the crops promise well.

Memorial to Dr. Oldham.—We understand that a subscription is being raised by the Asiatic Society to obtain a memorial bust of Dr. Thomas Oldham, late President of the Society, in recognition of his eminent services to the Society and to geological science in India. For this purpose the sum of Rs. 1,500 to Rs. 2,000 is required, of which upwards of Rs. 700, including donations from the Viceroy and Sir R. Temple—and not, as stated by the Pioneer, Rs. 500—have been already subscribed. The following extract from the records of the Geological Survey is sufficient testimony to the importance of Dr. Olcham's services :- "To appreciate fully what he has effected one should have experience of the position, where every means, material and personal, had to be formed or imported; and, further, one should see what is only known to those present, the very valuable library and the extensive collections brought together by his care. Due honour paid to the intelligent liberality of the Government of India, it is to Dr. Oldham, whether as Superintendent of the Geological Survey, or as President of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, more than to any other man, that Calcutta owes the magnificent Museum building it can now boast of. All this he now leaves to his colleagues and successors. Failing health compels him to retire from the service and leave the country before he could give form and unity to his labours. Those who reap where he has sown should ever remember the great debt they owe to Dr. Oldham."-Englishman.

THE LATE MAHOMMEDAN DEMONSTRATION IN BOMBAY.—In spite of the late Mahommedan demonstration in Bombay, in spite of the meeting of Saturday last in our own city, we have little doubt that Lord Northbrook's estimate of the degree of interest in the Turk taken by the Mussulman community of India, as a class, comes very near the truth. Though it is possible to mistake order for apathy, and though the Indian Mussulman is given to outward demonstrations of excitement only when his immediate interests or prejudices are at stake, there is abundant evidence that the movement in Bombay had its origin in the private ambition of a few shrewd indivi-duals, to whom, however, no discredit is necessarily due for their action. The Calcutta meeting of Saturday appears to have been very similar in its character. The great mass of the Mahommedans of India are too ignorant for any country so remot as Turkey, or anything so abstract as the headship of Islam, to have much hold upon their imaginations; too much engrossed with their own daily needs to take a lively interest in distant political complications. The occasion was one which would naturally be seized by men desirous of keeping themselves prominently before their co-religionists. The cause was one to which every good Mussulman was, in common decency, bound to subscribe, however little his feelings might be involved. Beyond this, these expressions of sympathy have no poli-Involved. Beyond this, these expressions of sympathy have no political significance whatever. Great credit is, we think, due to the promoters of the Calcutta meeting for the moderate and unpretentious character of the resolutions.—Englishman, Oct. 9.

FRONTIER NEWS.—Punjab frontier news is not assuring. The Akund of Swat, whose great age and saintly character have inspired his people with great veneration for him, is on the point of death. The loss of his advice will be felt greatly by the wild tribes in that mountainous district, and will be injurious probably to our interests on the Punjab frontier, more particularly as the Akund's probable successor, his eldest son, who has been at variance with his father for some years past, is said to be a turbulent character and will doubtless have many enemies. The Akund wishes his youngest son to succeed him. He is said to be too young for such a position, and it is added that the friends of the Akund object to the old man's appointment of this youth to succeed him, and disturbances are anticipated as soon as the Akund has passed away. These circumstances, in conjunction with the apparent impossibility of our Government settling matters with the Afreedes, not only render a campaign against them in the cold weather probable, but also an advance beyond Peshawur for the purpose of establishing order among these rancorous tribes. We cannot withdraw our troops when once this advance has been made for fear that the disturbances would all begin again if we did. The Amir of Kabul will necessarily look with suspicion on any movement we may make across the frontier from Peshawur. Later information tends to confirm the statement already made that Russia recently sent an envoy to Kabul. Russia's proceedings in Central Asia continue without change, and the necessity of her communicating with Kabul seems to become every year more imperative. The affairs of Central Asia as well as of Kabul compel the attention of the Government of India. - Bombay Gazette.

A MILITARY APPOINTMENT. - Major Renton, magistrate of Mysor, has been appointed to succeed Major Stewart as Military Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Mysor, an appointment which on all hands is considered a sinecure, and may well be abolished. But Mysor is a wealthy province, and can well afford to maintain appointments more ornamental than useful. - Madras Standard, Oct. 9.

CHIEF COMMISSIONER OF MYSOR.—Mr. C. B. Saunders, C.B., Chief Commissioner of Mysor, with his Highness the Maharajah of Mysor and suite will leave Bangalore by special train about the middle of December next, for Delhi. Business will be carried on during Mr. Saunders's absence by Major Tredway Clarke, the secretary. - Madras Mail. Oct. 9.

DEPARTURE OF THE BODY GUARD DETACHMENT FOR DELHI.—The detachment of the Governor's Body Guard, which was under orders for Delhi, left Madras by special train at 4.30 p.m. yesterday. There was a very large concourse of Mahommedans at the Central Station to see them off. The Governor's Band was also there, and played the detachment out.-Medras Mail, Oct. 11.

MANDALAY.-It is stated by a Rangoon paper that trade in Mandalay is at a standstill, owing to the high rates of Customs duties levied by the King on the products for exportation to Rangoon. The shippers have withheld their goods until some satisfactory arrangement is made by his Majesty to lower the rates. For the past week or so the flats of the Flotilla Company have come down literally empty. A representation has been made by the traders at the capital to the King, through the Resident.

RETURN OF LADY ANNA GORE LANGTON.—Lady Anna and Miss Gore Langton arrived in Madras on Saturday, Oct. 7, in the s.s. Asia, from Cocanada, and were met on board by Major Bertie Hobart, the Military Secretary to the Governor. The Master 'Attendant's barge conveyed the ladies to the pier, where a carriage was in waiting to receive them, and conveyed them to Government They will return to England next month in Messrs. Green's steamer Sultan, in which vessel they came out with his Grace the Governor last November.

A USEFUL COLONEL.—If those who have the reorganisation of the native army at heart wish for a fact to show how miserably under officered native regiments are, here is one. Yesterday there was only one European officer belonging to the 37th M.N.I. available for duty of any kind, and he was the colonel commanding. The adjutant was acting as wing officer and quartermaster in addition to his own duties, but being himself on the sick list, the colonel was everything except the doctor of the regiment, and even the regimental doctor is away on leave, his place being filled by an outsider. - Madras Athenaum.

THE MONSOON.—We learn by telegram from Bimlipatam that a strong gale was blowing there on Saturday, and that the appearance of the weather was decidedly cyclonic. That same morning, early, there was a strong gust of wind from the north, accompanied by a very heavy shower in Madras, a circumstance that almost justifies us in holding that the north-east monsoon has begun. Meanwhile, at a time when Madras is peculiarly liable to maritime disasters, the head of the Marine department is always acting as extra skipper of his Grace the Governor's pleasure yacht, which has probably got out of monsoonish influences by this time by steering towards the Andamans.—Madras Times, Oct. 9.

SIR SALAR JUNG.—The Sikandarabad correspondent of the Bombay Gazette says:—"Sir Salar Jung is quite a prisoner to his palace, owing to a peculiar complication of Court etiquette, which requires that he should, on his return to the capital, first pay his respects to the young Nizam before he can go out anywhere else, and before he can even receive visitors himself. The accident which his Excellency met with in Europe prevents his going through the Court salaams and other ceremonies; and, as he is not by any means well of his accident, the inference is that he may have to dwell in retirement for some months yet, unless, indeed, his Highness accords him a special dispensation."

NEGAPATAM.—The Madras Mail states that the family of the deceased Sanniassi at Negapatam have declined to be relieved by Government of "all expense connected with the provision of the second burial place, and the ceremonies on the re-interment." Collector was instructed in the Government Order to "ascertain the amount from them, and at once to reimburse it, reporting his proceedings for confirmation." But the family have no wish to be indebted to the Government in any way with respect to the expenses. The Mail thinks this is creditable to them, and adds that they have no intention of proceeding against Mr. Weld criminally or civilly.

COFFEE CROP OF COORG.—The coffee crop of Coorg this year will not, we regret to learn, be an average one, and on the ghaut them, and they are found to contain nothing but black beans half-formed and partly rotten. This is the case to the extent of fifty per cent., and in some estates to even more. Young coffee, with maiden crops, is as bad as the old, whether highly cultivated or not. If the other districts are affected in the same manner as Coorg there will be a serious falling off in the shipments of coffee from India. - Madras Mail.

THE NIZAM.—Our faithful ally the Nizam of Haidarabad is likely to attain a notoriety again in the politics of India, similar to what he acquired in connection with the visit of the Prince of Wales, if a rumour current should prove true. It is said that the young Nizam is as averse to going to Delhi on the occasion of the Imperial assemblage there as he was to going to Bombay to meet his Royal Highness, and that Sir Richard Meade, the Resident, evidently profiting by the experience of Mr. Saunders in a similar predicament, has gone to Simla to take the Viceroy's verbal instructions on the matter. What excuse the Nizam can urge this time in apology for non-attendance we cannot say, but whatever he may urge, the suspicion will be inevitable that he is standing on his dignity should he not attend, and it is to be hoped that he will not be so ill-advised as to make himself thus ridiculous.—Madras Times, Oct. 14.

THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSOR.—A correspondent writes :time to time recently it has been rumoured that the Maharajah is not to come to reside at Bangalore, but it is yet premature to jumping to this conclusion. No doubt it is patent that Colonel Malleson's sway has been far from having been palatable to the Royal household, and hence it is almost an impossibility to expect the palace ladies to allow the young Prince to leave the capital. But I have reason to know that since Mr. Saunders's arrival and Captain Wilson's nomination, the irritated feelings of the Ranees have very much been appeased, and both officers, being perfectly conversant with the ins and outs of native Courts, are trying their best to adopt a conciliating and justifiable policy without sacrificing the due dignity of the British power. Hence it is still under discussion whether the prince should not be brought over during his minority, for after 1881 his own inclinations cannot be interfered with. Bangalore Spectator.

THE GOVERNOR .- No tidings have been received regarding the Tenasserim, in which his Grace the Governor, with his daughters and the Commander-in-Chief, embarked at Vizagapatam on the evening of the 3rd instant, although warned that he would encounter a storm, such as is usual in that latitude at this time of the year if he persisted; and as intelligence has been received that the coast from Vizagapatam to Chicacole, a distance of sixty miles, was visited thirty or thirty-six hours after his embarkation by a storm of great severity, which continued for full two days and committed considerable damage, some anxiety has been felt at Madras on account of the party. It is feared that the Tenasserim must have run into this storm, and that her arrival at Port Blair and at Rangoon, where she was due about three days ago, was thereby delayed. If bad weather was experienced the Governor probably relinquished the voyage to the Andamans, and has steered to Ceylon. However, tidings regarding the Tenasserim are anxiously awaited, and we may ear something this day.-Madras Times, Oct. 14.

STATE OF THINGS IN MOMEIN.—The Rangoon Gazette has received further authentic intelligence regarding the insurrection at Momein, from which it appears that literally nothing has been done by the Chinese Imperial authorities towards the suppression of the rebellion seyond posting a body of some 3,000 troops, under the command of General Tien, at a distance of about fifty miles to the eastward of Momein. The object of posting this force in this position was to protect the wealthy and important town of Young Chang from the attack of the rebels, to whom it would otherwise prove an easy prize, and of very material assistance, as its capture would not only supply the sinews of war, but also furnish an additional quota of restless and dissatisfied men to the rebel ranks. is hard to say when this rebellion, which rose from a very insignificant cause, is likely to be put down. State movements are slow in China, and the latter requires at present all her forces to retrieve the disasters she has met with at Yacoob Khan's hands of late. It is not improbable that, before the Central Government takes any really energetic steps in the matter this rebellion will have spread over the whole of Yunan and the adjoining provinces.

LEGAL REMEMBRANCER.—A civilian, Mr. J. R. Navlor, has been appointed Legal Remembrancer at Bombay, to the great indignation of the junior barristers, as the appointment has always hitherto been held by a barrister.

DISTRESS IN SHOLAPUR.—It appears that there is actually a famine in the large and important collectorate of Sholapur. The Collector is endeavouring to employ the starving people on relief works, but these are small, and will soon come to an end. The distress is greatest in the interior of the collectorate, where there are no relief works, and the people are clamouring for food with such violence that it is reported military aid has been called for. The Government of Bombay has hitherto done nothing to alleviate the distress, although it must have been brought prominently under their BARODA.-English barristers are, a contemporary states, not permitted by Sir Madhava Rao to practice in the Baroda Courts. No reason is given for this prohibition, but probably English barristers might find themselves rather like fish out of water in Baroda Courts. A greater novelty, however, than putting such fish as English barristers on Baroda gravel paths would be regularly published reports of the proceedings in the Baroda Courts; both English barristers and the British public might then be taught some instructive lessons about the administration of the Baroda State which now they cannot learn, and probably the subjects of the Gaikwar would derive considerable advantages from the tuition.

THE ARABIAN COAST.—The Times of India reports that the two towns of Shair and Makalla, on the Arabian Coast, still continue their feuds with varying fortune. A couple of Arab buggalows, which arrived in Bombay harbour some few days back, have brought the tidings of a severe defeat sustained by the Chief of the latter, in the course of a recent engagement on land. All the baggage, guns, and ammunition belonging to Makalla have been seized by his adversary, who has, moreover, succeeded in re-capturing a number of towns, of which he had been deprived at the close of a former contest. The Sultan of Hadramat having, it is reported, rendered valuable and to the Chief of Makalla for some time past, the latter has been enabled to hold his own, but a well-planned attack by the troops of Shair has caused a panic amongst his opponent's followers, the result being the victory above-mentioned. The British authorities at Aden still maintain a neutral attitude, letting the hostile Chiefs fight out their battles so long as their operations are confined to land, but it is stated a stronger sympathy is felt at Aden for Makalla than for Shair.

CHILD LABOURERS IN THE LOCAL MILLS .- The Sayta Mitra says:—In Germany and other parts of Europe children of both sexes, from twelve to fourteen years of age, do not work, or in reality their countries' laws do not allow them to work, more than six hours a day; and therefore the manufacturers of these countries have of late bitterly complained and petitioned their Government, that under such disadvantages they are not able to produce goods as cheaply as the British millowners who get their work done by children of much younger age and for a longer time. But done by children of much younger age and for a longer time. But we are really surprised to see that even in Bombay a maximum of nearly ten hours' work is fixed for youths and girls of about ten years of age. These young employés work cheerfully and untiringly the whole time, besides they almost daily play and sing till a late hour in the night, in their own homes, again rising early in the morning as fresh as larks. These hardy children of the ghauts are inured from their infancy to labour, toil and hardships, as well as cold and heat and consequently they are the most respectively. as well as cold and heat, and consequently they are the most remarkable fatigue-bearing people on the face of the earth. Our firm impression is that owing to the age at which these juvenile workers are taught to commence their apprenticeship, they will in course of time become as, if not more, skilled and dexterous as the working people of the best mills in England.

COTTON FRAUDS BILL.—A meeting of the Bombay Legislative Council took place at Puna on Wednesday, Oct. 4. The principal business transacted was the introduction of a new Cotton Frauds Act by the Hon. Mr. Ravenscroft. The result of a Commission of Inquiry, instituted by the Government into the working of the Cotton Frauds Act, was the expression of the committee's opinion that the Act should be held in abeyance, and the Bombay Government recommended the Secretary of State to do so, but Lord Salisbury considered that the Act should be kept in force with slight modifications. The Bill now introduced by Mr. Ravenscroft is for the purpose of carrying out the wishes of the Secretary of State. A. difference of opinion, however, exists in the Council on this point, and when the Council again meets in Bombay the Hon. Mr. Rogers says he will show that the proposed Bill is not in accordance with the intentions of the Secretary of State. The result may be a further discussion of this question whether a Cotton Frauds Act is required at The Bombay Chamber of Commerce and many of the leading merchants strongly object to any interference by the Government, and they deny that the Act has produced the improvements observable in the condition of Indian cotton, which they attribute to the increased facilities of communication offered by the railways and the presence of European buyers in the Mofussil. The cotton trade is doubtless as able to take care of itself as any other trade; but if the Government consider that the surveillance of their officers be necessary to protect cotton from adulteration the same argument would apply with greater force to the seed and grain tradea trade that is every year becoming more important to this country, but in which the adulterations in the form of dust and dirt are very palpable and very prevalent.—Bombay Gazette.

THE PORT TRUST.—The Bombay Port Trust seem to have a peculiar facility for running in the face of public opinion, and we have just heard of an instance which shows they have no wish to belie their reputation as regards the staple export of Bombay. If our information is correct—and we have every reason to belive it is—the Port Trust have entered into an arrangement with the Colaba Land Company and the Esplanade Free Fund Committee to increase the charge to cotton merchants for the land at Colaba used for the storage of cotton when it comes down from up-country, from twelve annas to one rupee per yard. Looking to the situation of the land and its unsuitability for any other purpose, there can be little doubt, we think, that even twelve annas a yard is a very full charge, available, as it is, for only eight months of the year; and it is scarcely a matter for surprise therefore that the native mer-chants chiefly concerned should feel aggrieved at this move on the part of the Trust and endeavour to resent it. We hear that the merchants have almost unanimously resolved that rather than pay the increased charge they will transfer their business location to the Mazagon or Free Bun ler, and although this will undoubtedly be most inconvenient to all engaged in the trade, it is after all a question of money, and if a suitable place can be found on, say, the Frere land at half or less than half the price demanded by the Port Trust, convenience will have to give place to economy. The "Cotton Trade Association," we learn, have determined to forward an energetic remonstrance to Government on the subject, but we hope the Port Trust may see their mistake and consent to meet the mer-chants fairly. Whatever the result may be, there can be no question that the present is not the time to disturb trade by vexatious changes .- Bombay Gazette.

ANTICIPATED FAMINE.—Our correspondent at Sholapore sends the following graphic account of the anticipated famine, under date of the 10th instant:—Our Collector has gone to Kurmalla. Revenue Commissioner, Mr. Havelock, and Colonel French have arrived at Jehar station to arrange, it is believed, preliminaries for commencing the State Railway from Dhod Station to Munmar, via Ahmednuggur. Government have opened relief funds at various places in the Sholapore Zilla. There are seven talookas in this zilla, with, it is said, a total population of a million and a half. Twenty-six thousand people are now employed on different works, as follows:
Sholapore, 7,000; Kurmulla, 5,000; Mada, 4,000; Barsee, 1,000;
Sagaon, 2,000; Punderpore, 3,000; and Malsaree, 4,000. In the talooka there is already an absolute grass famine. Several people volunteer to part with their cattle, but no one dares to accept the offer; there must consequently be a fearful mortality amongst these poor beasts, and, as things look in the gloom of the present, there will be none left to cultivate the Government lands next year. The death-rate amongst the cattle in the Kurmalla Zilla is already beginning to rise. From five thousand to seven thousand head of cattle have been removed, as a precautionary step, to the Nizam's territory. Water, too, is significantly scarce, and it is apprehended that the districts around several villages will be rendered barren through drought. In some four or five villages in the Kurmalla talooka no inhabitants are to be seen save the village Patells and the Koolkarnees. Still people here are even now inclined to believe that there must be a rainfall. God grant that the wish may be father to the thought. If no rain falls within the next week or ten days our hopes will be ended, and there must be a famine, and we must look to your good townspeople to aid our sore need with a generous subscription. Government, it is true, have opened relief works for able-bodied men. But what will become of people old and decrepid? Again, folk of the middle class cannot, for apparent reasons, work as common labourers, nor can they beg in the street, for none here have wherewithal to relieve them. These are peculiarly the people who would meat have fit here again. would most benefit by a goodly Bombay subscription list. the railway companies should permit grain to be carried on their lines at nominal rates, and that the authorities should open shops where this grain could be sold at prime cost, or even at a loss. Something, too, might be done for the unfortunate cattle, for their misery is great indeed, and their loss will hereafter greatly affect the welfare of the inhabitants. Government, I would suggest, should take in their charge all the head of cattle abandoned by their owners for want of provender. I understand that the gentleman for whom Mr. Grant is acting is likely soon to return, and that Mr. Grant will be removed from the zilla. We are truly sorry to hear it. In the present trying circumstances Mr. Grant has proved himself extremely able and zealous. I am glad to learn that a petition is in course of preparation wherein the Government is requested to retain course of preparation wherein the Government is requested to retain his services for one year longer in the zilla. So much depends upon the energy and vigour of the chief officials in charge now, that I am sure Government will give due weight to a request that has been dictated solely by the dire emergency of our present position. Times of India, Oct. 16.

LORD MALK KERR'S SPEECH AT THE SOLDIERS' SPORTS AT POONA. —The following is the address made by Lieutenaut-General Lord Mark Kerr, c.B., at the conclusion of the Soldiers' Sports at Poona, on Friday, Oct. 13. Lord Mark Kerr said,—Gardeners and Workshop-men of the 15th, this is the second time I have come to give you these prizes and to speak to you. I walked up yesterday week during heavy rain on the first day of your sports, but you, with dis-cretion, had abandoned the field. This looks as if none of you were sporting characters. I will tell you a story about this in a moment. I am not come to talk to you much about flowers, or vegetables, or handicraft, although gardens and workshops are excellent things. You do not need hospital comforts, you do not know doctors, you dig and work, and find health as your reward. I introduced com-These last are useless. I found one in this division half a mile from the barracks last year. It had an old corporal in charge and a dozen natives working for him. No soldiers in the garden! But I did not introduce prizes. So far as these induce skilful work, which will enable you to obtain good situations when you get your discharge and join the reserve, they are good; otherwise and unless you invest the money, I would as soon be without them. Listen to me. The Queen gives her soldiers seeds and tools and fences. The result is a homely, industrious, cheerful look to an otherwise dreary and dusty plain. But the Queen does not give prizes for you to waste the money to-day. Soldier's service is now short; you have not time to spare. Learn self-denial now—learn and practise it now. Educate yourselves in the anticipation of future good. Put by your earnings now-not only gardeners and craftsmen, but all you soldiers. You will, if you take my advice, be fit to manage your affairs and to keep your money, and to know how to lay it out to the best advantage, when after your discharge you have to make your own way in the world. Listen to what I say, and not for the first time, to you. Take my advice. Do not spend your money now. I do not care for what reason, whether to buy a watch, a dog, or a gun. Here I stop to tell you the story I promised. Evidently your gardeners and craftsmen, I said, are not sporting men. So much the better. Sport will not put the needful money into your pockets. It may be good as exercise, but it is an idle habit for a poor man, and apt to lead to trouble, as Driver Punter, of the Royal Artillery, will tell you. He is now in jail for some some months, having in his sporting exercise a few days ago shot at a pigeon, and killed not a crow but a man. I say to you—keep your money—I will not give you, men, these prizes. I hope your captains will persuade you that your best plan is to put them in the savings bank. Remember that youth is not for ever, any more than health. If you had lived and seen as I have done in London, and Dublin, and Glasgow, the numbers of starving men who had been once good soldiers, but who had spent their money while soldiering, and found themselves beggars on their discharge, you would believe me. If you spend your money now, the day will surely come when, starving and sick, you will curse your folly, and curse, I fear, also those of your officers who did not urge you more strongly to keep your money for the time coming, when you would so sorely need it. One word about the corps of commissionaires. Colonel Wilkinson has already explained to you the immense advantage to the retired soldier, of this corps, founded and kept up by one man, Captain Walter, who deserves to be canonised. I need not say more than that if your battalion subscribes to it as I recommend, the good conduct soldier who is in a description of the conduct soldier who is in a description. duct soldier who joins the reserve, or goes to his town or village on his discharge, will be sure of getting the employment that he desires. But you must speak to your captains, and also read what they have, I believe, shown you, which is written on the subject.—

DUTIES OF MILITARY SECRETARIES.

With reference to G.G.O. No. 525 of Aug. 9, the following alterations are ordered in the Bombay Army Regulations, Section 6 (Chapter I.):—

Paragraphs 7, 8 and 9 are cancelled, and the following substituted:—
Para. 7. The appointments of assistant adjutant general, assistant quartermaster general, and assistant militury secretary, are to be held exclusively by field officers, who should have a perfect knowledge of all regimental duties in every situation of service, as well as of general military regulations, and the customs of the service. Captains of experience, who have passed the staff college or garrison course tests, may exceptionally be nominated to these appointments.

Para. 8. The appointments of deputy assistant adjutant general and deputy assistant quartermaster general are, as a rule, to be held by officers not under the rank of captain, but exceptionally when necessary or advisable, may be held by subaltern officers specially recommended for them.

Para. 8a. No officer will be appointed to the staff as deputy assistant of the adjutant and quartermaster general's department, or as brigade major, who shall not have passed the final examination of the staff college or the garrison course tests, with the exception of officers of the Royal Engineers, who had completed seven years' service previous to May 1, 1870, and of all officers of proved ability on the staff in the field.

Para. 9. Officers under the rank of captain and effective field officers (except of the staff corps or Indian Army) are not to be employed as brigade majors or fort adjutants.

THE CIVIL LIST.—The Queen has, on the recommendation of the Prime Minister, conferred a pension of £100 a year on Mrs. Lane, the widow of the late Mr. Edward William Lane, the eminent Oriental scholar.

THE ADJUTANT GENERAL TO THE FORCES .- Tuesday's Gazette contains the announcement that Lieut. Gen. Sir Charles N. Ellice. K.C.B., succeeds Gen. Sir Richard Airy, G.C.B., as Adjutant General to the Forces. General Ellice served in the Indian Mutiny of 1857.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Indus left on Thursday for the East, with £379,776. The principal items consisted of £131,000 in silver for Bombay, £106,900 for Shanghai, and £29,971 for Hong Kong, £82,900 in gold for Alexandria, and £1,995 for Galle.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Remitters obtained a more considerable reduction in the price of this week's allotment of India Council drafts than some of them had anticipated. The amount was as usual 35,00,000 rupees (say £350,000), of which £201,800 was taken for Calcutta, £145,200 for Bombay, and £3,000 for Madras. Tenders for bills on all Presidencies at 1s. 8gd. per rupee received in full, and those for telegraphic transfers at that price about 75 per cent. of applications. As compared with last week this shows a fall of 3-16d. per rupee, and consequently bar silver was on Wednesday afternoon flat at 53 dd. to 53 5-16d. per oz., another reduction of about 1d.

EXAMINATIONS AT WOOLWICH.—At the competition for first appointments in the army and for admission to the Royal Military pointments in the army and for admission to the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, to be held in July, 1877, the examination in English literature will be limited to the following authors: Spenser ("Faery Queen," Book I.), Shakespeare ("Coriolanus," "Merchant of Venice"), Locke, Miltou ("L'Allegro," "Il Penseroso," &c.), Johnson's Lives, Dryden, Addison and Pope, Burke and Byron ("Childe Harold"). At the competition in December, 1877, Dryden's "Stauzas on Cromwell," "Astrea Redux," &c., will be substituted for Milton. The examination of militia candidates for commissions in the army will be confined to the same writers. Examination in English history will in the first instance be limited to amination in English history will, in the first instance, be limited to the period between 1789 and 1815; in the second, to 1783 to 1812; an I in the third, to 1789 to 1815, all three having special reference to the war in the Peninsula.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.—The very seasonable aunouncement of a new and cheaper edition of Mr. Kinglake's famous "History of the Invasion of the Crimea" is most welcome. For determining how far it be true that history does sometimes reproduce itself, one can hardly do better than compare the events of the present day with those which preceded the Crimean War. The titles of the chapters in the first volume are suggestive, namely :- The Ambitious Designs of Russia; The Conflict between the Czar and Lord Strat-ford de Redcliffe; Russia's Occupation of Roumania as a material Guarantee; Concord of the Four Great Powers against Russia; Separate Understanding between France and England; The French and English I leets in the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus; the Final Efforts of Diplomacy; Russia and Turkey at War—and are likely to throw some of the much required light upon the great question of the day. This cabinet edition will comprise in six volumes, at 6s. each, the contents of the five octavo volumes of the present edition, revised and prepared for this edition by the author. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Pack Wood stated that Dr., J. Collis Browns was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Revielo.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are-from Bombay, October 23; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, October 21; Calcutta, October 20.

THE Bombay Gazette understands that, owing to the threatened famine in Western India, Sir Philip Wodehouse will not take part in the Delhi Gathering. In Dharwar rain had begun to fall, and promised to continue falling, but the reports from other districts were gloomy enough. In Nasik the kharif or spring sown crops had utterly failed, while in very many places the rabi or cold-weather crops had not even been sown. was failing fast, and cattle were being driven elsewhither for food, or sold for a mere nothing. In Sholapur the condition of the masses of the people was becoming most deplorable. From Puna we hear that the country around is an absolute desert, not a blade of grass nor a particle of grain being anywhere visible, while the rivers and wells are drying up, and the cattle dying from absolute starvation. In Ahmadnagar the drought was so excessive that relief measures were urgently required. Government calculate that the number of people needing relief will amount ultimately to about two millions and a quarter, and that the famine will last for eight months, or from 1st November to the end of June next, when it may be hoped the monsoon rains of 1877 will enable the peasantry to resume their ordinary work. The necessary outlay of public funds for relief of the distress is reckoned at nearly thirty lakhs of rupees, supposing that each person would be supplied with one pound of grain per day, at the average rate of nine seers for one rupec.

SEEING that the scarcity had already lasted since the end of August, the physical condition of the people was becoming very low, through the small quantity of food which they were able to obtain. One death from starvation had already occurred at Sholapur-s poor man having died of exhaustion on his way to the Collector's office in quest of relief. In the same district the poorer classes were trying to live on weeds boiled together with a little wheat or jowari. The poorest were eating any refuse food they could procure, and an epidemic of cholera was greatly feared. The disease had broken out among a body of men employed by Government in excavating a tank at Kompta, a village near Sholapur, and there were twelve or thirteen deaths. To prevent the disease from spreading, the workmen have been removed to another place. Private efforts were being made in Bombay to raise money in aid of Government contribu-

A FIRST subscription list had already been started in Bombay for the relief of sufferers from the famine. Mr. Morarji Gokaldas, of the Sholapur Mills, has personally observed the misery of the people amongst whom he went for the purpose of gathering information. On his return to Bombay he at once called upon several Parsi and Hindu gentlemen, and with their aid started a Relief Fund. Through his energy and influence Rs. 18,000 had already been collected, and a meeting of subscribers held at Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy's to consider how the money thus collected could be laid out to the best advantage.

A LETTER from Sattara to the Bombay Gazette states that the food famine is not the worst part of the threatened distress. The wells are failing, and the water in the Nira is only to be seen in small pools here and there, so that a severe water famine appears to be imminent. The people were still waiting anxiously for rain, but "there is not a trace of a rain-cloud, or, indeed, any cloud, in the whole horizon; nothing but a clear sky and a dry atmosphere, as if there was not a drop of moisture in the universe." Of course a food famine is the result of a scarcity of water, but an actual drying up of the water supply would terribly enhance the difficulties in the way of relief.

THE Cholera Quarantine Committee, lately assembled at Simla, was called upon to consider how far the restrictions imposed on the general population from time to time with the view of arresting the progress of cholera have been justified by experience. A series of questions have been placed before the committee, and the replies to these questions will probably form the groundwork for some fut ire legislation on the subject, the true bearings of which have been confused and often misunderstood.

ONE of the sons of the Khan of Khelat has died of cholera, which was still hanging about the town of Khelat. Colonel Colley and his party had passed through Jacobabad and gone on to Khelat. The Khan and his Sirdars are said to continue on friendly terms with each other.

In the Calcutta Gazette the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal records his great sorrow at the death of Mr. Woodrow, late Director of Public Instruction. "The Government has been deprived of an able and devoted servant, while the natives have lost a wise and zealous friend.'

From the Indian papers we learn that Mr. C. L. Tupper, Officiating Under Secretary to the Punjab Government, will succeed Colonial Blair as Superintendent of the Chamba State. The latter officer takes furlough at an early date with a view to retiring from the service. Mr. Lindsay Neill, Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, succeeds Mr. Plowden as Under-Secretary in the Home Department of the Government of India, and Mr. Anderson, Assistant Commissioner of Jabalpur, succeeds Mr. Neill. Mr. James Sutcliffe, Principal of the Presidency College, has entered on the office of Director of Public Instruction in succession to Mr. Woodrow, whose death was lately reported. It is said that either Mr. C. B. Clarke or Mr. A. W. Croft will become Principal of the Presidency College.

THE Yarkand Envoy seems to have made a very short stay at Simla, having already taken his departure homewards. According to the Pioneer, public speculation as to the wherefore of his visit has never been very actively aroused.

The week's budget of news includes the death of Major Topham, of the 16th Bengal Cavalry, found drowned at Bareilly on the 16th October. A court of inquiry had been sitting on the deceased, and, according to the Pioneer, he "had been fully exonerated from all serious blame," but pending the orders of Government he was suspended from the command of his regiment, "and the shock to his mind, enfectled probably for the time by recent illness, proved very serious." His body was followed to the grave by "one of the largest funeral processions that have been seen in Bareilly for years."

In reply to an inquiry made by the Madras Government as to the position to be assigned to officers belonging to the Royal Engineers of the Imperial list, on their return for a second tour of Indian duty, the Government of India is said to have decided that officers who have left India after the first tour of service without expressing an intention to return, but who, with the assent of the Secretary of State for India, have since been permitted to return, will be placed under the rule applicable to officers who have not served before in India. At the same time the circumstances under which they have previously served in India will be taken into consideration; while those who have served in the department, and before leaving India have expressed their intention to return with the assent of the Indian Government and War Office, will retain the full advantage of their previous service.

From the official documents already published, it appears that the scarcity which now broods over part of Western India includes the collectorates or districts of Nasik, Khandesh, Ahmadnagar, Puna, Kaladgi, Sholapur, and Dharwar, as well as the whole of the Eastern parts of the Dakhan, and the Southern Maratha country. That means a total area of 44,000 square miles, peopled by nearly six million souls, who dwell in 81 towns, half of which contain more than 10,000 people, and in 9,809 villages. Of this population about 13 million are agricultural. Of the Bombay districts Khandesh, the most northern, is also the largest, with more than a million souls spread over an area of 10,162 square miles, nearly half of which is pure waste. In the two chief towns of Nasik there are brass and silk works, and other industries, but in that district, as indeed throughout the Dakhan, the mainstay of the people is agriculture; rice, cereals, linseed, sugar, tobacco, cotton, hemp, and pulses being the principal crops. Ahmadnagar, with an area of 6,647 square miles, of which threefourths are cultivated, contains a proportion of weavers in a population mainly agricultural. Puna, one of the smallest collectorates, is nearly the most populous, while Sholapur, with a somewhat smaller area, has the largest proportion of cultivable land, except Dharwar, with a population nearly as dense as that of Puna. Dharwar, famed for its cotton fields, has at once the densest population, 21,644 to the square mile, and the smallest proportion of waste land. Kaladgi covers nearly 6,000 square miles, with 143:29 souls to the square mile.

THE measures of relief were begun early in September, in the case of Sholapur, and have since been extended to the other districts. In a resolution of October 3 the Government directs that in the first instance all relief works are to be carried on with the aid of such local funds as are available, such as unappropriated balances, and sums suitable for re-appropriation from among the items of the current budgets. The importance of giving a preference to all works connected with roads, constructing, repairing or improving, and tank clearances has also been pressed upon the local authorities; especially the construction of roads acting as feeders to railways or main roads between market towns, &c., and wherever the available local funls may prove inadequate Government will provide the balance.

According to a General Order just issued by the Indian Government, " officers of the Staff Corps and Indian Armies will be allowed to compete for entrance to the Staff College, Sandhurst, under the terms of the annual Horse Guards General Order publishing the conditions, with the exception that one of the conditions of qualification is, service in the Staff Corps or in India of not less than five years, exclusive of all furlough or leave of absence (except privilege leave), or the leave annually granted in England." The first three on the pass list of yearly competitors will be admitted to the college "provided they secure a position within the number permitted to join." It is to be hoped that the yearly number of eligible candidates will not long be limited to three. The selected officers will come to England at the public expense, arriving about the middle of November, in good time to enter the Staff College on the 1st of the following February. During their stay here they will draw the English pay of their rank. While at the Staff College they will also have free quarters or the usual allowance instead, the ordinary extra allowance to Staff College officers, forage, fuel, and light, and be "on exactly the same footing as officers of the British Army." The whole time thus spent, to the date of their return, will count as "duty," both for promotion and pension (but not for furlough as service in India), provided the final examination be passed successfully. It is notified however that "any officer recommended for removal from the college by the commandant, as unlikely to make an efficient staff officer, or failing to pass the probationary examination at the end of the first or the final exmination, will be required to rejoin in India with the least possible delay; and the time spent from the date of leaving regiment, appointment, or duty in India, to the date of rejoining the same, will be absolutely forfeited, but will not be counted as furlough."

LAST week's telegrams give further details of the cyclone which burst in the Bay of Bengal on the 4th November. The steamer Moulmein, which sailed from Calcutta, put back with loss of funnel and foremast. The British Statesman, from Liver pool, arrived at Calcutta with loss of fore and mainmast, and mizen topmast and bulwarks considerably damaged. Scottish Chieftain lost her fore and maintop masts, and her mizen and topgallant masts. The Liverpool ship Ghazeepore was totally dismasted about 200 miles south of Sagar. It is also stated that the Lady Octavia, partially dismasted, and with cabin stove in, and bulwarks damaged, arrived at Calcutta on Sunday, Nov. 5. The ship Russia, with topgallant masts gone, and the Canon Harrison, totally dismasted, also reached Calcutta on the same day. The fine Liverpool ship Prince Waldemar, which sailed from Liverpool on the 22nd of July for Calcutta, was caught in the hurricane, and went on shore at the Sand-heads, at the entrance of the Hughli, and became a total wreck. Only four out of a crew of thirty hands were saved. The names of the survivors have not yet been received. The captain's wife and two children were on board. The ship was colonial-built, of 1,698 tons, and was owned by Messrs. Moran, Galloway, and Co., of Liverpool.

A RECENT telegram from Calcutta informs us that the district of Bakarganj was ravaged by a cyclone on the 7th Thousands of native houses were destroyed. The town of Daulatkhan was submerged by a storm wave, which swept away all the buildings of the place. Five thousand persons are believed to have perished. The Government has sent relief to the sufferers. Bakarganj forms the lower part of the delta thrown out by the united waters of the Ganges and the lower Brahmaputra, between Jessore and Dacca. Its area of 4,300 square miles includes the Sundarbans, whose strange network of streams and islands forms the northern side of the Bay of Bengal. Daulatkhan, the town above-named, lies on the east coast of Dakhin-Shahbazpur, a large island of about 800 square miles at the mouth of the Meghna, or Lower Brahmaputra, which has suffered much damage from hurricanes and floods at different times. In 1822 a dreadful hurricane swept over the whole of Bakarganj, destroying whole villages and many thousand lives of men and cattle. Another cyclone wasted Dakhin-Shahbazpur in November, 1867, and a third in May, 1869. In each case the hurricane was followed by a stormwave which added its quota to the damage done by the wind, burying whole villages and their inhabitants under its mighty volume.

THE cyclone in the Bay of Bengal appears to have been felt severely at Chittagong, where, according to recent telegrams, three vessels had been driven on shore, viz., the George, Captain Jego, recently arrived from Point de Galle; the Oceana, and the Edouard. Much damage is reported to have been caused.

According to a Bombay telegram of November 9, the Times of India announces that relief works have been established in the Sholapur district with very satisfactory results. Fortyfive thousand persons receive employment. There is now plenty of grain in the district.

A Times telegram of November 9 from Berlin states that General Lamakin, General Ivanoff, and the Khan of Khiva recently met a deputation of the Khiva Nomads at Urganj, on the Amu River. Upon the deputation complaining of the Khan's Government, whose officers they represented as corrupt, the Khan declared his willingness to abdicate and hand the remnants of his former territory over to the Russian Government. The result is unknown; but the change would be trifling, as the Khan has long been under the control of the Russian Generals. A new fort is being constructed a few miles west of Urganj.

LATEST accounts from Eastern Bengal, as telegraphed to the Times yesterday, describe the late cyclone as the most destructive storm experienced since the great cyclone of 1869. storm began somewhere in the Bay of Bengal, and advanced northwards in the track of ships bound for Calcutta, doing much damage. Many large ships were dismasted. The Prince Waldemar was wrecked on Balchin Sand, and only four of the crew were saved. A ship, supposed to be the Timour, was seen bottom upwards at sea. The following vessels have arrived at Calcutta more or less damaged:—The Lady Octavia, the Ghazeepore, the British Statesman, the Penthesilea, the Scottish Chieftain, and the Palmas; steamers—the Magnus, Moulmein, and the Penang. The ship Allahabad, from Melbourne, with 153 horses, was caught in the storm, and arrived at Calcutta with only nine horses alive. The loss at sea, however, is trifling compared with the damage done on shore. At Chittagong the storm stranded every vessel in the harbour except one. town was much damaged, and it is believed that there has been great loss of life. Noakháli was inundated, many lives were lost, and great distress will be occasioned. The storm wave swept over the large island of Dakhin-Shahbazpur. The Deputy Magistrate in charge and his wife escaped, but their family perished. The Munsiff's Court and public offices were swept away, and the loss of life appears to have been enormous. It is stated that 3,000 houses were blown down in Barrisal town. The districts of Tipperah, Dacca, and Maimansingh suffered much. The storm was felt in Kachar. Calcutta escaped narrowly. It is reported that the total loss of life is 20,000, but some estimates put it at 40,000. Sir R. Temple has gone to Noakháli personally to inspect the scene of the disaster.

THE following extracts are given from the report of the police inspector of Daulat Khan, in Dakhin-Shahbazpur:-

At 10 r.m. it began to blow with great force. The station-house was blown down. I took shelter behind the lock-up with the prisoners and constables, but finding the storm wave advancing I tried to go on to the roof of the guard-house, but was carried by the water to the work-shed roof. The storm wave was something dreadful. It came with great force, and took away the roof in different directions. I was drifted to a tree, where I remained till morning. I then found the water rapidly receding, but it was still nine feet deep. I found the aspect of the place completely changed. The public and private buildings were completely washed away, and I could not recognise the place. The only sign of the deputy magistrate's cutcherry was the flooring. The sub-inspector, the munsifis, the postmaster, registrar, abaknis, darogah, and others have not been heard of. No one was able to save anything. The persons saved must be utterly

THE following further items are telegraphed to the Times:-The Viceregal party is expected at Dalhousie on the 14th. They will rive at Peshawar on the 24th, and will stay there for three days. The arrive at Peshawar on the 24th, and will stay there for three days. The Vicercy will meet the Khan of Khelat at Jacobabad about the 5th of

There is little further news regarding the scarcity in the Dakhan, and it is yet too soon to decide whether there will be actual famine or only severe distress. The Bombay reports are somewhat worse. A water famine is feared in some districts, owing to the expected scarcity in Madras and Bombay.

The Delhi assemblage will be somewhat curtailed. The presence of Governors of minor Presidencies cannot be dispensed with, but they, as well as the Mysor Chiefs and Commissioners, will be attended only by their personal staff. They will be absent only a few days, so that the down the expenses. The proposed horse show will be omitted, and possibly the invitation to the Volunteers will be rescinded. Any exchange of the invitation to the volunteers will be rescinded. The subject the invitation to the Volunteers will be resembed. Any exchange of presents is prohibited, so as to save the chiefs from undue expense. The runour that an artist has been commissioned to paint a picture of the assemblage at a cost to the public purse of £10,000 is untrue. A painting has been arranged for to cost £5,000, which amount has been already raised by private subscription. The cost of the races will be entirely defrayed by subscription. The Government is evidently determined to carry out the affeir as conveniently as received to the convenient of out the affair as economically as possible, yet it cannot be denied that public opinion here is generally adverse to the assemblage, and the press is almost unanimous in condemning it.

A general order has been issued forbidding public servants to combine to memorialise the Government on grievances. Any officer wishing to submit a memorial must do so separately and in his own words. It is reported from Central Asia that the Russians are collecting troops and stores at Ayoz, on the Oxus, for an advance on Merv.

WITH regard to the new concession of furlough pay at the old rates of exchange to officers who elected the rules of 1868 before their revision in 1871, it has been decided that officers in India who may be entitled to arrears of furlough pay at par must claim the same in that country. Should any officer moreover wish to have the arrears paid to his agents in England, he must make his claim through the military authorities of his Presidency.

WE hear that several officers who elected the old rules before the maximum furlough pay was cut down from £1,200 to £1,00 a year have been encouraged by the late concession of furlough pay at par rates to memorialise the Secretary of State for the restoration of the old allowance in their case. It appears however that the Indian Council, after long consideration, have refused to acknowledge the justice of their claims, on the ground that Government made no contract with its officers by the promulgation of the 1868 Rules. Such a reason might have held good, we think, before the concession of payment at the old rate of exchange was made. But the existence of a contract was so clearly implied by that concession, that, in default of any other reason for withholding the larger allowances, the claim to those allowances ought to have been admitted as readily as the claim to receive two shillings for the rupee.

WE hear that Colonel H. K. Burne, c.B., Military Secretary to the Government of India, has been recommended by the Government of India to the Secretary of State for a good service pension, which has become vacant by the succession to colonel's allowance of Colonel T. F. Wilson, C.B.

IF Lord Salisbury can safely be spared from his duties at the India Office, his selection for the important task of representing England at the coming conference on Turkish affairs may be hailed as a just tribute to his acknowledged eminence among the Ministers of the Crown. Whether it has anything to do with the fact of his being at the head of the Indian Government is a question of no particular moment to any one save Lord Beaconsfield himself. It is far more to the purpose at any rate to assume that England's Special Ambassador to Constantinople was selected on account of his pre-eminent fitness for the discharge of a very difficult duty. The confidence which Lord Salisbury seems to inspire in men of all partie, would have gone far to justify his selection; but it is still more pleasant to reflect that the confidence rests on good grounds in the past, and that his Lordship is not the man to carry out any course of policy of which the bulk of his countrymen would feel ashamed, or which his own strong sense of justice and his self-respect would disapprove. It is something to know that Lord Salisbury's sympathies do not lean to the Turkish side in the quarrel between Turk and Slave; but it appears to be none the less certain that his official connection with India will have placed him on his guard against the possible allurements of the Russian S ren.

MAJOR-GENERAL J. R. PUGHE, late Inspector-General of Police in Bengal, has written to the Times to vindicate his countrymen in India from the aspersions so readily thrown on them by critics at home, who derive their facts from the Fuller Minute and the travellers' tales brought home by the companions of the Prince of Wales. For the last ten years, as head of the Bengal Police, whose duties embrace a province larger than France, General Pughe had special opportunities of testing the ordinary bearing of Englishmen towards Natives. And here is the result of his own experiences:-

Every case of assault on a native by a European was specially reported through my office to the Government, and to the best of my recollection during the whole of the above period, in but one single case, and that of a triffing character, was a covenanted civilian the assailant. In fact, even among the lower class of Europeans such cases are extremely rare. It should be mentioned that in every district there are two district offices viz. those of the magistrate and the police, where such complaints can be made; and if by any chance a petitioner were not listened to at one, he would be certain of a hearing at the other. In any dispute between a European and a native, if the civilian magistrate has a leaning, it is against his own countrymen.

This testimony from a source so trustworthy bears out all that we have heard from private informants, and tallies with the experience of former Anglo-Indians. Of all classes of Englishmen in India, the Civil Servants are indeed the very last against whom a charge of ill-treating or insulting natives can fairly be brought. In plain truth, the latter "are well aware that both the Government and the Civil Service are their best and most generous protectors, and if left to the tender mercies of their own countrymen, that their treatment would be far different." Such testimony to a Service which has lately been much reviled by ignorant or hasty critics carries all the more weight for the direct antagonism in which General Pughe was often placed to some of the higher officials. "No one however"-he says-"could help admiring the unselfish way in which their most trying and arduous duties were performed. If they have a fault, it is one common to all close services—viz., that they are apt to look upon themselves as the best fitted for all and every species of duty, and to regard the other officials of the Government as merely the Helots of the Service."

Another witness to the good behaviour of Indian civil and military officers towards the natives has come forward in the person of Colonel Henry Taylor, who has served as Inspector-General of Police in the Central Provinces—84,000 square miles, peopled by 8,000,000 souls—for the last fourteen years. During the whole of that time, he says, in a letter to the Times.

There was not a single complaint made to the police of assault or ill-treatment of a native against a covenanted civilian. Had any such complaint been made it is impossible but that I must have been made aware of it. There was during the same period one, and only one, complaint against a military officer holding a civil appointment. He had beaten a native for gross impertinence to an English lady, and for this he was severely reprimanded by Sir Richard Temple, who was then Chief Commissioner. From an experience of India extending over upwards of thirty years I can heartily endorse General Pughe's statement that the covenanted civil servants of the Crown are the "best and most generous protectors" of the natives."

To the foregoing testimony we may add that of Lord Northbrook himself, as embodied in his recent speech at Oxford on behalf of a Bishopric in the Punjab :-

I take the occasion to correct a false impression to which a recent isolated case of assault at Agra has given rise. That was not a fair specimen of the relations between Europeans and natives. I myself felt a sincere friendship for many natives of rank, and often received valuable advice from native members of my Council. I was much struck by the consideration shown to natives by civil and political servants of Government. Native servants also were as a rule much attached to their masters, and cases of ill-treatment were rare indeed.

THE vacancy caused in the Indian Council by the transfer of Sir Edwin Johnson to the Viceroy's Council in India has been filled up, not, as was generally expected, by Sir H. Norman, but by Major General Sir Garnet Wolseley. That an officer at once so able and so distinguished in every field of service except the Indian should have been selected for a post hitherto reserved for officers of special Indian experience, will evoke some natural murmurs among those who regard a seat in the Indian Council as a reward for services in India alone. There may, however, be some special reasons for such a departure from former usage. It is also understood that another seat in the Council will soon be vacant, on the retirement of Sir Henry Montgomery. Sir Henry Norman, according to some reports, will be more than consoled by his preferment to the post in the Punjab now held by Sir R. H. Davies.

SENTIMENTAL INJUSTICE.

THE more we study the documents bearing on the case of Mr. Weld, the Joint Magistrate at Negapatam, the deeper grows our conviction that the Madras Government has dealt hastily and harshly with a deserving officer, whose worst fault was a pardonable, if not praiseworthy, zeal in the discharge of a manifest duty. The main facts of the case are as follows:-Last April an old Sanyási or Hindu monk died at Negapatam. Contrary to the usual Hindu custom of burning the dead, Sanyasis are always buried. The relatives of the dead man chose to bury him near the edge of a tank which affords the town its chief supply of drinking-water. The burial, says Mr. Weld, was secretly performed at a spot where no one had been buried for the last thirty years. It seems that not long before the Brahman's death, his friends had obtained leave from the Municipal Commissioners to inclose for bathing purposes the very piece of ground in which he was afterwards interred. On hearing of the burial from the Vice-President of the Municipality, Mr. Weld made his own inquiries.

When I went to the place I found the information to be true, and that the burial took place on Sunday afternoon; the body is buried within fifty feet of the water, between which and the grave is a flight of steps and a brick platform. In this sandy soil the impurities of the body cannot fail to percolate through and pollute the water; the steps can be no protection.

In reply to Mr. Weld's report of the matter, Mr. Thomas, the Collector of Tanjor, wrote as follows:-

I cannot judge of the matter as you can, because I am not in possession I cannot judge of the matter as you can, because I am not in possession of all the facts. For instance, the son states that it is a burial-place which has not been, and cannot be, closed except in due course under the Municipal Act; from your letter it is inferable, but it is not positively stated, that this is not a fact. If it be no burial-place there is no doubt that the body should be promptly removed. The son says it was buried with salt, which he was told was as much as 240 seers. If so, and it was with salt, which he was told was as much as 240 seers. If so, and it was properly disposed, no harm may have yet ensued, but eventually decomposition must take place, and the percolation must naturally be in the direction of the water which is the main drinking supply of the town of Negapatam.

If these premises then be so, I do not see how there is room to doubt that the burial must necessarily cause danger and annoyance to persons who have occasion to use the public right of drinking the water of Akaraikolam; and that is the Penal Code definition of a public nuisance; and if these be the circumstances, I do not see why you should have delayed to do your duty where delay is dangerous, for, if danger is to be averted, to do your duty where delay is dangerous, for, it danger is to be averted, it must be by removal before decomposition, and this can be done by the sons under an order issued as you propose. Disobedience to such an order would in this case bring the disobeyers under the heavier penalties of Section 188, in that the disobedience tends to cause danger to human life and health.

The question of the danger involved to the public health from the neighbourhood of the body to the tank was referred to Dr. Beach, who avowed his opinion that "notwithstanding there being a flight of steps which are between the tank and the grave of the deceased, organic and other decomposing matters must obtain entrance into the tank in question, from the b dy of the Brahman who was buried within fifteen or twenty yards of the edge of the tank, and from the nature of the soil, which is sandy, percolation would be carried on under the most favourable condition imaginable." About, or shortly before, this time cholera had been raging in Negapatam. All this considered, Mr. Weld deemed it his duty to order the removal of the corpse within seven days, failing which it would have to be removed on behalf of Government and buried in Hathaway's Park, or be "dealt with in any other manner which may be convenient." This order was issued after consulting with the Pleaders who acted for the Brahman's family. "I asked the Pleaders"-says Mr. Weld-"as to the times, &c., of the ceremonies, so that I might fix a time for the exhumation which would best suit the relatives. And I fixed the time according to what the Pleaders told me after consulting the relatives. The Pleaders also told me that I would not have to exhume the body, as it would be exhumed by the relatives; so that actually, when I used the threat, I fully believed that I never would have to carry it out." They expressed their gratitude for Mr. Weld's courtesy, and the body was duly removed by their clients to another place. But "Brahman-like they were ready to stab in the dark," and a petition was forwarded to the Government, complaining of the wound inflicted on the feelings of the community by the threat of burying the corpse of the honoured saint in a place "where all the night-soil and dirt of the town are deposited."

This petition the Government referred to Mr. Thomas, with a request for further information. The Collector in a vigorous reply exposed the mis-statements therein contained, and stoutly defended his subordinate's action. The following passages are worth quoting:—

If the Joint Magistrate had permitted the burial to remain unchallenged, and I too had countenanced his permission in the face of a petition which I had to the contrary, an I the natural result had followed that by percolation the main drinking supply of the town of Negapatam had been poisoned, and a goodly proportion of the hundreds, nay thousands, that resort there daily had died, or suffered, I do not see how we could have justified ourselves in the eyes even of the people committed to our care, still less before the Government we represent, and serve.

So much for the general claim to poison drinking water by such burials. I turn now to the special claim that there is a right to bury Saniyasis in the particular place in point. The Joint Magistrate's report on this point is clear. . . . That the son who performed the burial well knew that there was no right to bury Saniyasis there, is clearly shown by his action in the matter. He procured from the Municipality the liberty to enclose the spot, not for the purpose of burying but for making a bathing-place. The real object having thus been concealed, the grave too was steathfuly dug under cover of the surrounding walls, and the gate furthermore was locked. I think it is clearly inferable that he well knew that if his intention had been foreseen by the Municipality it would in the interests of sanitation have been prevented, and therefore he thought to gain his end by stealth. In stealth also he would have failed had he not been himself the village magistrate, and had not the Tahsildar been a man who was taking his pension in a month and without any further care for the good opinion of his superiors. The Tahsildar accompanied the procession, and the police consequently suspected no necessity for their intervention. They saw indeed a burial procession which of course was public, but as the Taluq magistrate was present they could not think the interment was about to be made in an objectionable locality, and it was this last intention that had been kept secret.

The use of salt in such burials is, I understand, to prevent mundane effluvia detracting during interment from the sense of sanctity attached to the body of the holy deceased. But its action can in a moist soil be only temporary, and both from subsequent personal observation, and from the report of the Joint Magistrate, it was obviously inevitable that the decomposed body must very shortly percolate into the tank, for it was in a purely sandy soil, with no other drainage. This view is further supported by a medical opinion taken at the time, and now enclosed.

With regard to the alleged insult conveyed in the threat to bury the corpse in Hathaway's Park, let us hear Mr. Weld himself:—

I have the honour to state that Hathaway's Park is a large piece of waste ground, of which part the south-east corner next the salt creek, the Devanadi, is used as a place for burying night-soil, part of which is covered with a soil composed of old decomposed sweepings, is a garden; and part, the south-west corner, which is tolerably high, is not now used for any purpose; it was once, I believe, a salt-pan, and is now simply a piece of ordinary waste land separated by a valley from the place where the night-soil is buried, and from the garden. As I have already informed you, I said in my order that if the body was not removed I might be obliged to bury it in Hathaway's Park; because Mr. Oliver told me that the Municipality had no other piece of waste at their disposal. You will observe that I did not say I would certainly bury it there, but that I might be obliged to do so; this is all my words amount to. Had I been unable to find a better place, I should have been obliged to bury it there. I could not tell whether a better place was to be found till I tried, and I did not see the necessity of trying till I found myself obliged to exhume the body; it was as well to point out the worst that might happen if my order to exhume were not obeyed.

Had I been obliged to exhume the body, I should certainly have consulted the Tahsildar and others as to how the business might be done, and where the body might be buried, so as to hurt the feelings of the relatives as little as possible. Because I rather incautiously mentioned Hathaway's Park in my order, it has been hinted to Government, in the petition, that I acted harshly and insolently, and so as to outrage the feelings of the relatives as much as possible. This is altogether the reverse of what I really did.

So much for Hathaway's Park. As to the place of the former burial, it is clear that the persons who had to obtain special leave to build a bathing-ghat could have no right to turn it without leave into a burial-ground. The time allowed them for removing the body was more than ample for that purpose, and the reference to Hathaway's Park, if open at first sight to misconstruction, was evidently meant to ensure timely obedience to a reasonable command. But the Madras Government would listen to nothing but the misleading tale of a few artful natives who understood the process of getting up petitions. In the teeth of facts and likelihoods they assumed that the Sanyasi had been buried in a "customary" place, that all danger of poisoning the water might have been prevented without removing the corpse, and that Mr. Weld had hastily issued an order which embodied "an insult to the feelings of the family, and of the entire Brahman and Hindu community, as well as an outrage to decency." Having thus shown himself to be "entirely wanting in the qualifications essential to the due exercise of judicial or magisterial functions," poor Mr. Weld was accordingly " removed from his appointment as Acting Head Assistant in Tanjor, and suspended from all employment for two months." It was "further ordered that the exercise of all magisterial functions be withheld from him, until such powers are again expressly conferred by order of Government." Mr. Thomas for his part got off with a wigging, which may not hurt him in any way. An apology was offered by the Government to the family whose feelings had been so severely shocked.

If this is the kind of justice which is henceforth to be dealt out to our countrymen in India, the sooner they "clear out" of that country the better will it be for their worldly welfare. It is rather an unfortunate result of the Prince's Indian tour that incidents like the Fuller case and this of Mr. Weld should have been made the pegs for official displays of maudlin sympathy with the ill-used and long-suffering natives of India. A fine crop of injustice and race-hatred has already been sown by the Fuller Minute, and now we have the Governor of Madras posturing as a rival humanitarian to his official Chief. How much longer is this perilously foolish fashion of truckling at all costs to native Indian conceit and cunning to prevail? Whether the Duke of Buckingham has been backed in his folly by the other members of his Council, or whether, as we are told, these latter vainly tried to check their President in his wild course, it is evident that no one's feelings have been so recklessly insulted as those of Mr. Weld, and that decency has been outraged, not by the English magistrate, but by the Most Noble Governor of Madras.

TAX ON SALT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I beg to inform your readers that I was in error in attributing the enormous increase of railway traffic in salt to increased consumption. In page 54 of the new Blue-book, which I received only on the 17th ult., I find it stated that salt still prefers the river route to carriage by railway; but this year the lowering of rates for salt on the Eastern Bengal Railway has had the effect of inducing merchants to despatch salt from Calcutta by railway instead of by boat. Only a small portion of the increased traffic by railway can be attributed to increased consumption.—Your obedient servant, November 10.

TRADE IN THE PUNJAB.
TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,-On the 4th of February, 1873, Mr. W. T. Thornton, Secretary to the Public Works Department at the India-office, appeared at the Institution of Civil Engineers, and volunteered to enlighten the British public on the dark subject of trade in the city of Mooltan. He said: "But on the authority of official trade statistics, it was asserted that the quantity of goods likely to be transladen at Mooltan would be practi-

In your paper of the 10th of March, 1873, I ventured to call in question the accuracy of the information on which the India Office relied.

The ignorance of the Times newspaper and of the Illustrated London News was animadverted on in your paper of the 18th of September, 1874, and 19th of April, 1875.

I am happy to inform you that the India Office is beginning to see the propriety of having correct statistics before it, while attempting to govern the most marvellous Empire the world has ever seen; it has adopted measures for ascertaining with some approximation to truth the exports from and the imports into the Punjab. Whereas in 1873-74 the total external trade of this Province was declared to be of the value of about four and a half millions sterling, the same trade in the following year is stated to have reached the sum of twenty millions sterling!! As no reason is given for any great increase of trade we are forced to the conclusion that when Mr. W. T. Thornton appeared before the civil engineers his official trade statistics showed less than one-fourth of the commerce which actually existed.

May we ask the India Office for true information regarding the extent of trade now passing through Mooltan, which city, from its position, is likely to become invaluable, not only in a commercial, but in a political and military point of view. Perchance the new Lieutenant Governor may be a real statesman, and may free the city of Mooltan from the detestable form of official extortion called Octroi. Perhaps the Secretary of State for India may see the utility of completing with all despatch the Imperial military and commercial railroad from Karachi to Mooltan. The pooh-poohing the opinions of the Astronomer Royal, of John Hawkshaw, T. Hawksley, Sir L. Simmons, Douglas Galton, Captain Tyler and Colonel Yolland has been proved to be a mistake; the knowledge of those gentlemen regarding the use of railways in India is found to be much more reliable than the opinions of Mr. W. T. Thornton and General Richard Strachey (see your paper of the 18th of October, 1873):-

An improved system of registration, which had been worked out with great care, was introduced in the Punjab at the beginning of 1874-75. It consists in the registration, at selected ports on or near the frontiers, of all trades passing those ports to and from adjacent countries and provinces; at the same time returns are obtained of the railway traffic, of the boat trade on the Indus, and of the amount of timber floated into the province from the north.

The weight and value of the external trade registered during 1874-75 under this system are as follows compared with the preceding year:—
1873-74, 6,641,549 maunds, £4,512,615; 1874-75, 15,635,619 maunds, £16,951,961. The figures for 1874-75 do not include the traffic of the Indus Steam Flotilla (valued at upwards of two and a-half millions) nor several items of which statistics were not forthcoming, so that the comparison is really much more striking. It is roughly estimated that the total value of the external trade may be set down at twenty millions sterling. Page 57 of the new Blue-book.

And again :-

One remarkable instance of the effect of the new system of registration is the enormous apparent rise in the imports of European cotton cloths. The largest formerly recorded were those for 1872-73, amounting to 65,587 maunds, which were valued at £735,116. In 1874-75 they reached 341,474 maunds, valued at £7,406,646.

Note this, ye men of Manchester; corrected returns show that the importation of European cotton cloths into the Punjab was in value in 1874-75 ten times the reported importations in any previous year. - Your obedient servant,

In discussing the means of improving the resources of the Punjab, we must in future bear in mind that statistical statements regarding its condition and trade previous to the year 1874 are incorrect.

"SNOBS AND NIGGERS."

The Madras Athenaum observes that the Native Press has made much capital of the World's article on "Snobs and Niggers," whilst their Anglo-Indian brother-journalists have grown wildly indignant in repudiating the charges brought against them by the reviler of the home journal. We think both parties have allowed their feelings to get the better of them in this discussion, each side having all along handled the subject as a party question, in the discussion and the discussion in the discussion and the best sense of the latest and the best sense of the latest and the best sense as the latest and the best sense as the latest and the late of which mutual recrimination is all that has been sought after. It seems to us that a dispassionate examination of the subject must lead to the conclusion that one party is to be blamed quite as much as the other for the absence of cordiality between the two races. At present all the odium of the reproach is forced upon the shoulders of the Europeans, while the Natives are overloaded only with sympathy, as though the former are to be considered as wanton aggressors against the latter. The Anglo-Indians are represented as a parcel of snobs, wrapping themselves up in caddish exclusiveness, and spurning the Natives from the social communion into which the poor blacks, with hearts half-broken and hands uplifted, are imploring admission. The absurdity of this misrepresentation can be seen to the best advantage when placed side by side with a parallel picture, in which the Native is introduced in the character of a man of caste looking with pious disgust upon the Feringhee as a pariah, whose very shadow contaminates the objects upon which it may fall. The simple fact is that, however much men may moralise and wrangle over the matter, there are on each side stubborn social and religious prejudices that act as strong barriers to the union of these two classes, and until time and the progress of education shall assimilate or modify these divergent predilections, the two races must remain more or less apart. Either the European or the Native must give up his prejudices in favour of the opposite party, and the by side, it is the more reasonable to expect the European to put aside his manners and customs in favour of the Native's habits of life, or that the Native should make the sacrifice for the European? The Anglo-Indian is ready to associate freely with all who are willing to think and act like him, and the Native is doubtless similarly disposed; but from which of the two can we reasonably expect concessions? Or, to put the question in more precise terms, shall the more enlightened be asked to knock under to the less enlightened? Is there no obvious absurdity in forcing the less to contain the greater?

THUGGEE AND DACOITY.

The Indian Daily News remarks that the strongholds of the crimes which the department is set to watch are the native States of Western and Central India; and many of the difficulties of the officers arise out of the fact that it is no easy matter to regulate organised crime when pursued by hereditary criminals in a number of such contiguous and yet thoroughly disjointed spheres as native States necessarily are. Not only are the native officials of one State recluded from running home organised crime to its lair in another, but the routine through which the departmental officers receive in-timation of infractions of the law is insufferably tedious and objectionable. Writing from Indore, Captain D. Barr remarks:—"Information of dacoitees trickles slowly through the usual channel from district officials to Durbar, from Durbar to Political Agent, and it is sometimes not until a month after the commission of the crime that intimation is received at Indore of its occurrence; and then all that can be done is to detach a small party of Nujeebs with one or two confessing prisoners or approvers to the locality to endeavour to trace out the offenders. At present the only method of acting against dacoits (that is) practised by the department seems to consist of the despatch of parties into likely neighbourhoods, where local jails and thannahs are examined, and prisoners recognised as dacoits are denounced by approvers and sent in for further recognition and trial. The capture of a gang red-handed is a rare occurrence, and indeed until the system of police throughout native States is greatly improved, no such thing can be hoped for. Dacoits find easy quarters in native States, and the knowledge that they are secure in the territory of one chief from pursuit by the police or troops of another renders them bold." This is in all probability only a too faithful picture of existing arrangements. The necessity, however, of perpetuating these arrangements is considerably less apparent to the ordinary mind than the fidelity of the description. To the statement that no improvement is possible, until the police of native States is radically reformed, we take the liberty to demur. Either the police of native States is sufficient to cope with such an evil as the hereditary and gang crime of Central and Western India, or it is not. If it be, then no doubt the improvement of that police would secure the result aimed at by the Thuggee and Dacoity But the creation of this department in the past, and Department. its retention during all the intervening years up to the present day, are proofs that a kind of special detective force is needed to deal with a special phase of crime; and though we are far from hinting that there is no room for improvement in the local police of native States, it must be obvious to persons familiar with the statistics of hereditary and gang crime, and with the operations of the abolished Dacoity Department of this province, that what is specially needed in the present case, is in the first instance a carefully organised detective force of picked men, possessing a distinctive discipline and organisation of its own, but having the run of all Hin loostan from Hyderabad to Lahore, and linked on, where necessary, by special but by no means difficult arrangements, with the territorial police of each district, whether British or foreign, through which it might be called on to track down crime. Such a force headed by an officer like Mr. E. B. Baker, or, better still, by an officer like Mr. E. H. Reilly, would probably account for all the dacoits and thugs in India in half-a-dozen years.

NOTES ON NAINI TAL.

A letter from an unbiassed itinerant may perhaps prove acceptable to you for a change. Not being a laker in the strict sense of the word, I am in a position to judge everything with an impartial eye. Elective affinities are fashionable. Some time ago a local beauty was seen pacing the Mall by herself in a state of extreme dejection, and a friend naturally asked her what the matter was. The melan-choly fair one replied in a voice resembling a whine, "I've got no bow-wow—no bow-wow, but I've just written to Pompey, and am expecting him up from the plains every day." This anecdote is deeply significant, and if it be not true, it ought to be, which is exactly the same thing. A bow-wow of course means the cavaliere servante of the period, and the term is happily chosen. If Darwin were in these hills, he might collect some interesting facts concerning the development of species. A man becomes an Himalayan bow-wow after the following fashion :- A determined woman (she does not require very good looks to effect her purpose, merely strength of will, moral ascendency does the work) marks him for her own early in the season, and after that, however reluctant to be happy at the expense of his liberty, turn and twist as he may, he might as well try and escape the impending bondage as a caged rabbit the jaws of a hungry python. Before he knows where he is he is run down, doubled up, led away into captivity, and a few days' careful training converts him into a docile setter, an ornamental poodle with a bunch to his tail, or an amorous hound, according to circumstances. Henceforth his existence is devoted to fetching, carrying, standing on his hind legs to amuse his owner's friends, and the performance of such other duties as the nature of his position may happen to demand. Woe to him if he attempts to forfeit his allegiance by straying unintentionally, or still worse running off to incur fresh obligations after the manner of his kind! The mildest punishment he can possibly expect is solitary confinement, together with the substitution of cold for hot tiffins. I can best illustrate this topic by citing a case in point. When I last saw Howler in the plains a few years ago he was a rough manly sort of fellow, with no weakness except a tendency to occasionally drink too much, and then fight, and a supreme contempt for what he was wont to call "sammying." Our next meeting was at a badminton party at this Himalayan Capua. To my astonishment he was playing away hard with some very nice girls, and I was glad to see that while his manners had apparently improved, he had lost little of his pristine vigour. But as I looked, a timid and guilty expression came over his countenance, and his efforts in the game relaxed into feeble and ineffectual passes with his bat. Indeed, I am not certain that he didn't turn pale. The reason of this presently became evident. Oblivious of the arrangements made for his conduct during the season, he had got into the wrong set. A female of commanding presence accordingly advanced towards the culprit, and tapping him on the back with a badminton bat, told him to come along in a very imperative tone of voice. The poor creature hesitated a moment, owing to teh expostulations of his partners. The claimant was, however, resolute, and led him away to the proper set, simply remarking—"Why, this is my man, I brought him here myself." We thus see how the elective affinity system sometimes leads to one of cliquism, which affects dancing as well as badminton and other amusements, so that meetings which would otherwise be pleasant and sociable are often spoilt by a combination of the two, for the spectacle of unmetaphysical ladies sitting in maiden meditation fancy free, and of elected gentlemen gazing wistfully as they wait their turn of forced labour, like convicts, is not uncommon.

One novel institution is that of Sunday walks. A Sunday walk means a congenial assemblage of ladies and gentlemen, who having sent forward a quantum sufficit of food and drink to some convenient and picturesque spot, proceed thither on a Sabbath afternoon and there consume the stores provided for them, admiring the scenery at the same time. In fact, a Sunday walk would on any other day be a picnic. The difference between the two consists in this, that on the Sabbath the human mind is disposed towards pious meditation, and what would otherwise be a picnic, therefore becomes on that day a meeting for the purpose of offering up adoration to Providence by admiring the beauties of nature, and rendering thanks for the benefits received at his hands by solemnly devouring the fruits of the earth. A different view has been taken of the questien, which leads me to the relation of an accident that occurred the Sunday before last, when I was myself invited to one of these entertainments. Our party met at the church door after early service, and then proceeded to a lovely place named Cockatoo, with minds bent upon pious meditation and theological discussion. But there's many a slip between the cup and the lip. On opening the hampers we found the solids half eaten and the liquor all gone. Our dismay can be more easily imagined than described. One nervous lady thought the misfortune was a sign of the times, and promptly went into hysterics. We revived her with cold tea and judicious advice, provided by a sceptic, and returned sadly to our homes, discoursing by the way as to what the meaning of this might be. The coolies explained that certain other theologians, having exhausted all their own provisions in the course of a long argument, had accepted the appearance of ours as a miracle, and straightway consumed them. The event, however, has been since denounced from the pulpit by an ecclesiastical censor as a judgment of Providence upon Sabbath breakers.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE LATE DR. BROWN.—We (Indian Daily News) have reason to believe that the inquiry ordered by the Government of India into the late Dr. Brown's administration of his charge as Political Agent at Manipur tends to exculpate entirely the memory of that officer.

THE COURT-MARTIAL ON MAJOR FLETCHER.—The court-martial on Major Fletcher at Nusseerabad began on Monday, the 9th October. The evidence for the prosecution came to an end on Friday last, and Major Fletcher's friends are very confident, the Allahabad paper says, about the absence of any sign of a fraudulent intent on his part, in connection with the pecuniary transactions to which the charge relates.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 23.

THE COMING ASSEMBLAGE.—Delhi is already filling, and houses are very scarce. The Nizam, it is rumoured, has rented the premises known as the "Metcalf Compound" for Rs. 65,000, some speculators having previously purchased the property for Rs. 50,000 but they will have a deal to do to make the place a fit residence for the Nizam, and they have unfortunately a very short time to do it in.

TEA EXPORTS.—Messrs. Thomas Watson and Co.'s. Tea Report tells us, that the quantity of tea exported from Calcutta in September was 3,522,000 lbs. as compared with 3,017,972 lbs. exported during the same period of last year. From the 1st of January to the end of September this year the quantity exported was 18,426,796 lbs. as compared with 16,526,696 lbs. during the same period in 1875.

AID FOR THE TURKISH WOUNDED.—The Lahore paper says that subscriptions have been voluntarily offered by Mohammedans on behalf of the wounded in Turkey in several districts of the Punjab, and it is contemplated to hold a meeting of both Sunnis and Shiahs at Lahore with the view of presenting a memorial to her Imperial Majesty, praying that England's protection of Mohammedan interests may be continued over the Mohammedan world, whilst reprobating all cruelties, whether committed by Christian or Turk.

Delhi Durbar.—The following native gentlemen from Calcutta have, we hear, been invited to attend the grand durbar to be shortly held at Delhi:—The Hon. Rajah Narendra Krishna Bahadur, Hon. Kristo Das Pale, Nawab Amir Ali Khan Bahadur, Rajah Harendra Krishna Bahadur, Nawab Mir Muhammad, Babu Digambar Mira, C.S.I., Rajah Jotindra Mohan Tagor Bahadur, Hon. Iswara Chandra Mitra, Hon. Ram Sankar Sen, and Maulvi Abdul Latif, Khan Bahadur. Rajah Rama Nath Tagor Bahador, C.S.I., owing to ill-health, will not be able to attend the durbar.—Englishman, Oct. 17.

Cholera in the Punjab.—Comparing the results of the districts for which complete returns have been received, the total deaths registered in the Punjab in the week ending 19th September were 15,024, against 12,185 in the previous week. Three hundred and thirty-four deaths were registered under the head of cholera, against 505 in the previous week. In the 50 large municipal towns 2,206 deaths were registered, 1,105 being male and 1,101 female, giving a death-rate of 90 per mille of population; 1,357 births were registered, 713 being male and 644 female, giving a birth-rate of 56 per mille of population.

Mission to the Straits.—The Government have decided to send two staff officers to proceed on special duty to the Dutch Settlements in the Straits of Malacca. The Atchinese and Netherlands troops have, as is well-known, been long carrying on a desultory warfare there, and there is now reason to believe that they are about to try conclusions in a more serious manner. Captain Lockhart, of the Quarter-master-General's Department, and Captain Palmer, Brigade Major at Umballa, are the two officers nominated. And it is probable that Captain C. J. O. Fitzgerald, 2nd-in-Command of the 3rd Cavalry, Haidarabad Contingent, may also be deputed on similar service.

FRONTIER NEWS.—We learn that the three grass-cutters of the 12th Bengal Lancers stationed at Fort Mackeson, who were kidnapped about the close of August last by the Pass Afridies whilst they were loitering near a shrine in the Kundul village after their day's work, have effected their escape from the custody of their captors. One lost his way and entered the tract of country occupied by the Guddia Kheyls; he was seized by the tribes men, and after detention of a day, nothing having been found in his posession, was released on the condition that he should return with Rs. 20 as his ransom money. Of course he did not return. They say they were kindly treated by the Afridies during their custody, were well fed, and that their only loss were a few pieces of clothing and their blankets.—Indian Public Opinion, Oct. 16.

PICTURE OF THE IMPERIAL ASSEMBLAGE.—We are told by a Calcutta contemporary that the well-known artist Mr. Muir White proposes to paint an historical picture of the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, containing correct likenesses of all the native chiefs and distinguished personages present at the ceremony of the Proclamation. Each subscriber of Rs.500 will be entitled to a proof engraving before letters of the picture, and those who subscribe Rs.250 to an engraving after letters. The total cost of the picture and engravings is estimated at Rs.55,000, and a committee will be appointed to receive subscriptions, under the distinct understanding that the painting will not be undertaken until due provision is made for the execution of the engraving. The committee will also decide on the ultimate destination of the picture, which, however, it is suggested should be presented to the Queen.

EFFECTS OF BAD EXAMPLE.—The bad example set by the Bishop of Bombay has, we hear, been followed by a clergyman in these provinces, who has been exhaling from his pulpit his views on the Bulgarian horrors. Such a proceeding is all the more objectionable, because the politics of the situation are too intricate to be correctly appreciated in a pulpit, not to speak of the impropriety of discussing politics in such a place at all. To feel angry with wretches who commit massacres and other deeds of violence is natural, but sensible men who want to see the offenders properly dealt with will be especially careful not to do what the clerical critic of the situation is especially likely to do, to treat the crimes as committed by Mohammedanism against Christianity. In any country it would be stupid to confuse the subject by this sort of religious partisanship: in India it is wrong, insulting to the Queen's Mohammedan subjects, and a breach of her explicit orders.—Pioneer.

The late Major Topham.—A correspondent at Bareilly sends to the Allahabad paper some further information about the death of Major Topham, of the 16th Bengal Cavalry, lately announced by telegraph. The reader will be already aware of the fact, which we noticed on the 6th instant, that a court of inquiry had been investigating certain pecuniary transactions in which Major Topham had been concerned with the shroff of his regiment. The Pioneer understands that Major Topham had been fully exonerated from all serious blame, but pending the orders of Government he was suspended from the command of the 16th. This occurred on Sunday evening, and the shock to his mind, enfeebled probably for the time by recent illness, proved very serious. He was found drowned on Monday. His body was followed to the grave by one of the largest funeral processions that have been seen in Bareilly for years, and his death is sincerely lamented by a large circle of friends, by whom he was not only liked for his personal qualities, but cordially esteemed.

DEATH OF MR. H. WOODROW.—The Pioneer gives the following account of the death of Mr. H. Woodrow, late Director of Public Instruction in Bengal. On the evening of the 10th Oct. he left his house apparently in his usual health, but shortly afterwards feeling unwell he returned home and went to bed. He complained of a pain in his chest, but neither his wife nor the other persons in the house, one of whom was a physician, anticipated or suspected any danger. Before dawn on the 11th he left his bed feeling a difficulty in breathing, had the windows of the room thrown open, and after a few seconds of heavy breathing expired. It is said that not long ago, before he left England to return to India from furlough, a London physician told him that his heart was diseased; but apparently it was thought that with care his life was as safe in that respect in this country as at home. Mr. Woodrow was in the habit of walking a great deal at Darjeeling. Such exercise on hilly ground and at an elevation of 7,000 feet was doubtless injurious to him. He was a most amiable, generous, kind-hearted man, a universal favourite, as thosewho knew him best now testify sorrowing.

Ladies' Trains.—The vanities of life are absorbing and for that reason interesting. The subject of ladies' trains agitated high life in India a few months ago, and apparently it is agitating that life now, especially as those highly-cultured mortals at Simla seem to have condescended to the employing of some of the acts of the baser order of mankind in order to gratify their vanity and self-esteem. The sober-minded Friend of India writes as follows on the subject of trains:—"There is the difficulty about ladies' trains. The original order was issued, we were told, like the Fuller resolution, in the hope that her Majesty would be pleased, but Anglo-Indian society manifested an unexpected reluctance to prove its already well-known loyalty in this expensive way; and so great was the general dissatisfaction that a new order was issued making the wearing of trains optional. Simple people thought the Government of India had gracefully yielded; but to yield to public opinion is not one of its weaknesses, and it is now becoming evident that, though the said appendage is nominally not compulsory, the want of it will mean the want of many other things which few ladies have the moral courage to see themselves deprived of. We hear that private influence is being brought to act on so many ladies that if trains be not universal the few who lack them will be a disgraced minority. Nothing but an intimation that trains are not to be worn at the drawing-room will save society from this foolish fine inflicted on it by the Government of retrenchment."

The Crops.—The reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 12th October state that in Madras rain is reported from all districts; but in Kistna it has been very partial, and in Kurnool and Tanjore only slight showers have fallen. In Madura and Malabar prospects are fair, but elsewhere there is no improvement. A little rain has fallen in Mysor, but the situation is said to be still critical. No rain has fallen in Bombay during the week; prospects are good in Sind and Guzerat, but in the Deccan, the Southern Mahratta Country and Khandeish and Nassick they are very bad, and apprehensions of scarcity are increasing. In the Central Provinces only trifling showers are reported from two districts; in some parts want of rain is being seriously felt. No rain has fallen in Berar, where it is required for all crops except cotton. In Central India rain is reported only from Sutna, but here and in Rajpootana prospects are good. Rain has fallen throughout Bengal, abundantly in many places, and prospects are excellent. In the North-Western Provinces falls are reported from Benares and Allahabad: prospects are favourable. In Oudh some rain has fallen and the crops promise well. No rain is reported from the Punjab; harvest prospects are good. Reports are favourable from Assam and Burnnah.

The Coming Assemblage at Delhi.—The undermentioned officers will be employed in the Quartermaster General's department, at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi:—Lieutenant D. C. Dean-Pitt, E-8th Royal Artillery; Major H. Fellowes, 23rd Pioneers; Captains W. C. Clayton, 9th Lancers; E. S. Rivett-Carnac, 11th Hussars; A. W. R. Becher, 16th Bengal Cavalry!; Lieutenants J. Hare, Royal Engineers; G. D. Stawell, 11th Foot; R. C. D. Wilson, 60th Rifles; E. Burrell, 85th Foot, and C. A. Mercer, 4th Goorkhas. The Civil and Military Gazette states that "very carefully considered regulations have been issued for the hospital and conservancy requirements of the troops taking part in the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi. There will be a principal medical officer for the whole force, with an administrative medical officers will be selected from amongst the senior Surgeons-Major of either service, and will be relieved from all executive duties; they will also be the sanitary officers of their respective divisions. A general hospital for British troops will be established in the Fort at Delhi. It will be fully equipped by the Public Works and Commissariat Departments, respectively, according to cantonment scale, for two per cent. of the strength of the British troops, and be provided with full hospital establishments. This equipment and establishment will be altogether apart from, and independent of, those belonging to corps moving to Delhi, and will be ready by 15th December next."

CASUALTIES AMONG THE TROOPS AT PESHAWUR.-A traveller who left Peshawur on Sunday morning, the 8th inst., kindly writes to us from an intermediate station, to the effect that he had to pass through strings of heavily-laden camels, some elephants and a miscellaneous horde of native attendants of all sorts and sizes, that were conveying the baggage of the last battery of artillery that was left at that station. The other batteries had, he learned, been, for some days previously, under canvas. He was informed on the spot that this small corps alone had lost eighteen out of about twenty seizures, one of which, however, was a child. The 51st lost, he understood, in the same proportion, some nine out of ten or thereabouts, and the 8th Regiment was still more heavily visited than its sister Line corps. Altogether, the loss has been a heavy one, and as heretofore in that fatal valley, treatment of all kinds has, our friend assures us, been purely negative or worse. This is very discouraging, but medical officers have pointed out over and over again the incurably defective surroundings of this station, and there is no doubt that to use the words of a writer on recent "Peshawur Fever," in the Indian Annals of Medical Science, "we made a great mistake when we elected to halt at Peshawur; we should have gone on to Jelalabad or stopped short at the Indus." The former would give us a hold of the Khyber, we can now never reclaim, while the latter would place us behind our natural barrier, the Indus, in the healthy vale of Chuch, and in either case we might have avoided the terrible sacrifices we have had to pay at the shrine of obstructiveness and routine.—Indian Public Opinion, Oct. 16.

THE NEW MILITARY SECRETARY TO THE INDIA-OFFICE.—Color of Allen Johnson, now Officiating Military Secretary to the Government of India at the Presidency, who has been selected to fill the important post of Military Secretary at the India-office in succession to Sir Thomas Pears, is an officer who has long served the Government of India in the highest branch of military administration in this country. Colonel Johnson entered the Indian Army in 1846, and has had wide experience of it both in peace and war, having served as Brigade-Major, as D. A. A. General of a Division, as Assistant Adjutant-General of the Army, and since 1562 successively as Assistant Secretary to the Government of India in the Military Department and Deputy Secretary. Previous to the mutiny, Colonel Johnson was for a short time Assistant Commissioner in the Punjab, and subsequently served during the mutiny as Brigade-Major of a field force. He served in the second Burmese war, where his persevering bravery was mentioned in despatches by Sir John Cheape, and was subsequently employed actively on the staff during the mutiny with the Jounpore Field Force at the capture of Lucknow, and afterwards with the Oudh Field Force, where he received the commendation of the Commanding Generals. Colonel Johnson has long been known as one of the ablest officers in the army, and his talents have been thoroughly appreciated by the Government of India in the important military administrative posts which he has filled. He will be a great loss to the public service in this country, and, we may add, to society; but some compensation for that loss will be found in the fact that the post for which H.M.'s Government have most wisely selected him is one in which his experience, ability, and great capacity for public business will be certain to shine.—Pioneer.

Loss of the "Cawdor Castle."-This vessel would appear to have been lost through the pilot mistaking the channel. weather it seems was somewhat thick, and the vessel had been taken outside the channel. The buoys being distinctly visible, the circumstance was brought to the notice of the pilot, who appears to have disregarded it, and to have persisted in his course, although warned by Captain Greig that they were manifestly approaching what had the appearance of shoal water. Immediately after the warning, the vessel took the sand, and heeled over on the lee side. After recovering herself for a moment she turned right over, and was soon keel uppermost. The boats on the lee side were crushed of course instantly, but the crew eventually disengaged two of the boats on the windward side, and owe their escape thereto. The Chinamen are said to have behaved exceedingly well. Several of them liberated themselves from the engine-room by breaking through bars of the stoke hole. Amongst the drowned was the third engineer, a fine young officer who had been with the ship from her first voyage, the quarter-master, and two cooks. The crew all told consisted of forty-eight men, and of these eight are lost. The Cawdor Castle was launched but three years ago, and was one of the prize teaships of the season. The underwriters are hit very heavily, the insurance on the vessel being £55,000. The captain with fourteen of the crew passed the night in an open boat near the wreck, and was picked up by the Ooriya at half-past eight yesterday morning. Two Chinamen, badly scalded, have been left at Atcheepore. The Ooriya was returning from Chandballi, and took the boat in tow containing fourteen men, among whom were three engineers and eleven of the crew, and landed them in Calcutta last evening. The pilot and over twenty men are on shore at Kedgeree, but were not seen by the Ooriya. The Cardor Castle was a magnificent vessel, and was proceeding to Colombo with a cargo of 2,200 tons of rice, laden, we believe, by the agents, Messrs. J. Nicol, Fleming and Co.—Calcutta Statesman, Oct. 13.

THE ROBBERY OF EIGHTEEN LAKHS OF RUPEES AT CALICUT.

In our issue of yesterday our Calicut correspondent briefly informed us of an extensive robbery at that station, in which a wealthy Thier, inheriting immense ancestral property, was robbed of money and jewels to the extent, it is estimated, of about eighteen lakhs of rupees, the depredators having effected a burglarious entry into the house in the execution of their object, and that two of the watchmen had been arrested. Our correspondent now informs us of the further steps that have been, and are being, taken by the local fauthorities to trace out the robbers, and of the results that have as yet attended their exertions in this direction; and from this information we gather that, so far, the police and the local magistracy have achieved considerable success in their inquiries. A rather startling fact is that several of the richest men at the station are suspected to be implicated in the robbery, among them being included some of the relatives of Moodathiel Choi, the man who has been robbed. A nephew is said to have absconded, and it is supposed with ten lakhs. A Chetty, who is a shroff, has been arrested, and a search of his house instituted by police in the presence of the sub-Magistrate of Calicut has resulted in the discovery of old coin and jewels of the value of 3,000 rupees. Shankaran, a Thier labourer, was arrested on the statement of one of the prisoners, and as he affirmed that a large share of the stolen property was hid in a field at Mamally, near Beypoor, he was sent under the custody of a head constable and two con-When they were about to cross the ferry, however, Shankeran seized the opportunity, and took to his heels. He was pursued by a mob, but he escaped through a small lane in the village hard by, and has not been heard of since. A head constable and two constables are suspected of conniving at Shankaran's escape, and they are under suspension. A coffee contractor and another have been wanted in consequence of information received that they were the ringleaders of the robbery; and another suspected party has absconded, it is supposed with five lakhs, and a warrant has been issued for his arrest. In one person's house Rs. 10,000 worth of jewellery has been unearthed. The robbery under notice took place about eight months ago in Choi's house, but no information was given about it until the other day, up to which time evidence was being collected as to the ornaments, worth 20,000 rupees and claimed by complainant as his, which were found in (1) a carpenter's house, (2) a room in a shop in big bazaar of a Moplah tradesman, and (3) a Guzarattee merchant's factory. Another merchant has been suspected of having taken with him to Bombay two lakes worth of precious stones, to dispose of the stolen property there. warrant has been issued for his apprehension also. Search warrants have been issued against two shroffs and three Guzerattee merchants, besides those above referred to. The sub-Magistrate and the Head-Quarter Inspector have been engaged day and night in making the necessary inquiries and searches. Owing to the absence of the sub-Magistrate with a view to bring the perpetrators to justice, there has been no office at the Court of the 2nd-class Magistrate of Calicut town .- Madras Times, Oct. 7.

ARREST OF THE RINGLEADER.

Coomaren, the alleged ringleader of the robbery at Choi's treasury was arrested at Paniankaray Amshum, three miles off, and brought before the sub-Magistrate on the morning of Friday last, Shankara has implicated one Chekoo, who has been kept in close custody. The former admitted having broken, in company with the latter, into the room containing the hordes of gold and silver. The confessions of these prisoners, who have been kept apart, tally with cach other, and not only so, but with the statements of Ramen and of Kalleppen, Choi's servant, also. On the morning of Friday last 700 rupees worth of jewels was brought to the police-station—the result of a confession by Karupen, the toddy-seller. The coins were gold, of the size of a two anna piece, and twice as thick. They bore marks resembling Hindoostanee characters. The ornaments were those worn by the male sex. They consisted principally of girdles of the same precious metal as stated above. From carpenter Andy's sister's house jewels worth 1,500 rupees have been found. From Ramen's house property worth fifty rupees was shortly afterwards unearthed. Parachan, who was arrested by ex-head constable Narraina Menon, at Olavanom Amsham, while the former was taking his meals at his brother's wife's house, has inculpated two other Theirs, for whose apprehension warrants have been issued. The sub-Magistrate, Head Quarter Inspector, and Police Inspector are busy taking down the evidence of the prisoners. The box containing the precious stones has not been discovered. No clue has as yet been found out as to its whereabouts.—Madras Times, Oct. 10.

THE RAJAH OF VIZIANAGRAM.—The Maharajah of Vizianagram is, we regret to learn, suffering from diabetes. He has aged greatly in appearance recently, the Madras Mail tells us, and lost much of that imposing presence which assisted in rendering thim one of the most conspicuous of nobles at Viceregal Darbars.

A DIVORCE SUIT.—The Rangoon divorce case of Fowle v. Fowle came to a conclusion on the 23rd ult. The learned Recorder acquitted the respondent of all charges of cruelty, desertion, and adultery, with the exception of the one he admitted, and gave a decree of judicial separation, with permanent alimony of Rs.700 a month to the petitioner. Mrs. Fowle arrived in Calcutta and has left by steamer for England.

DEATH OF MR. HENRY NEWMAN.—The Madras Mail records the death of Mr. Henry Newman, M.C.S. Senior Assistant Collector, Vizagapatam, on board the s.s. Siam in the Red Sea, on the morning of the 24th Sept. Mr. Newman joined the service on the 17th of August, 1863, and arrived in the country on the 4th of January in the succeeding year. He had been ailing for some time, and in the early part of last month obtained furlough for two years, and left for England. His remains were committed to the deep on the evening of the day on which he died.

"SUTTEE" AT MADRAS .- Something like Suttee, says the Mirror, "has happened at Madras, showing the attachment of a Hindoo wife to her husband, and throwing some light, perhaps, on the secret of the Suttee in the olden days. A Guzerati having been afflicted a long time with a severe cough, called in the services of a Vythean (doctor), who, on seeing his patient, at once told him that his illness was incurable, and that he would not live long. His wife, on hearing this, after the departure of the doctor, went and threw herself into the well of the house, and on this being made known to the husband the shock was so great that he immediately expired. Husband and wife were buried at the same time.

CONDITION OF AFFAIRS IN BELLARY AND CUDDAPAH.—The condition of affairs in the districts of Bellary and Cuddapah has induced the Board of Revenue to send Mr. Thornhill to inspect those districts and report upon the state of the season. Mr. Thornhill was at Cuddapah in the early part of the month, and then proceeded to Bellary, where he will be able to form his own opinion whether it is necessary to open relief works on a very extended scale. It may have been learnt from a telegram published in our last issue, and for which we are indebted to our evening contemporary, that the people of the district seem to be of opinion that relief works have not yet been opened where they are really necessary.—Madras Standard, Oct. 16.

BURMAH.—A telegram to the Pioneer, dated Rangoon, 14th October, gives some further particulars of the fatal accident at Table ber, gives some further particulars of the fatal accident at Laber Island, Cocos:—"The superintendent of lighthouses, executive engineer, lighthouse-keeper Woodcock, and wife, Messrs. Hernandez, Cruickshank, and Dewet attempted landing. While crossing the bar the boat capsized. After struggling for a considerable time all reached the shore, except Mrs. Woodcock and Dewet. Shortly after reaching the shore the ship's gunner died of exhaustion. The steamer reaching the special part so it is boat, which also considerable but righted seeing the accident, sent a life-boat, which also capsized, but righted in time to save Woodcock, supported by the lighthouse-keeper Kimbrell, who bravely swimming, rendered valuable assistance. The bodies are undiscoverd. The Recorder yesterday paid a touching tribute to the memory of Dewet."

THE "TENASSERIM."-In our last summary we alluded to the anxiety felt at Madras on account of the Tenasserim, with the Governor and party on board, as no news had been received of her whereabouts. Just as the mail had been despatched, intimation reached here of the safe arrival of the vessel at Elephant Point, at the mouth of the Rangoon river, with all well on board. As was expected, the Tenasserim ran into the cyclone of the 6th and 7th, to which we alluded in our last issue, but although they felt the storm sufficiently to describle it as having been "very heavy," no damage seems to have been done. The Tenusserim was to have left the Rangoon coast last Tuesday for Colombo, where Colonel Shaw-Stewart, the Consulting Engineer for Railways, and Captain Taylor, the Master Attendant of Madras, have been requested to meet his Grace the Governor for the purpose of inspecting the Colombo Harbour Works and the Paumben Channel, across which it is proposed to construct a railway which will connect India with Ceylon. From Ceylon the Governor will proceed to the Western Coast, visiting Travancore, as was intended. Meanwhile, the establishments of the Government Secretariats that proceeded to the Hills have returned to the Presidency, and the next meeting of the Executive Council in the Council Chamber of Fort St. George will be held next Tuesday. - Madras Times, Oct. 21.

THE BANGALORE VOLUNTEERS.—The Bangalore Spectator says:—'On para e Colonel Benson intimated to the Volunteers that he had received through the Local Government a letter from the Supreme Government of India inviting a Company from the Bangalore Volunteers to take part in the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi next December. The company was to be composed of one captain, two subalterns, and eighty rank and file, including the proper number of non-commissioned officers, and it was suggested that care should be taken to send efficient men, while a preference was to be given to those who were regular at parades, &c. The Local Government further suggested that as some of the men of No. 5 Company at Mysore might wish to go also, they be informed of the matter. believe that all expenses of the Volunteers to and fro are to be paid by Government, and all grades are to draw the pay of their relative rank in the regular army. The Government will find all camp equipage, and the rank and file are to be placed on rations, &c. It is expected that the party will be away for one month, and from the period of leaving to that of their return the Volunteers will be placed under military law. More than one hundred men have volunteered to go, excluding those who may yet join from Mysore, and from this number a selection will be made. The company will be embodied for duty in the Volunteer Battalion, which, we believe, is to be commanded by Colonel Walton, of the Calcutta Volunteers, and which forms part of the first Brigade of the first Infantry Division under command of General Sir J. Brind, K.C.B.'

THE FAMINE IN WESTERN INDIA.

TIMELY RELIEF.—The villagers of Sumgamnare, in Dhad talooka, petitioned the Collector of Ahmednuggur praying to decrease the rate of two per cent., which was taken for water supplied for jowarri (also called saloo, sown at the time of the rabi crop) from the Lakh and Oojar Canal, in Khandeish, to one per cent., as the villagers had come to grief on account of the utter destruction of the kharif The Collector forwarded the petition to the Executive Engineer, Lakh and Oojhar Canals, who recommended the Bombay Government to accede to the request of the petitioners. The Government after thinking over the subject have passed a resolution, acceding to the request of the petitioners for one full year.

THE STATE OF THE COUNTRY BETWEEN DHOND AND GOOLBURGA. We are informed by a gentleman who travelled recently between Dhond and Goolburga that the state of the country is most deplorable, not a piece of land is seen covered with grass, but the whole country was observed barren and uncultivated, owing to there being no fall of rain either on this side or the other side of Sholapoor. At Goolburga the fall of rain during the monsoon was thirteen inches; the usual fall of rain there is between twenty-six and thirty inches. Goolburga looks forward to the setting in of the south-east monsoon, which commences next month, and expects a good fall of rain.—Poona Observer.

The Famine Relief Works.—We understand that Government has ordered the Irrigation Department to press on the works in connection with the extension of the Canal from the Khurruckwasla Dam to Indapoor, so as to give employment to as many hands as possible, and consequently Mr. Joyner, of the Irrigation Department, has left this for the districts to carry out the orders of Government. There is no doubt that a very large number of people will be employed on the Canal works by Mr. Joyner, and thus relieve poor sufferers. We further understand that the Bombay Government have requested the Imperial Government to place at their disposal one million of rupees to enable them to carry out relief works.

On Monday, the 9th instant, a meeting was held at Ahmednuggur for the purpose of considering what should be done for the poor who are suffering from want in the Ahmednuggur districts. The Collector of Ahmednuggur presided at the meeting, and Mr. W. H. Havelock, Revenue Commissioner S.D., took part in the proceedings. Ten thousand rupees were subscribed on the spot. The ceedings. Ten thousand rupees were subscribed on the spot. Incepeople of Ahmednuggur went about the holding of their meeting n the right way, and it was consequently successful.

PUNA MUNICIPALITY AND THE FAMINE.—Our City Municipality has sent several agents to purchase grain to the value of Rs. 50,000, in order to meet the wants of the impending famine, and to see the corn at common reduced rates to the poor, This will, we have no doubt, bring down the present high price of grain, as the Bunias, seeing the scarcity, raised the value of grain, though they have enough stock for three years. We hope the Municipality of Bombay and of other places will not on this occasion hesitate in relieving the great wants of the inhabitants of the Southern Mahratta Country.

Our Revenue Commissioner, Mr. W. Havelock, with Colonel Finch, returned to Poona yesterday morning from Barsi, one of the impending famine districts of Sholapore, where they found the people in great distress, we are told. How far it is to be believed, we are informed that the poor people are actually dying from starvation. Mr. Havelock has started several relief works. the outcry, prevalent both in the Bombay and Madras Presidencies; every hour we receive letters and rumours of threatened loots. Meetings are every day held, and subscription lists are being sent We apprehend that matters are coming to such a crisis as that the officers in authority here, and at such other parts of the country where a drought is expected, will experience some difficulty to what particular locality they should afford relief.—Deccan Herald, Oct. 20.

COURT-MARTIAL.—The court-martial that is now going on at Nasirabad on Major Fletcher, R.A., is for the investigation of certain charges, in reference to battery and mess accounts, brought by Colonel Phayre. The inquiry once made by an astute observer of human actions, "who is she ?" might be made in the present instance The inquiry once made by an astute observer of as it has so often been made in a number of others.

BARODA.- The little Gaikwar of Baroda intends to be present at the Delhi Assemblage. Already grand preparations are being made in the City of the Cowherds, to enable their representative prince to maintain the dignity and importance of the State. It is, however, believed that there are in course of manufacture some rose-tinted spectacles for presentation to the Viceroy on the occasion, which are specially adapted to give particular views of affairs in Baroda. portion of the Gaikwar's troops, fully equipped, has,we are informed, left Baroda for Delhi on foot, under the command of Colonel Hycoop. The detachment numbers some five hundred men in all, and will have to undergo the fatigues of a fifty days' march, as the resources of the treasury, so it is stated, do not permit of their transport by The gold and silver guns, four altogether, have also been railway. despatched. Sir T. Madhava Row is to follow in December with a small escort. All the other officials will keep to their posts and maintain order and tranquillity in the Baroda territory.

CAPTURE OF A MURDERER.-We learn from Rajkote of the capture, on the 13th instant, by the Station Magistrate, of the famous outlaw and murderer, Jaitho Valo. This notorious leader of a band of robbers was convicted of dacoity some thirty years ago, and sentenced to seven years' rigorous imprisonment. On his release from the Ahmedabad jail and return to Kattywar, he proceeded to the village of Noganchora, where his wife was, but finding that she had contracted an intimacy with a Rajpoot, he abandoned himself more entirely to crime, and later on carried out a scheme of revenge which resulted in an attack on the village of Noganchora and the murder of his wife's paramour. Since then his career has been one of uninterrupted pillage and crime, his success being not less marked in cluding the European Bahirwuttia officers and their spies than the members of the Provincial police. More than a dozen villages have successively fallen a prey to his rapacity, the bare mention of his name sufficing to strike terror into the hearts of the inhabitants. In bringing the criminal within reach of the law the Station Magistrate has not only accomplished a great feat, but rendered important service to the province, and it is to be hoped that his high official qualities will be rewarded before long with some recognition proportioned to his merits. The Province of Kattywar has by his capture been completely rid both of this outlaw and his associates.— Times of India, Oct. 23.

THE FAMINE AREA.—The area of the Bombay Presidency at present threatened with famine contains 44,234 18 square miles. This constitutes a tract of land comprising 7,724 square miles more than the whole of Portugal. The population is 5,911,261, or 498,884 more than the population of Ireland, its density varying from 31 08 persons per square mile in the Taloda talooka of the Khandeish district, to 353 96 persons per square mile in the Haveli talooka of the Poona collectorate. There are 81 towns and 9,809 villages contained in the threatened districts, 40 of the towns averaging over 10,000 inhabitants each. These towns and villages occupy 108,253 acres, or 186 square miles of ground, and there are besides 1,120 villages, totally, or almost so, uninhabited. Of the houses, buildings, &c., 47,593 with 306,243 inhabitants are classed as "of the better sort," while there are 1,059,085, with 5,594,996 inhabitants "of the inferior kind." Of the total population of 5,911,261, there are 244,423 persons who are classed as belonging to "aboriginal tribes." 1,356,820 are engaged in agriculture or in connection with animals, and the former are classed as-

THE BISHOP OF BOMBAY AND THE MISSIONARIES. - Some apprehension was felt in August last when the Bishop of Bombay sent a circular letter to the clergy of his diocese, in reference to the "unhappy difficulties which have arisen between my brother of Colombo and the missionaries of the Church Missionary Society in Ceylon," that his Lordship will probably apply the same treatment to the clergy of that Society in Bombay. We hear that the Bishop has done so in Mazagon, and that the services held by the Rev. J. G. Deimler will cease on Sunday next (to-morrow). The Bishop wrote to Mr. Deimler a short time ago directing him not to hold any more services in the customary church at Mazagon next the Zanana Mission House. Zenana Mission House. Mr. Deimler thought that the Bishop allowed him some option as to closing the services at once, but a second letter from the Bishop has removed any doubts on that point, for his Lordship, writing on Sunday, the 8th inst., from Lanowlee, directed that Mr. Deimler should at once discontinue the services in his church, and that neither himself nor any of the missionaries of the Church Missionary Society should officiate there. To-morrow at the evening service the Rev. Mr. Deimler will read a letter from the Bishop, in which the reasons will be stated for issuing this order. The Bishop says that the Rev. Mr. Deimler is not placed at Mazagon to supplement the labours of the regularly appointed clergy; neither is he to be the centre of agitation and dissatisfac-tion in Mazagon. The congregation have, we hear, drawn up a letter addressed to Mr. Deimler lamenting the occurrence of these proceedings of the Bishop, but no further steps have, we believe, yet been taken. It is remarkable how completely the tables have been turned at Mazagon. Only two or three years ago the Cowley Fathers were accused, and justly, of creating schism in Mazagon, but now, by having the Bishop in their hands, they accuse the opposite party of that offence. The dispute will certainly be greatly embittered by the conduct of the Bishop.—Bombay Gazette, Oct. 16.

THE TOUR OF THE GOVERNOR.GENERAL. Simla, Oct. 16.—The Gov. gen. in Council hereby declares that it is expedient that the Gov. gen. shall visit certain parts of India unaccompanied by his Council. And in the exercise of the powers conferred by the Indian Councils Act, Sec. 6, the Gov. gen. in Council hereby nominates Major gen. the Hon. Sir H. W. Norman, K.C.B., to be President of the said Council during the time of such visit; and the powers of the the said Council during the time of such visit; and the powers of the Gov. gen. in assemblies of the said Council during the time of such visit shall be reposed in the said Major gen. the Hon. Sir H. W. Norman, except that of assenting to, or withholding his assent from, or reserving for the signification of her Majesty's pleasure, any law or regulation as provided in the 24th and 25th Vic., cap. 67. And the Gov. gen. is authorised by this order made for that purpose alone to exercise all or any of the powers which may be exercised by the said Gov. gen. in Council in every case in which the said Gov. gen. may think it expedient to exercise the same, except the powers of making laws and regulations.

PENSIONS AND GRATUITIES.

Oct. 6, 1876.—With the sanction of her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, the Governor-General in Council directs that the following modifications be made in the Civil Pension Code:—

(The following is to be substituted for Section 12.)

"Service as an apprentice, or in Bengal as a supernumerary assistant surgeon, does not qualify; and except for compensation gratuity, superior service, before completion of twenty-two years of age, does not qualify. But this restriction does not apply to officers appointed to the service under the regulations of the Royal Indian Engineering College at Cooper's Hill, or specially educated in Europe for the Forest Department under regulations made by the Secretary of State.

(The following is to be inserted as Section 12A in Chapter III.)

"The service of an officer appointed to the service under the regulations "The service of an officer appointed to the service under the regulations of the Royal Indian Engineering College at Cooper's Hill, or specially educated in Europe for the Forest Department under regulations made by the Secretary of State, counts from the date of the despatch appointing him to the service unless any special date of appointment be fixed in the despatch announcing it to the Government of India. But this privilege is forfeited unless the officer land in India within three months from the date of his appointment. In such cases, his service, like the service of any civil engineer appointed in England, counts from the date on which he lands in India."

(The following is to be inserted as an exception under Section 41.)

" Exception.—In the case of an officer appointed to the service under the regulations of the Royal Indian Engineering College at Cooper's Hill and of an officer specially educated in Europe for the Forest Department under regulations made by the Secretary of State, furlough to the following ex-

(The following is to be inserted as case (e) under Section 61.) "(e) When on the ground of his previous experience a civil engineer is appointed specially to the service of the Government in the Department of Public Works with initial rank higher than that of a first grade assistant engineer, the Secretary of State will at the time of the engagement of the officer sanction such a departure from the rules of this code in his favour as may be agreed upon."

No. 3316.—The Governor General in Council directs the substitution of the ifollowing for case (a) and (1) of Section 61 of the Civil Pension

(a) To the following officers, not being natives of Asia, pension is admissible after three years less service than is required from other officers, provided that they began service after twenty-five years of age:—
(1) Directors of public instruction, inspectors of schools, principals and professors of colleges, and head masters of colleges and high schools.

The Governor-General in Council directs the substitution of the following for Rule 1 under Section 52 of the Civil Pension Code:—

An officer who has submitted a medical certificate of incapacity for further service must not (except for special reasons to be reported to the local Government) be retained in the service pending the decision on his application for pension. Without the further special sanction of the local Government service after the date of a medical certificate can in no case count for pension. The object of this rule is to discourage tentative applications. But an inferior servant or a police officer below the rank of head constable who, in the opinion of the head of his office, is fit for light work, may be retained in employment till his pension or gratuity is sanctioned, provided that his place is not filled up till he retires, and that his service counts only to the date of his medical certificate.

COURT-MARTIAL.

MAJOR J. N. B. HEWETT, BENGAL STAFF CORPS.

Adjt. Gen.'s Office, Simla, Oct. 10.—At a general Court-martial, assembled at Meerut on Oct. 2, Major J. N. B. Hewett, of H.M.'s Bengal Staff

Corps, was arraigned on the following charge:—
Charge.—Having, on or about April 23, 1875, been indebted to Rajah Jung Bahadoor Khan, Talookdar of Nanpara, to the amount of Rs. 10,000, in neglect and disobedience of the orders for the Bengal Army, as contained in para, 16, Section 48, of the Bengal Military Regulations of 1855, and para, 448 of the Bengal Army Regulations of 1873, the above sum having been accepted as a loan from the said Rajah in the month of Jan., 1873, while he, Major Hewett, was officiating as deputy commissioner of Bahraich.

-The Court finds that the prisoner, Major J. N. B. Hewett, of Finding.-H.M.'s Bengal staff corps, is guilty of the charge, so far as it alleges the neglect and disobedience of the orders contained in para. 16, Section 43, of the Bengal Military Regulations of 1855, and para. 448 of the Bengal Army Regulations of 1873; but the Court acquits him of the latter por-tion of the charge, which alleges that he, Major Hewett, accepted the loan from the Rajah of Nanpara, while he was officiating deputy commissioner of Bahraich.

Sentence.—The Court sentences the prisoner, Major N. B. Hewett, of H.M.'s Bengal staff corps, to be reprimanded in such manner as H.E. the C. in C. may be pleased to direct.

Meerut, Oct. 2.

C. R. O. Evans, R.A., President.

Confirmed.—In accordance with the sentence Major Hewett is hereby reprimanded. He is to be released from arrest, and to return to military duty.

FRED. P. HAINES, Gen., C. in C. in India. Head-quarters, Simla, Oct. 6.

SAMBHAR SALT.

The following notification appears in the Gazette of India:-On and after the 1st November next the Assistant Commissioner of the Inland Customs Department in charge at the Sambhar Lake will be prepared to receive indents for the supply of salt in any quantity not less than fifty maunds from any person who is resident at any town to which there is direct communication by railway from Sambhar.

Salt will be supplied in compliance with such indents at the rate of 8 annus per maund of 3,200 tolahs. No selection of special varieties of salt will be permitted for these consignments. The Government will, however, undertake to deliver salt of fair quality and of average sized crystals as excavated from the heap, and will also undertake that no local trader purchasing on selection shall be permitted to select special qualities of salt from any heap which may be opened for the supply of traders from a distance who under this notification may deal direct with the Assistant Commissioner.

The salt indented for will be weighed, filled into bags, and loaded on the railway waggons by Government without any further charge except for bags supplied (if any). The Assistant Commissioner will be prepared to supply bags to any parties requiring them at four annas per bag. Any per-Assistant Commissioner, who on the arrival of the bags will weigh off, pack, and despatch the consignment. It must, however, be understood that the officer at Sambhar is empowered to refuse to despatch a consignment. ment in cases where the bags are not sufficiently strong to stand the journey.

All traders and others indenting for salt under the provisions of this notification must, in the first instance, pay into the Government treasury of this district where they reside (a) the value of the salt they require at the rate of 8 annas per maund, (b) the duty of three rupces a maund, and (c) the price of the bags for packing, in the event of their preferring to buy bags from the Assistant Commissioner.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Siam left on Thursday afternoon for the East with specie to the value of £245,500, of which £164,500 was in gold for Alexandria, and £81,000 in silver for Bombay.

BOMBAY GAS COMPANY.—The directors of the Bombay Gas Company in their report for the half-year ended June 30 state that the net profit has been £11,753, out of which £3,000 is placed to the reserve fund, raising that fund to £10,905, and £2,873 has been written off for depreciation and loss in exchange. A dividend of 3½ per cent. for the half-year is declared, and £380 remains to be carried to the credit of the current half-year.

BILLS ON INDIA.—India Council drafts to the amount of 35,00,000 rupees (say £350,000) were allotted on Wednesday, at a rise of 3d. per rupee as compared with last week. The amounts taken were £200,000 for Calcutta and £150,000 for Bombay, tenders at 1s.  $8\frac{3}{4}$ d. on the former Presidency, both for bills and telegrams receiving in full, while on Bombay applicants for bills at that price got all they asked for, and those for telegrams about 66 per cent. Bar silver was in consequence very firm, and some considerable sales were effected at 54d.

Death of Major-General A. H. L. Wyatt. He entered the service in 1825 in the 65th Regiment, with which he served for several years, but the latter period of his regimental career was with the 11th (1st Battalion at Fyzabad in 1867). By his death a good service pension of \( \frac{\pi}{2} 100 \) a year is at the disposal of the Duke of Cambridge, and Col. F. G. Wilkinson, commanding the brigade depot at Shrewsbury, becomes a major-general and vacates his appointment.

THE ROUTE TO INDIA .- Sir John Lubbock, M.P., speaking at the Mayor's banquet, at Maidstone, said there were now hopes of peace in the East, but that as far as England was concerned the one thing wanted was a safe route to India, and if they studied their own interests only it would be well to induce Turkey to allow them to purchase the western part of Asia Minor, and "that would secure our route to India." He did not think this would entail any great burden upon England, and at the same time it was the best thing that could be done to open up that rich, populous, and once happy country.

FIRST APPOINTMENTS .- The following lieutenants of militia have been declared by the Civil Service Commissioners to have passed a qualifying examination for first appointments to the cavalry and infant y:—

Hon. W. S. Bateman-Hanbury, W. A. E. Boyd, G. C. N. Bryan, C. Campbell, Lord W. Cecil, P. T. Chute, F. T. Clayton, J. M. Dawson, T. H. Campbell, Lord W. Ceeil, P. T. Chute, F. T. Clayton, J. M. Dawson, T. H. B. Day, H. W. De Montmorency, M. Drummond, G. de la M. Faunce, H. E. Field, R. S. Graves, Hon. C. P. Jervis, J. S. Lightfoot, W. H. Lowry, S. MacDougall, E. C. Mills, R. F. L. Napier, C. F. A. Noel, A. Nugent, R. H. Parkinson, R. J. B. Parkinson, H. C. Perkins, A. F. Peyton, J. J. Purdon, E. H. G. Quicke, Lord Rodney, F. C. Schooles, W. H. H. Sitwell, H. S. Smith, G. F. V. B. Smyth, O. F. Tatham, H. A. Taylor, J. G. E. Templer, H. A. Terry, R. A. Threshire, H. W. Tryon, H. Wright, M. Wright, and W. R. Yeilding.

CHARGE OF FRAUD AGAINST AN EX-INDIAN OFFICER.—Ernest Scott Jervis, formerly in the army, and who at one time held a staff appointment in India, was on Thursday indicted in the Queen's Bench Division, by order of the Court of Bankruptcy, for obtaining goods, &c., by fraud and misrepresentation. The prisoner has been for some years engaged in monetary transactions and mining speculations on a very large scale, in the course of which he had entered into an agreement to purchase Wenvoe Castie for £105,000. Altogether between £2,000 and £3,000 were supplied by different tradesmen on his alleged misrepresentations. It was stated in evidence that between February, 1872, and November, 1873, his solicitor had defended 46 actions, in most of which judgment was given against him. The case was not concluded when the Court rose.

Indian Appeal.—Naraim Singh and Others v. Shimbo Singh AND OTHERS.—This was an appeal on Nov. 4. to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, from a decree made by the Appellate Branch of the Allahabad High Court, dated May 13, 1873, reversing a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Aligurh, in the North-West Provinces. The suit was brought by the appellants, claiming as mortgages, to get possession from the respondents of a portion of a mouzah called Lallpoor; and the issues were first in bar of suit, among others, as to whether interest for a period of dispossession should be claimed; and, next, on matters of fact, involving suggestions of collusion and fraud. The litigation in one way or another had extended over thirty years. Their Lordships, in the result, reversed the decree of the High Court, and affirmed that of the Subordinate Judge, except so far as regarded the possession of the land. The appeal, with this provision, was allowed, with costs.

KAISAR-I-HIND.-Dr. Birdwood writes a column or two to the Athenaem of Nov. 11 upon the Queen's new title:—In The Times of Oct. 7 (he writes) the Queen's title of Empress of India is translated as "Shri-Kaisar-i-Hind," and it is now known that "Kaisar-i-Hind" (in Hindi, "Hind ka Kaisar") is to be the official translation in India of Empress of India. It is a most happy translation, and the credit of proposing it is believed to be originally due to Dr. Leitner, who six months ago—namely, in Indian Public Opinion of May 7-showed how it was the only translation of "Empress" or "Emperor" which could with any propriety be adopted. There was no doubt from the first, whatever differences of opinion there might otherwise have been about it, that the new title would give the highest satisfaction to the princes and chiefs of India. It exactly defined their relation to the British Government, and, above all the relation of the British Government as the paramount Power in India to them. And after all it was not an un-English title.

THE "FRANCONIA" AND "STRATHCLYDE."—The Court for Crown Cases Reserved met on Saturday to deliver judgment in the Fran-conia case, "The Queen v. Keyn." The main question was as to the jurisdiction of our criminal courts over acts of violence committed at sea by foreigners against vessels within three miles of our coasts. Sir Robert Phillimore was of opinion that the Court had no jurisdiction over the prisoner for an offence committed on board a foreign vessel on the high seas, and that the conviction could not be sustained; Mr. Justice Lindley thought the conviction was right, and should be affirmed; Mr. Baron Pollock and Mr. Justice Lush said they agreed with the judgment of the Lord Chief Justice, and therefore thought it unnecessary to read their own; Justices Denman and Grove, Lord Coleridge, and Sir R. Amphlett thought the conviction should be affirmed; and other judgments being given, the Lord Chief Justice, remarking that at present opinion was equally divided, said he would read his judgment on Monday (to-day). It was understood that his Lordship's decision will be against the conviction.

CHURCH EXTENSION IN INDIA.—A large and influential meeting, presided over by the bishop of the diocese, with the object of raising funds for the endowment of the see of Lahor, was held in the Sheldonian Theatre, Oxford, on Wednesday afternoon. Amongst the speakers were the Right Hon. the Earl of Northbrook and the Venerable Archdeacon Johnson, Bishop Designate of Calcutta. The bishop opened the meeting with a reference to the late Bishop Mil-man, after which the first resolution, "That in consideration of the magnitude of the work to which the Church is called in India, an extension of the episcopate is imperatively demanded," was moved by the Rev. Dr. King, and seconded by the Rev. H. S. Holland, of Christ Church, who read a letter from Sir Bartle Frere, in which he said "It is a physical impossibility for any human being to do the duty of a bishop in the Punjab without neglecting or postponing equally important duties in other parts of the Calcutta (present) diocese. The resolution was unanimously adopted, and the Bishop Designate of Calcutta proposed, and the Rev. E. Jacob, late chaplain to Bishop Milman, seconded, "That the division of the diocese of Calcutta is especially required at this moment, and is an object worthy of our hearty support." The Earl of Northbrook moved the third resolution, "That the devoted ministry of the late Bishop Milman in India deserves the grateful recognition of all Churchmen, and particularly in this diocese, in which he laboured for twentyeight years; that the foundation of the see of Lahor is an object to which members of the university and diocese of Oxford should be asked to make liberal contributions; and that a committee be formed for that purpose." The Ven. Archdeacon seconded the resolution, which was carried nem. con.

CLAIM AGAINST THE P. AND O. COMPANY.—At the Mansion-house this company were summoned, through their legal adviser, before the Lord Mayor, to show cause why they refused to pay the wages of one of their officers. The complainant, Henry Gullham, had raised a claim for wages amounting to £20 16s. for three months and six days' pay as a baker on board a vessel of the company from Lisbon to India and back to Southampton, at the rate of £6. 10s. a month. The complainant had joined the ship at Lisbon on the 18th of April last at the wages stated, and proceeded to India and thence back to Suez, where he was accused on suspicion of having a quantity of missing stores accumulated in his berth. On the 3rd of July the vessel arrived at Suez, and on the following day the matter in dispute was investigated, the charge against him being that he was in the unlawful possession of stores, including large quantities of jam, marmalade, and sardines, which, it was said, had been secreted in out-of-the-way places. On arriving at Southampton he was given into custody, and kept locked up on the same charge which had been previously investigated at Suez. He was committed to take his trial, but was never tried before any jury, no prosecutor having appeared. All that he was blamed for in the matter was carelessness in allowing the commodities in question to accumulate. The Lord Mayor, after hearing both parties to the comtention, said he did not think the company could reasonably refuse to pay the complainant's wages, the stores in question having been returned to them. At any rate, he would be entitled to his pay from Suez to England. He appeared at the proper time to take his trial, and was acquitted, the result being that he had really lost six months' pay. His lordship, therefore, under the circumstances, ordered the company to pay his wages, amounting to £20.16s., and six guineas as costs. The money was at once paid, the solicitor for the company explaining to the Lord Mayor that they had not felt justified in acceeding to the complainant's demand without first instituting a judicial inquiry upon it.

THE DILEMMA,

By the Author of

"THE BATTLE OF DORKING," AND "A TRUE REFORMER." Complete in One Volume, price Six Shillings.

Extracts from Reviews of First Edition.

"When the Author of 'The Battle of Dorking' writes on war, he is very sure to command attention, and his literary talent can weave his military knowledge into fiction that is fascinating as well as instructive."—Times.

"A very striking story, which no one who begins is likely to drop before he finishes it, and which no one who finishes it will ever forget, whenever the Indian Munity is mentioned, for it clothes with individual form and colour the great vicissitudes of one of the most romantic episodes of English history."—Spectator.

"As a story, we are induced to rank it with the best that we have read for a very long time."—Academy.

Summary and Revielo.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombey, October 30; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, October 28; Calcutta, October 27.

WITH regard to the scarcity in Western India, the Government of Bombay had notified that in the Central districts of the Dakhan, comprising Ahmadnagar, Puna, and Sholapur, public works will be undertaken at an estimated outlay of about 25½ lacs of rupees, of which 3½ lacs have already been sanctioned. The Government was for making a railway through these districts—part of the Dhond and Manmar line—but the Government of India refused its sanction to so large an enterprise. On the southern, western, and northern districts, comprising Dharwar, Belgam, Kaladgi, Satara, and Nassik, the Government propose to spend more than 36½ lacs, of which 20 lacs will go to roads and 16½ lacs to irrigation works. Over two lacs had already been sanctioned for these undertakings. The water failure is a difficulty which the Government propose to meet by transferring as many as possible of the sufferers to places where water may be obtained. The Government have advertised for the supply of grain for the 10,000 people likely to be employed on the Mutha Canal, near Puna, during the time the work will last. It is believed that between now and June next they are prepared to spend half a million sterling. So far the famine appears to embrace only a thirtieth part of all India.

THE reports from the Southern Maratha country, and the southern parts of the Dakhan stated that the prices of food were rapidly rising, and that in some places the means of providing for the cattle were so limited that the owners were selling their cattle for a few shillings each. Already we hear too of deserted villages, of robberies and looting of stores, and of much alarm among grain-owners lest attacks should be made on their stores. The dread of these attacks was said to be preventing the grain-dealers in the districts from getting supplies from a distance.

FROM the Madras papers we learn that in the Kadapah, Bellary and Karnul Districts the distress seemed to be at its height. The rains had been a complete failure, all the dry crops are said to have withered, and the consequent scarcity of grain was much felt. "Pasture there is none, as last year's dry fodder is exhausted, and people are obliged to see their cattle die of starvation or sell them. The rayats are patiently waiting a fall of the 'early and the latter rain.' Many have committed crime to be sent to jail, where they will at least not starve. Relief works are in operation on a large scale, and the Collectors of Districts, directed by a vigilant Government, are doing all in their power to meet the crisis with success." In Tanjor, the "Garden of Southern India," the rivers were very low, the tanks had received no fresh supplies, cultivation in some places had been stopped for want of the usual rain and freshes, and the standing crops were in a very bad way. In Mysor and Kurg, the failure of the expected rains had been most disastrous to such crops as had survived the drought, and distress among people and cattle was very sharp; prices rising everywhere, and the markets badily supplied.

A TELEGRAM in the Madras Athenœum from Raichor, says:
—"Distress in the Nizam's territory is terrible. The rayats are starving. A large stone was found placed across the line in front of the grain train near Yadgiri. No inquiry has been instituted."

It appears that an attempt was made lately to poison Mr. Thomas, Collector of Tanjor, Mr. Weld's superior officer, and stout defender in the Negapatam affair. Mr. Thomas became seriously ill after dinner. The Doctor declared that his food had been poisoned. The food and vomited matter were forwarded to Madras for chemical examination, the result of which was not known. It is said that Lord Lytton approves of the Duke of Buckingham's action in Mr. Weld's case. His Grace, on the other hand, does not seem quite so satisfied with his own work; if it be true that he telegraphed from Rangoon for all the newspaper criticisms in the Weld case, and that Colonel Shaw Stewart went off to Colombo laden with a heavy bundle. Meanwhile Mr. Weld is coming home on two years' leave, and we trust that his stay in England will be gladdened by such a revision of the sentence awarded him at Madras as the real merits of his case demand.

The Bombay Gazette declares positively that the Sandeman Mission at Khelat would shortly be relieved of its onerous duties. Colonel Colley, accompanied by Major Upperton, left Jacobabad for Khelat on the night of the 8th or 9th October, the former bearing despatches for the Khan and instructions for Major Sandeman. Meanwhile two Under-Secretaries to Government in the Railway and Telegraph Departments remained at Jacobabad surveying the country with a view to pushing the railway and telegraphic communication on to Dadar or Quetta. These officers will likewise examine the Bolan and Mula Passes. This certainly looks like moving forward. Col. Loch, it seems, is not to return to Jacobabad. In that case the command of the Sind Frontier Force will probably devolve upon Colonel Nuttal, who "still retains his nerve and rides as straight and as hard as ever." The force now at Khelat will probably not be relieved until February, 1877, but Major Sandeman with a portion of the escort will accompany the Khan to meet the Viceroy at Jacobabad next month.

SIR A. ARBUTHNOT, who has some aptitude for figures, takes over the office of Finance Minister from Sir W. Muir, and will discharge the duties until Sir J. Strackey's arrival.

Colonel Cracroft, Commissioner of the Rawal Pindi Division, retires under the fifty-five years' rule almost immediately, being succeeded by Mr. Donald Macnabb, at present Officiating Commissioner of Peshawar.

DR. MORICE, at present on duty in Kashmir, will be appointed to the charge of the Punjab camps at the Imperial assemblage, and Dr. Taylor will assume medical charge of the large police force which will be collected on that occasion. There are to be extensive rifle matches for troops at Delhi.

MR. MALCOLM LOW, C.S., Commissioner of Narbadda, retires under the Secretary of State's terms. Mr. J. Pratt, of the Bengal Civil Service, has gained a reward of Rs. 1,000 for high proficiency in Bengali.

From the Calcutta papers it appears that there is intense dissatisfaction with the finding of the Coroner's jury with regard to the late explosion in the river. The neglect of the Port Commissioners to provide competent superintendence during such dangerous experiments, the fact of a boat containing 2,000 lbs. of powder being in the river a whole day before it was needed, and a boat attached to it carrying fire, and the fact that loose powder was being handled on the boat in such circumstances, set people wondering that any jury could have found nobody to blame. Had the whole powder in the boat exploded, it is believed that most of the buildings near that part of the Strand would have been demolished, and yet nobody might have been held to blame.

In a letter to the Englishman Mr. Robert Gladstone, of Liverpool, offers some plausible suggestions for raising a part of the Indian revenue in gold. The land-tax cannot of course be levied in gold, nor can the charge for stamps, post-office, telegraphs, and tribute from Native States be paid otherwise than in silver:—

than in silver:—
But you have customs, producing £2,750,000; salt, £6,250,000; and excise, £2,500,000; in all £11,500,000, which might be levied in gold, seeing that they are all, or nearly all, paid by imports. But allowing £1,500,000 for payments in India under these heads, in silver, there would remain £10,000,000 in gold, available for meeting the annual sterling debt in London. With the view of simplifying matters I would allow duties to be paid in London at the time of shipment, deducting one month's interest at 5 per cent., on goods, via the Suez Canal, and four months' interest at the same rate on goods via the Cape. The invoices would be certified by the authorities in London, and stamped with a receipt for the duty, for exhibition at the India Custom-house. Merchants would have the option of paying the duty either in London or in India, as well as of bonding their goods as hitherto; but whenever the duty was paid it must be paid in gold. I am also of opinion that the duty on opium might also be levied in gold; and, if so, another £3,000,000 would be available for the sterling payments of the Government.

Here, then, according to Mr. Gladstone, is one means of pro-

Here, then, according to Mr. Gladstone, is one means of providing all the gold which the Indian Government requires for the payment of its annual sterling debts. Even if the effect of adopting this plan would be to enhance the value of gold, it could hardly do so to any very appreciable extent; for a large portion of the sum would, for the most part, merely change hands in London. We commend this scheme to the early consideration of the Indian Government.

In the course of his recent speech on the Oudh Revenue Bill the Viceroy made a brilliant defence of the policy of the Indian Government against the misrepresentations of the well-known Belgian economist, M. de Laveleye. In Oudh, according to that writer, "the British Government has considered the talukdars, as the sole proprietors of the soil, without any reserve whatever on behalf of the interests of the subordinate holders." He went on to assert that "during that period of anarchy which preceded the annexation of Oudh, the talukdars (who are merely the ancient heads of clans, feudal seignieurs, and collectors of imposts, just like the zamindars) usurped the position of independent proprietors; and after the suppression of the last insurrection, the British Government purchased their support by recognising them in that capacity." M. de Laveleye added that "although the Government instituted an inquiry into the question whether the rayats possessed any rights at all in connection with the soil they cultivated, yet they (the rayats) were terrified into answering that inquiry with a negative." After having drawn, says Lord Lytton,

This double indictment against the British Government for bribers and intimidation (bribers in our dealings with the talukdars,—intimidation in our dealings with the rayats), M. de Laveleve continues—"In Oudh the State (that is, of course, the British Government), has stipulated no guarantee whatever for the rayat. This is a fault, and something more. It is a crime, the crime of high treason against humanity."

well, now, what can one say of assertions like this, unless it be what Horace Walpole, I believe, said of a certain lady of his acquaintance—"She has," he said, "as good a set of teeth as any woman can possibly have, who has only three teeth, and each of them black." Is it too much to say of such a passage as this, that it is as full, candid, and accurate, as any passage can be which contains only three statements, and each of themfalse? M. de Laveleye is, I believe, a member of the Cobden Club, and if so, he is certainly one of the most distinguished members of it and I have no doubt whatever that to his numerous Continental readers this circumstance will have been an all-sufficient guarantee for the accuracy of his statements upon the subject of Indian legislation. But what are the facts? Now I speak here in the presence of experienced Indian legislators. There is not a single honourable member sitting at this table who will not be able to correct me immediately if I am unwarranted in asserting that in the whole history of our land legislation for Oudh there has been no period at which the Legislature of this Enpire has ignored the existence of proprietary rights in the soil of that province, other than those of the talukdars; that at no period has it disregarded the interests of the subordinate holders of those rights; that at no period has it omitted to take elaborate precautions for the protection of the tenant and the rayat from any abuse of powers which, though recognised by our generosity, have always been restrained by our justice. I appeal to the records of our land legislation for Oudh, which I now hold in my hand. Act XXVI. of 1866 is entirely and exclusively devoted to the affirmation and definition of the claims of subordinate proprietors in Oudh. Now, this Act was passed within ten years after the annexation of the Province of Oudh; but its very preamble attests the pre-existence of rules and regulations issued by the Government of India for—what are the words?—"the better determination of claims persons possessed of subordinate rights of property" in Oudh.

Again, I turn to Act XIX. of 1868, and I find it to be one elaborate Code of Law for the maintenance of subordinate proprietary rights and for the protection of tenants in Oudh. Section 5 of this Act defines the rights of occupancy, which include those of the rayats. Sections 22 to 26 secure to the tenants of Oudh the right of compensation for improvements. Chapter IV. limits the maximum rates of rent; Chapter V. strictly circumscribes the power of ejectment; and the same consistent tendency of our land legislation for Oudh is continued in this direction, and carried on by the Bill which we hope to pass to-day. Section 25 of that Bill subjects to important exemptions the right to resume rent-free grants; and, again, Section 135 reserves to the State comprehensive powers for the rescue and preservation of the interests of tenants whose land is sold for arrears of revenue.

THE publication of Lord Salisbury's Despatch of July last, dealing with the grievances of Civil Servants in the North-Western Provinces, enables us to see how far the measures recommended by Sir R. Temple's Committee coincide with the concessions sanctioned by the India Office. The block of promotion in those Provinces, to begin with, is accepted as a fact "so serious as to threaten the efficiency of the administration." A stagnation so abnormal, affecting as it does "a large section of the service," undoubtedly calls for "an unusual and exceptional remedy." With regard, however, to the particular tional remedy." With regard, however, to the particular measures proposed, Lord Salisbury objects to granting large pensions to "young men who have done little service, and who will return to England to live as annuitants for long terms of years." Such a remedy, besides its costliness, would create an injurious precedent. It appears however that one cause of the present block in the service of the North-West Provinces is the number of high posts in Non-regulation provinces, now occupied by military and uncovenanted officers, who, on account of a difference in the scale of pensions, do not retire so early as covenanted civilians. "I would sanction"—says his Lordship-"the grant to a limited number of military officers in civil employ of a bonus of such sum as you might think fit to offer, but not exceeding, in any case, one year's pay, or the sum of Rs. 22,000, with permission toretire on the terms of the Government General Order of Jan. 1, 1876. These retirements would be in excess of the ninety allowed to the army at large. The offer should include officers not within two years of colonel's allowances." The Secretary for India is likewise prepared to sanction the grant of bonus to uncovenanted officers in addition to their pension, as proposed by the Special Committee, with a like reservation as to those who are soon to be superannuated. "With the half of the vacancies thus created, your Excellency will have no difficulty in providing employment for the civilians of the North-West Provinces suitable to their standing in the service, and especially for those belonging to the overstocked years of 1861, 1862, and 1863. But in making arrangements for this purpose, you will not in any degree lose sight of the just claims of the officers who are already in the commissions of the Non-regulation provinces."

With regard to Covenanted Civilians, Lord Salisbury would allow during the current year any civil servant of twenty years' service, who cannot as yet claim his annuity, to retire on a pension "bearing to £1,000 per annum the proportion which his term of actual residence bears to twenty-one years, the full term required for full pension." To such a relaxation of the pension rules he sees no objection, so long as the principle of granting pensions proportioned to the work done is observed. The proposed option of capitalising any balance of pension in excess of £500 per annum might also be permitted. Beyond this indulgence his Lordship declines to go. Nor does he approve of any scheme guaranteeing the payment for all time to come of a certain salary to civilians of a certain standing:—

In many cases slowness of promotion at one period of a civilian's service is compensated by rapidity of promotion at another period. I cannot therefore take cognisance of individual cases of hardship. But I am of opinion that the very peculiar circumstances of the present block in promotion, depending upon a series of events which are not likely to recur, justify the application of a temporary remedy. This may be done by granting personal allowances at the rates proposed by the special committee in the 39th paragraph of its report. I will sanction those rates for a period of five years, beginning from May 1 last, under the conditions stated in the 40th and 41st paragraphs of the report of the committee.

Lord Salisbury also asks to be informed whether the state of the junior ranks in the Civil Services of Bombay and of Lower Bengal is such as to call for any measures similar to those which he has sanctioned for the North-West Provinces. "It seems especially worthy of consideration whether the proposed pensions to those covenanted civilians who have resided less than the full term of years might not be made applicable, and this would have the special advantage in Bengal that it might be possible to transfer to some of the vacancies thus created civilians from the service of the North-West Provinces."

In Lord Salisbury's opinion the present is a fitting time for the changes involved in any plan for promoting administrative efficiency by increasing the number of districts in the North-West Provinces, and introducing a more gradual scale of salaries. The Indian Government is therefore requested to consider "whether it would not be expedient to introduce, either wholly or partially, a system of grades of senior and junior judges and collectors, such as have been created in the Lower Provinces, the opportunity being taken to form such additional collectorates as may be really required, and to make a corresponding increase in the number of joint magistrates." Any scheme for these ends his Lordship is ready to sanction, so long as their execution may involve no increase of the total outlay. The Viceroy in Council is also recommended to lose no opportunity of "drafting men from the overstocked years" into the Political and other departments. In view, morever, of the stagnation in promotion extending from the North-West to some of the Non-regulation Provinces, Lord Salisbury thinks that

The time has now come to lay down a new rule as regards some of those provinces, and, unless your Excellency in Council is distinctly of a contrary opinion, I desire that the appointments to the commissions of Oude and the Central Provinces, and to the administration of the non-regulation provinces attached to the Governments of Bengal and the North-West Provinces, be regulated henceforth in accordance with the principle applied by the 24th and 25th of Victoria, cap. 54, to the Regulation Provinces. With respect to the other Non-regulation Provinces, namely, the Punjab, Assam, British Burmah, and Sind, some admixture of military officers seems still to be advantageous. The proportion of military appointed, however, should in no case exceed one to every three civilians, and for the present, till the proper proportion is attained, you should not appoint to these commissions any military officers unless some special grounds exist in any case for a departure from this rule. Should there appear reason for the appointment of an uncovenanted servant to the administration of any Non-regulation Provinces, my sanction to the nomination must previously be obtained. These instructions are not intended to interfer with persons who are now in office, and, of course, will not affect the operation of the 6th section of 33 Victoria, cap. 3, empowering the employment of natives of India of approved merit and ability in the Civil Service of India.

In conclusion, the Secretary of State feels it necessary to "state distinctly that these orders involve no kind of pledge, and that they confer upon no person any title to claim in the future as a personal right, in the event of their being modified, any benefit which would have accrued to him from their operation; but they simply indicate the present policy of the Government." In an earlier paragraph of the same despatch Lord Salisbury had carefully closed the door to another set of rash expectations by emphatically stating that "rules such as those of Lord Dalhousie, framed for administrative purposes, and notifications such as those of the Civil Service Commissioners, indicating existing rates of salaries invarious branches of the services, must not be held to pledge Government to maintain particular offices or forms of administrative agency, or be regarded as guarantees for any particular rates of salary or prospects of promotion."

THE latest Times telegram from Calcutta adds new horrors to the tale of havoc wrought by the late cyclone. It appears that according to official returns from each police section the loss of life in the districts of Bakarganj, Noakhali, and Chittagong may be reckoned at not less than 215,000. Three large islands-Dakhin Shahbazpur, Hattiah, and Sandwip-and numerous small islands were entirely submerged by the storm wave, and so was the main land for some five or six miles inland. A Reuter's telegram on the other hand gives the estimated loss at 120,000, which is probably nearer the mark. Sir R. Temple has the gift of embellishing whatever he touches, and the lower figures are quite lamentable enough. From the Times telegram it seems that up to 11 P.M. on the night of the catastrophe there were no signs of danger, but before midnight the storm wave swept over the islands to a depth in places of twenty feet, surprising the people in their beds. Happily the groves of trees planted around each village afforded shelter to the villagers, and almost all the survivors saved themselves by climbing among their branches. Those who took refuge on the roofs of their huts were carried out to sea. A few were carried thus from Sandwip across the channel, ten miles broad, to Chittagong; but the vast majority were never heard of again. The country being perfectly flat, almost every one perished who failed in reaching a tree. There is scarcely a household in the islands and adjacent coast that has not lost many of its members. The cattle were all drowned. All the boats were swept away, and as wheeled carriages were unknown in those delta districts, the people were thus deprived of means of communication. Almost all the Civil officers and police officials in Dakhin Shahbazpur, except the Deputy Magistrate in charge, perished.

It is stated as a curious fact that in Dakhin Shahbazpur and Hattiah most of the damage was done by the storm wave from the north, sweeping down the Meghna; whereas in Sandip and Chittagong the destruction came from the south. The condition of the survivors is said to be better than might have been expected. There was much distress for two or three days, but things are now improving. Bakarganj is a great rice-producing district, and its peasantry are very prosperous. Their stores, which are mostly kept under ground, have been thoroughly soaked; but it is believed that they are not seriously damaged. Wherever Sir R. Temple went, he saw the people drying their grain in the sun. The cocoanuts will help to give subsistence till the harvest. The growing crops, which were nearly ready for reaping, and which gave splendid promise, have suffered greatly, but will still yield a fair harvest. For some days much disorder prevailed, and robberies were attempted. This state of things was soon rectified. About sixty relief centres have been established. Persons actually destitute will be relieved, but no large sums will be spent. It is believed that all danger of distress will be over after two or three weeks. The district officers are acting with great energy. Sir R. Temple started for the scene of the misfortune immediately the news was received in Calcutta, and personally visited the suffering districts, going from village to village, and making inquiries regarding the extent of the disaster. He returned to Calcutta on Thursday last.

THE following extract from the last Government Gazette has a sad significance:—

Wherever the storm wave passed, it is believed that not one-third of the population is surviving. The islands have barely one-fourth of their former inhabitants. The stench from the putrefying bodies is insufferable, and a general outbreak of cholera is hourly expected.

This fear happily has not yet been realised, except in Noakhali, where the disease has manifested itself.

The following items are also furnished by the Times agent:—
The news from the distressed districts of Madras is somewhat better.
Rain has come in time to do some good. The Bombay prospects are still gloomy. Actual famine in two or three districts seems probable, and great distress in four or five more.

The preparations for the Delhi Assemblage are being pushed on rapidly. It is believed that the cost will be well within £100,000. All military charges, including that for the Voluntcors, will be within the Budget estimate for this year. Whatever may be thought of the Assemblage, it is evidently now too late to stop it. As I said last weet the position of the Government in the matter is most difficult. Having adopted this programme and gone so far, it would be simply a useless and foolish waste of public money to stop now. The Amir of Kabul cannot attend the Assemblage, owing to an attack of typhoid fever, from which he is only now recovering. covering.

INDIA'S MORAL AND MATERIAL PROGRESS IN 1874-75—III.

UNDER the head of Agriculture we have on the whole a favourable report for the year under review. In Bengal the distress caused by the scarcity of the previous cold season gradually melted away under the cheering influence of the summer rains. The renewed anxiety consequent on the lack of rain in August in Tirhut and the neighbouring districts was dispelled by the timely downpour of September, and all further measures of relief were accordingly stopped in the following month. Heavy floods caused some damage in Madras. The crops in many parts of Bombay exceeded the average. A splendid spring harvest in the Punjab was followed by a rather short yield of the autumn crops, against which may be set a considerable increase in the breadth of land brought under cultivation. In the greater part of the North-West Provinces, the spring harvests were unusually good, thanks in some measure to the help afforded by the Ganges Canal; but the cotton and indigo crops in Allahabad and Benares suffered from the ill-timed distribution of the rain, and the other spring crops in those districts were below the average. Oudh, which early in the year was suffering from the effect of unseasonable rains in 1873, was refreshed by an early and abundant rainfall. In the Central Provinces a heavy rainfall unevenly distributed was followed by a short yield of certain crops, though the general returns were very good. For want of a railway from Nagpur to Chatisgarh, a want which is now being supplied, the cereal wealth of "the granary of Central India" could not then be turned to due account. The growth of cotton in the Warda Valley was likewise checked by the deficiency of good roads. With due encouragement many useful trade-products could be raised in these provinces. Rhea grass, for instance, will grow well there. Some good specimens of flowers and vegetables were displayed at a flower-show held this year for the first time, but unfortunately no natives were among the exhibitors. In Berar, Kurg, and British Burmah, the outturn for the year was generally good, though drought in Berar and excessive rains in Kurg caused a partial failure of some crops, while the damage done by rats in the Karen country caused much distress among the people in that part of British Burmah.

The working of model farms in different provinces seems to lead to very doubtful results. In Bengal they have been an acknowledged failure. The model farm at Saidapet in Madras was fairly successful, except from a financial point of view. The model farms in Bombay are allowed by the Government to be of much service in certain ways, but ill suited to meet the practical wants of a poor peasantry with small holdings, the grops on which require no special labour nor expensive manures. The results of the Nagpur model farm were trifling, and gained at heavy cost. It is thought that a better mode of improving husbandry is to be found in schools of agriculture, one of which was projected for Bahar, and another for Saidapet.

Government efforts to improve the breed of horses in Bombay were furthered by seven horse shows held during the year, which were visited by appreciative crowds. The farmers seem quite alive to the value of the stud-horses supplied by Government, and resort to them freely. The cattle shows were less successful in point of quality; although the stock of oxen, sheep, and goats has steadily increased, and a better style of feeding has set in, the breeds have "sunk to the lowest possible point." In the Punjab three new cattle fairs were started with some success during the year, raising the total of such fairs to fifteen. Cattle disease was very fatal in British Burmah, where the people take small care of their stock. The number of ploughs in that province increased in one year by as much as a half. Savage chiefs competed for prizes at an agricultural show in Northern Arakan, and two Khami chiefs were on the committee.

Owing chiefly to a fall in the price of cotton, there was a marked decrease in the acreage laid under cotton in Madras. The same thing occurred in the Native States of Western India. The increase of cotton-culture in the Bombay Presidency was solely due to indigenous cotton, the outturn of which exceeded by 97,661 cwts. the average of the four preceding years. In the Sind collectorate of Haidarabad the yield is said to have reached 287.19 lbs. per acre. This, however, is nothing to the yield of 473 lbs. obtained at Salaru from experiments made on a model farm with the help of an English plough. The saw-ginned cotton of Dharwar was on the whole of fair quality, and a marked improvement was reported in the produce of Khandesh. Broach however still reigned supreme in the Cotton Market. In spite of an increased cultivation the outturn of cotton in the Punjab was poor. The best cotton in the Central Provinces is grown in Nagpur and Warda. There was a large increase in the cotton area of Berar. The cotton raised in Northern Arakan, while inferior to the Egyptian staple, yields a much larger crop, and needs little cultivation.

With regard to the comparative yield of irrigated and unirrigated rice-lands, it appears from experiments made in 1873 by Mr. Apjohn in Midnapur, that in ordinary years the crops from the former are to those from the latter as 6 to 5, while in bad years the difference will be as much as  $4\frac{1}{2}$  to 1. The attempts made to grow Carolina rice in Bengal failed as usual in 1874. In Ratnagiri on the Bombay side similar attempts were more successful. The natives there prefer the Carolina rice as yielding a larger and heavier grain, and sometimes a second crop. The same kind of rice was grown successfully in the North-West Provinces and the Punjab, but the natives complained of the difficulty of husking it without breaking the grain, which though large is brittle.

Chinchona culture prospered in Sikhim during the year under review. The red bark, if less rich in quinine than the yellow, appears to yield a larger quantity of the fever-conquering alkaloid. Its advantages in this respect can now be utilised by the discovery of a cheap and efficient method of extracting the alkaloid from the bark. The bark produced in the Nilgiri plantations and sent home for sale fetched an average of 4s. the pound, or more than a shilling above that of the previous year. The attempt to grow chinchona on the Mahableshwar Hills in Bombay has been abandoned after ten years' failures, ascribed to the unfitness of the climate. In Mysor and British Burmah, on the other hand, chinchona culture was steadily gaining ground.

Tea-planting in Bengal and Assam has already become a paying industry. Every year increases the number of tea-gardens, well-stocked, and carefully managed, the produce of which commands good average prices. The average yield per acre in Darjiling rose from 256 lbs. in 1872 to about 325 lbs. in 1874. It is only of late years that tea-planting has made any real progress in the Nilgiris. In the North-West Provinces the outturn for the year amounted to 1,217,975 lbs. Nilgiri Hills have also witnessed the rapid growth of coffeeplanting in twenty years, from 500 to 13,000 acres. Mysor and Kurg are also the seats of a thriving trade in coffee. Tobacco is grown extensively in Bengal, Madras, British Burmah, and the Central Provinces. Various experiments have been made under Government auspices for improving the quality and curing of the native plant. The introduction of Manilla seed into British Burmah appears so far to have turned out well; but in Madras and the Central Provinces the native taste seems to prefer the coarser kinds of tobacco to the best produce of Virginian seeds. The indigo-crop in Bengal, owing to the drought, was one of the worst on record. There was a decrease in the area planted with indigo in Madras.

With regard to the forest lands, we find that in 1874 a large addition was made to the reserved area, chiefly in the Sundarbans and Chittagong. There appears to have been of late a sad waste of timber in the Darjiling Hills and the Sundarbans, owing to the spread of tea-planting in the one place, and of boat-building in the other. The Government have sought to check this waste by issuing strict rules for the protection of the forest reserves. Sir R. Temple's appeal to the Minister of the Sikhim Rajah to try and check the ruthless destruction of magnificent sâl and pine forests in Sikhim appears to have borne some fruit. In Bombay much progress was made in selecting and marking off forest reserves, and steps were taken to guard the forests of Sind from the encroachments of the Indus. The young plantations were everywhere doing well, and increased by many thousands of seedlings. In the Punjab also some good work was done in the way of enlarging the forest area under Government control. Little has yet been done towards the extension of forest reserves in Assam, whose vast supplies of timber would go far to make up for the growing deficiency in Bengal.

More than three hundred square miles were added to the forest reserves in the Central Provinces, and those in British Burmah were enlarged to nearly the same extent. In the latter province the breeding of lac was carried on successfully, and the attempts made to propagate this useful insect in the woods of the Central Provinces bade fair to prosper also. The seed had been applied to a large number of trees in the Satpura reserves, and the insects "had taken well," but the crop was not due till November, 1875. These experiments open out a source of large and easy profits to the State, for the cost of collecting the lac from a regular nursery will be merely nominal.

POLITICAL WISDOM. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

The admirable moderation of the East India Company's servants, and their determination to let the Mohammedan power expire by slow natural decay, without hastening its death a single moment, averted this danger. India passed from a country of Islam into a country of the enemy by absolutely imperceptible gradations. After many years' study of the District and Imperial Archives, I find myself unable to place my finger on any given year or decade of years as that in which the change was effected. We got rid of the subordinate Mohammedan Governors long before we touched the nominal supremacy of the Mohammedan Emperors. Long after that nominal supremacy had become a farce, and, indeed, up to 1835, our coinage still issued in his name. Even after we thus ventured to impress the British Sovereign's effigy on our coin, we maintained much of the Mohammedan procedure along with the Mohammedan cut language. These in their turn slowly disappeared. But it was not till 1864 that we took the bold step, and in my opinion the unwise step, of doing away with the Mohammedan Law officers by an Act of the Legislature.—Page 136 of Hunter's "Our Indian Musulmans."

SIR,—England has acquired the empire of India, not by pomp, pageantry, and pride, but by saving Province after Province from anarchy and unutterable misery. On the 1st of November, 1858, her Most Gracious Majesty's assumption of the empire was proclaimed by Sir Hope Grant at the head of an army, the courage of whose soldiers was equalled by their mercy towards the natives of Oudh. That noble army, commanded by a true Christian, who was assisted by excellent officers, among whom were Sir A. Horsford and Sir Garnet Wolseley, inaugurated her Majesty's reign in India by giving peace to a distracted province.

Was not that proclamation sufficient? Instead of beneficent action is it expected that the natives of India are to be satisfied with bombastic language? What good can be expected from the Assemblage at Delhi! The evils which are sure to result should be brought to the notice of the Secretary of State by the experienced members of Council at the India-office.

The Times correspondent at Calcutta yesterday telegraphed as follows from that city:—

Yet it cannot be denied that public opinion here is generally adverse to the Assemblage, and the press is almost unanimous in condemning it. This arises chiefly on account of the Deccan scarcity and the financial crisis.

THE DEHLI CEREMONIAL.

The Englishman owns that there is no great use in crying over spilt milk; and the Royal Titles Bill has passed into law, and is now irremediable. That being so, the Dehli assemblage was perhaps not to be avoided. Nevertheless, it is with a feeling of unmixed regret that we think about this pageant. Even had the country been in a flourishing financial condition, it would still have been a scandal, inasmuch as it would have involved, in more or less hardship, thousands of the poorest people in the country; for, according to the custom of the country, it is they who must pay for the brave show their maharajas and chiefs are to make at this new field of the cloth of gold; and they have had to pay so lately for the visit of the Prince of Wales. It is a monstrous scandal now, when the Government affirms that adverse rates of exchange have re duced the country to penury, and compelled the postponement of all but absolutely necessary public works. And this is what we shall see. The Viceroy has strictly enjoined on all departments the most rigid economy; and so probably the travelling bills of poor clerks going to and from the Hills will be cut down a few rupees; Mr. Keranee will have to pay the pankha-walas, whose services he retained "after the 15th ultimo;" a dozen bulky official letters will country the Lagrange of the pankha-walas will be reserved. compel Mr. Uncovenanted to discharge one of his peons-and, with a righteous sense of complacency at its thrift and carefulness, Government will expend fifty lakhs of rupees on a tamasha that may please my Lord Beaconsfield, but can scarcely commend itself to thinking men burdened with any bowels of compassion. In connection with financial difficulties, we have not referred to the famine that threatens us in the Dekkan and the Southern Mahratta Country, although the last news received from that part of the Empire tells us that a population of six millions of souls must be more or less affected by the scarcity of food, and the Governor of Bombay has no doubt that considerable outlay of Imperial money will be necessary to meet the distress. This must, of course aggravate and intensify the scandal of spending at such a time fifty lakhs of rupees on illuminations, cloth of gold, and tinsel generally. Since, however, there were no apprehensions of this famine, when the pro-clamation of the Queen's new title in such costly fashion was determined on, it would be unfair to impute blame to any one for this unfortunate conjuncture of misfortunes. The oriental bent of the Premier's mind, however, leads him to attach importance to omens and auguries. Will he esteem it a happy augury if the new Empress of India can only be saluted by millions of her subjects, "Ave Imperatrix! Morituri te salutant"? The idea of the Queen's new title and its high Imperial proclamation at India's expense could hardly have originated in any brain but my Lord Beaconsfield's; and that he should have been able to force this expenditure upon us, at a time of such extreme financial depression, is one more indication of the dangers India has now to face by reason of her nearness to England, and the increasing inclination of English statesmen to meddle with foreign affairs, which, in the nature of things, they cannot rightly understand cannot rightly understand.

THE COMING NATIVE COLLECTOR.

The Pioneer cannot tell what Utopian results may not accrue on the earth ten thousand years hence, but within no period which our action can affect is it reasonable to imagine European and Asiatic natures so metamorphosed from what we see them now that the British supremacy here can be anything but a good thing for India and for England. Well, then, the native share of government here will never be a very large one; at best it is a sacrifice of a certain amount of good government to gratify a sentiment among certain Pushed beyond a certain development it might become a political danger, and it is a social evil pro tanto, however little it may be developed. The sentiment is to be gratified so far as it may be better to endure badly-governed districts than to deny its gratification altogether. The gratification of the sentiment, gratification altogether. The gratification of the sentiment, moreover, is held to be progressive, but progress must not go too far in that direction, or mal-administration would become too rampant. Keeping strictly to abstract principles, an honest examination of the proposal before us lands one in absurdities of this kind. How much more entangled the situation becomes directly one passes to practicalities. The native employed in the Civil Service must be an English-speaking native. That is just as essential as that the European officer should be a Hindustani-speak-But the condition at once shuts out the whole class ing European. of natives for whom one would be most anxious to find public employment, the representatives of noble and princely families who are really cut out by our regime from that share in the government of their country they might otherwise have. The native upper classes, sons of rajahs and the like, are not the natives who learn English and obtain that kind of European education which would enable them to take part in the administration of British India. Who, then, are the natives who would be available for employment as proposed! The class we have artificially created and no others; if indeed, to -tell the truth, there are any persons all through India who would fairly fulfil the conditions required. Probably Lord Salisbury fancies natives who would do for magistrates of districts are plenty as blackberries from Delhi to Calcutta. A little while ago in noticing this subject we asked our readers at large if they knew of any such putting the qualifications in a simple and reasonable way, in a shape which they would probably have been passed even by any honest representative of the native employment party at home—but not a solitary correspondent replied. The Bengal Government, as we have seen, forced to send up some names, has sent up two, which, to say the least, public opinion in the Lower Province fails to support, and which the Bengal Government is supposed to have sent faute de micu.c simply. In fact, the whole project is an exotic impracticable notion, which merely finds a little favour in this country on what seems to us very inadequate grounds among a small group of too sanguine philanthropists. We should be glad to think it were less impracticable, and that the higher civilisation here were winning more converts, converted to the core of their hearts, so that they might love civilisation better than race, and be men who, put in high office among Europeans, would do something to break down race prejudice in two directions; but to believe that this desirable state of things can be realised by orders from the India Office would be a vain dream. The present project is foolish and mischievous, grounded on delusion and tending to disaster, and the Government which allows itself to become the instrument of pressing it forward will be very sorry for having done so in the long run.

EPISCOPAL NEW BROOMS IN INDIA.

The Bombay Gazette relates that when the Cowley Fathers went to St. Peter's Church in Mazagon, a number of people, numbering from sixty to ninety, found that they could not conscientiously approve of the method of worship conducted by Fathers Page and Rivington. They requested the Fathers to discontinue these practices, but, as apparently these practices are so many keys to heaven specially invested in the Cowley Fathers and other religious gentlemen of their way of thinking and acting, no attention was paid to the request. They next appealed to the Archdeacon of Bombay, who was then the highest ecclesiastical authority in the island, as he was acting for the late Bishop Douglas, and he decided that several of the practises pursued by the Cowley Fathers were illegal and should be discontinued. But, just as celebrated lawyers have been known to become confused and speechless if the button were cut off which they were accustomed to twirl in Court before the Judges, so the Cowley Fathers resolved to stick to the things which gave them power and notoriety, no matter at what cost of conscientious dissatisfaction in the congregation of St. Peter's. The following are some of the buttons which the Cowley Fathers persist in twirling in the face of their Creator, and which are dearer to them than the adherence of scores of simple-minded followers of the Church of England who do not understand these things :-

1. Wafers (use of) instead of bread. 2. Wine mixed with water. 3. Adoration of the Sacrament. 4. Elevation of the sacramental species. 5. Prostration after freceiving the Communion. 6. Processional Cross. 7. Bowing to the Cross. 8. The services of an acolyte or lay server. 9. Lighted candles. 10. Confession and the Confessional. 11. The doctrine of the Real Presence. 12. A sacrificing priest.

It was, we think, quite natural that many people should object to these things. Better judges than they are of ecclesiastical propriety had decided many of these practices to be illegal. The substitution of wafers for bread and the mixing of water and wine were declared to be illegal by the Purchas judgment; and various authorities have aid it down that the "processional cross," "bowing to the cross," and the services of an acolyte are also illegal. When to these things are added the Romish practices of the confessional it is no wonder that the dissentients resolved to quit St. Peter's and have a house of worship of their own. Rather than see the flock scattered which the Cowley Fathers had driven away, the Rev. Mr. Deimler, at the request of the dissentients, undertook to lead worship weekly in a small house at Mazagon. The quiet worshipping of these people has now been rudely terminated by the Bishop of Bombay, who has ordered Mr. Deimler, with all the sharp arrogance of a young pre-latical parvenu, to hold no more weekly services, but to mind his own work as a missionary. Mr. Deimler has protested in vain, and his little congregation have expressed their sympathy with him; and there at present the matter stands. In order that the congregation of the Cowley Fathers may be swollen, that the paramount power of the Bishop of Bombay may be asserted over poor missionaries who are struggling in their own way to help on Christianity in India, a small congregation of Christians have been summarily deprived by another Christian of such religious consolations as they could receive weekly from a pastor whose services chimed in more harmoniously with their consciences than the gaudy performances of the Cowley Fathers! It is nothing to my Lord Bishop of Bombay that his action may drive a number of people to seeede altogether from the Church of England, that their immortal souls might be in danger of perishing from the want of the religious sustenance he has snatched from them, or that at the least the Christian feelings of a small religious community may be supplanted by intensified feelings of disgust at English Church prelatical autocracy and the thinly disguised mummeries of the Church of Rome to which he was indirectly given his sanction and approval-no; these are but trifles, compared with the satisfaction of letting the small ecclesiastical community of Bombay know that a Bishop is a personage who must be obeyed, no matter at what cost to the general cause of Christianity.

STATION TALK.

CALCUTTA Oct. 16.—The inquiry before Mr. Marsden, the Coroner of Calcutta, into the causes of the explosion on Wednesday week was held on the 12th, but, as might have been expected, nothing new has transpired. All that seems certain is that Sergeant Harrison, after filling the cask with gunpowder, hammered in a wooden plug with an iron hammer, and poured some melted wax over the plug. He gave a khalassie an order for a third supply of wax, which the man went to the jolly-boat to obey, when the explosion took place. There was no fire on the torpedo boat, but on the jolly-boat alongside was a wood fire, used to melt the wax. The jolly-boat was made fast to the other with a rope, and, except when hauled up to it, was about thirty feet off. It seems impossible to find out the real cause of the explosion. Major Eckford, who gave evidence upon the inquiry, said he could not account for it, except on the supposition that there was some loose powder out ide the cask. Harrison was seen with a dry fuze in his hand, but this fact does not seem to help to a solution of the mystery. Harrison was, it appears, a very good man at his work, and had been in torpedo committees at home, and gone through a regular course of training. He was preparing the charge for an explosion on the following day, and as his attendance was sufficient for the purpose, no blame seems to attach to any one for not having been blown up with him. Mr. Duff Bruce gave all necessary orders for regulating the strength of the charges, and there his responsibility ceased, until the time fixed for blowing up the vessel, which could not be done without his being on or near The jury at the inquest found that there was nothing before them to show whether the explosion was accidental or not; and on the evidence before them they attach no blame to any one of the officers connected with the working of the torpedo.—News reached us the other day from Darjeeling of the sudden death, from heart disease, of Mr. Henry Woodrow, Director of Public Instruction. It is not only in Calcutta that the loss of this most kind-hearted, good man will be deplored, and his widow has the consolation—such as it is—of a very general and sincere sympathy. Mr. Woodrow was educated at Rugby, and was one of Dr. Arnold's sixth form boys in the school house; he was an enthusiastic admirer of Arnold, and always ready to talk of his old school with the freshness of a boy who had just left it. I have heard it said that he was one of those from whom Tom Hughes drew his characters for "Tom Brown's Schooldays." If this is so, it was none other than a manly and upright one that could be drawn from him.

LAHOR, Oct. 14.—The revised judicial scheme, of which I wrote some time since as having been sent home to the Secretary of State for sanction, will come into force with effect from 1st July last. The Government of India seem to have taken it for granted that the scheme will be approved of by the Home Government, and so, to save further trouble and correspondence, have sanctioned its retrospective introduction themselves. Originally there were sixteen appointments of Assistant Commissioners, 1st class and sixteen 2nd class. The number of Assistant Commissioners, 1st class, is now reduced to two only, the number of 2nd class remaining the same. In lieu of the fourteen appointments taken from the 1st class of Assistant Commissioners, fourteen appointments of Judicial Assistants are made, quite distinct from the general line of the commission, with separate salaries of their own. The extra allowances formerly known as Judicial Assistants' allowances, and given to Assistant Commissioners in addition to their pay as such, have been abolished, except with regard to the allowances to Extra Assistant Judicial officers, and to the officer temporarily appointed to Simla each year; these will still draw their own pay, plus so much as Judicial Assistants' allowance. The new scheme distributes Judicial Assistants' into three grades, and is as follows: -First grade, six appointments at Rs. 1,100 each; second grade, four at Rs. 1,000 each; third grade four at Rs. 900 each. Extra allowance to an Assistant Commissioner at Simla, Rs. 200 for six months in each year. Judicial allowances for Extra Assistant Commissioners, two at Rs. 200 each; two at Rs. 200 each, and four at Rs. 100 each. This redistribution of appointments is certainly a vast improvement on the original scheme, which was "neither flesh, fish, nor good red herring;" and how such a crude un-satisfactory scheme as it was could ever have been sanctioned is beyond comprehension. However, that is a thing of the past, and the new scheme ought to gladden, at all events, the hearts of all those in the commission whose good fortune it will be to be appointed Judicial Assistant within the next month or so. The name of Judicial Assistant is hardly a happy one. On the whole, of course, one would imagine him to belong to the judicial branch of the service exclusively, but the old order hath not changed yet in the Punjab, nor given place to new, and we find Judicial Assistants are only the old Assistant Commissioners with larger salaries; in some cases they even carry on the Treasury duties when an Extra Assistant or Assistant Commissioner is not available. The appointment of Judicial Assistants has, however, got the thin end of the wedge in towards that most desirable end, the entire separation of the judicial assistants has a separation of the s cial from the revenue administration, but it will be a very long time before that separation is ultimately effected in the Punjab. It is, of course, impossible for me even to suggest who will be the fortunate recipients of these appointments so soon to be distributed; but I should imagine that some will have to be given to 2nd class Assistant Commissioners, as several of them have been holding the post of Judical Assistants for some time past.—Pioneer Correspon-

THE TISTA BRIDGE.—The bridging of the Tista is to be commenced during the coming cold weather. The bridge will be a steel wire suspension one, and will have a span of about 275 feet from tower to tower.—Darjiling News.

The Delhi Assemblage.—Bengal sends one independent Chief to the Assemblage, the Maharaja of Sikkim, who will be attended by the Political Officer, Mr. Edgar, c.s.i. This, it is said, will be the first time that a Sikkimputtee Rajah has attended any tamasha beyond the bounds of his own territories.

The Prince of Wales and Messrs. Kellner and Co.—Messrs. Kellner and Co. have, we see, received a testimonial from the Prince of Wales, expressive of H.R.H.'s entire satisfaction with the arrangements made by them throughout the royal tour in this country. This will be some compensation to them for the grumbling encountered by them in connection with the Delhi entertainment, in respect of which, however, they were probably more sinned against than sinning.—Englishman, Oct. 21.

India's Foreign Trade.—From the returns relating to the Trade

INDIA'S FOREIGN TRADE.—From the returns relating to the Trade and Navigation of British India for the first five months of the current financial year we see that, as compared with the same period of last year, the total value of merchandise imported was Rs. 13,92,63,289, as against Rs. 14,74,47,493; and that of merchandise exported Rs. 25,29,31,707, as against Rs. 25,81,10,968. The value of treasure imported was Rs. 3,57,41,500, as against Rs. 2,00,63,194; and of that exported Rs. 1,90,08,200, as against Rs. 7,97,486. The amount of import duty collected was Rs. 1,69,01,257, as against Rs. 1,77,77,337, and of export duty Rs. 20,65,604, as against Rs. 33,02,776, showing a total decrease in the customs revenue of Rs. 21,13,252.

The North-West Frontier.—Speculation as to probable arrangements on the frontier point to the possibility that Major Sandeman will be put in charge of the Upper Scinde frontier, and that a Resident will be appointed, subordinate to him, at Khelat. Major Sandeman might very likely in that case have charge of the Belooch border in the Derajat; as far as the Dehra Ghazi Khan border. There might still be a Commissioner for the lower Belooch border; the whole arrangement being under the Punjab Government. But all schemes of this kind are purely conjectural for the present. Even if the Viceroy has made up his mind, he has not disclosed his intentions, except so far as Colonel Colley's mission, coupled with other circumstances, may have unavoidably rendered some of them apparent.—Pioneer.

THE NORTHERN BENGAL RAILWAY.—A numerously signed memorial has been presented to the Lieutenant-Governor by the residents of Darjiling urging the desirability of the early completion of the Northern Bengal State Railway to the foot of the Darjiling hills. The Darjiling paper says that the memorial "has been favourably received by the Lieutenant-Governor, and has already, or will be immediately sent on to the Government of India for consideration." And adds: "We think that a memorial with the same object got up by those in Calcutta, who are pecuniarily interested in the Darjiling district (a very influential and numerous class), to the Lieutenant-Governor, on his return from Darjiling, would have much weight, as it would prove to the Government that there is a strong public feeling in favour of carrying out the N.B.R., in its entirety."

Colonel Walton.—Colonel Walton, of the Calcutta Volunteers, has been appointed to the command of the Volunteer Battalion which is to be formed from detachments of the several volunteer corps throughout India and embodied at Delhi at the Imperial Assemblage. Captain Fitzroy Stephen, Rifle Brigade, is appointed staff officer of the corps. These selections will give much satisfaction. Colonel Walton has for years worked hard for the Calcutta Volunteers, and in spite of many obstacles has succeeded in bringing his corps to 'a high state of efficiency in drill and shooting, as well as numbers. He is highly esteemed by all ranks, and there are few public men in Calcutta more popular than the "old Colonel." Captain Stephen was for some years Inspector and Adjutant of the East Indian Railway Volunteers, and by his genial, pleasing manner endeared himself to the whole corps. He organised the E. I. Railway Volunteers, and with much trouble and constant labour brought the corps on in drill and discipline till it is now in the highest state of efficiency.

The Coming Finance Minister.—Sir John Strachey, who, as already intimated, is to be our new Financial Minister, will return to India to take up his portfolio towards the end of the present year, or, more probably, early in 1877. The intervening months will doubtless be very full of figures, for Sir John is said to be taking lessons—not unneeded—under Sir Louis Mallet. In the special department of finance he has not hitherto made any mark, while the connection of his name with the bated income-tax does not dispose the public to rejoice in his appointment. There is, however, hardly any possibility now of a revival of the income-tax, and Sir John's acknowledged ability is great. Many are of opinion that he is one of the very few officials with whom India has lately been blessed who can lay some claim to statesmanship. One quality at least no one denies him, that of courage, and we may look for a little more vigour than we have lately been accustomed to in the Financial Department. The only doubt is if it will be properly directed.—Friend of India.

The Release of Major Hewett.—Major Hewett, to whose arrest and trial we have sometimes made a passing reference in these columns, appears to have been found guilty of the technical offence of borrowing money—rather a large sum, it must be confessed—from a native gentleman in Oudh. As however this loan does not appear, according to the verdict of the court-martial, to have been effected during the time when Major Hewett was officiating as Deputy Commissioner of Barraitch, perhaps civilian readers may think that the reprimand with which his long period of suspension from office has wound up was superfluous. The length of that period of suspension is also, perhaps, deserving of consideration. It extended, as we lately observed, over sixteen months. In that time, a person starting westward from Calcutta might traverse the whole globe, and after getting round by China, Japan, and Burmah, set up a tea plantation in Chittagong. However, there is one worse evil that might have befallen Major Hewett from which he has happily been set free. He might, being perfectly innocent, have been consigned to the tender mercies of the present Government of Bengal. On this he may, we think, quite fairly be congratulated.—

The Loss of the "Cawdor Castle."—The sentence pronounced yesterday morning by Mr. Marsden on Mr. Simons, who was tried on Tuesday last for the loss of the Cawdor Castle, was as follows:—Mr. Marsden,—I have carefully considered this case, and it has been a question of considerable importance to me to determine what punishment to inflict. The defendant Simons is an officer who has been eighteen years in Government employ, and except in the present case has never endangered the safety of any vessel; three certificates from captains of vessels now in this port have been placed in my hands, testifying to his previous good conduct and carefulness while in charge of their vessels. In the present instance, defendant has been found, by the verdict of a competent jury, to have been both unskilful and negligent, and so to have caused the total loss of the B. S. Cawdor Castle; and not only is the vessel and all her cargo totally lost, but a number of lives have been sacrificed also. I have endeavoured to find extenuating circumstances in the case to enable me to modify the sentence that I am about to pass, but in vain. The case appears to me to be one of a very gross nature, and considering that the defendant has been eighteen years in the Pilot Service, and at the end of that period should have been found guilty of incompetency and unskilfulness, as in the present case, I should not be doing my duty were I ever to give him an opportunity of again causing a similar disaster. The sentence of the Court is that the defendant Simon's be dismissed from the service.—Indian Daily News, Oct. 20.

THE WEATHER AND CROPS.—Reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 19th October, 1876, state that in Madras rain is reported from Malabar and Tanjore, a shower in Kistna, and a little rain in Madura; except in Malabar, prospects are worse than last week. In Mysor there has been no rain during the week, and the condition of the crops is critical; distress is being already felt. In Bombay reports are good from Sind and Guzerat; the only rainfall has been a few showers in Dharwar and Belgaum; there is no improvement in prospects in the Deccan or the Southern Mahratta Country, and in Khandeish and Nassick the crops are also in a bad condition; distress is general in the Deccan and some other districts. In the Central Provinces rain has fallen with good effect at Sambalpore, Central Provinces rain has fallen with good effect at Sambalpore, Nagpore, Seonee, Saugor, and Wurdha; elsewhere it is in some places required for the rice, but prospects are generally fair. In Berar the crops are in good condition, but rain is required for the rabee sowings; grain is being exported to the Deccan districts of Bombay. In Central India rain has fallen only at Sutna; prospects are good. Falls are reported from several parts of the Northern States of Rajpootana, and prospects are favourable. In Bengal there has been general and in many places abundant rain; the promise of the winter rice crop is excellent. Good rain has fallen in Assam, and reports are favourable. In the North-Western Provinces there have been showers in all districts except Jhansee, and hail in some; prospects are good. In Oudh good rain has fallen, and the crops promise well. In the Punjab there has been a general moderate rainfall, and prospects are favourable. Reports from Burmah are good.

JOTTINGS FROM BRITISH BURMAH.

A new steamer of the Irrawaddy Flotilla Company lately ran up to Mandalay in sixty hours, and down again to Rangoon in forty-nine, this being by far the fastest journey made on record. It is only some seven or eight years ago that the weary journey to Mandalay took eight or ten days, and this too, in a steamer whose accommodatook tion was cramped and meagre, to the last degree. Tempora mutantur, and in this case certainly for the better. But while communication has opened out so rapidly on the Irrawaddy, in other ways communication throughout the province has remained very much in statu quo. A number of roads have certainly been commenced, but none completed, and the Prome Railway will be the first real step in the right direction. It seems not very creditable to Government that postal arrangements should be so extremely bad. What would people in India say to having their mails delivered, as they are in Toungoo from Rangoon (a distance of about 200 miles) in from ten to fourteen days? Yet this is positively the case. Why should the mails at least the lighter provider of them. mails, at least, the lighter portion of them, not be run up the Toungoo-road by banghy as they do all over India? There is no serious difficulty in the way; there are a few breaks at bridges, but they are nothing to what the banghy-wallah crosses constantly in India.

Burmah has of late received the credit of being the Land of Promise for Junior Civilians, but however true this may have been some short time ago, it can be so no longer. When Mr. Eden insome short time ago, it can be so no longer. When Mr. Eden introduced his first batch of competition-wallahs into this ultima thule it was the fashion to congratulate them on being posted to a non-regulation province, where fever and promotion were to be had in plenty. Neither are to be had now. And as regards promotion, I fear ere long they will see the reverse of the medal in the form of a block in promotion, and that a very serious one. Any one taking up the Civil List can see for himself that the future may look bright for those who are deputies, or close to that grade; but for the juniors low down the list of assistant commissioners, one would require the sanguine temperament of a Mark Tapley to be jolly over the study. It would be rather a mockery to wind up this paragraph (though doubtless were I issuing a Government despatch, say on the present financial difficulty, it would be the proper thing to do) with the Micawber-like reflection that "every cloud has its silver lining."

A great deal has been written about, and large sums expended on, reclamation in Burmah. The subject is a very important one. In discussing the merits of reclamation either by itself, or with regard to its sworn enemy, fishery, it seems to me that the real question has been begged, or at any rate never been touched upon. advisability of a reclamation scheme, if there be no engineering difficulty, can be decided by only one test—a crucial one, and that is whether there be a population sufficient to take up this reclaimed land or not. If there be not this excess population, it is simply waste of money. At present, far from there being any such available number of settlers, the only people who can be induced to take up this reclaimed land, as a fact, are those who abandon inferior for better soil. This will never pay Government. Again, in the question of reclamation versus fishery, I think that sparsely peopled as the province now is, it is useless and wasteful to reclaim land for cultivation, and it only remains to be settled whether fisheries, which now bring in a very large revenue, should be allowed or not. There can be no question but that fisheries do an immense deal of harm, as they are worked in Burmah, shutting up the natural drainage channels and water-logging the whole country. A great deal can be done in a small way in this direction, especially by means of the new Fishery Act lately introduced by Mr. Rivers Thompson. Fisheries should gradually be stopped from year to year as much as possible, the natural channels opened, and thus the drainage be improved with a view to future reclamation being undertaken when they may be found really requisite. The revenue lost by closing the fisheries would be recouped to Government by cultivation of land which the fishermen would be compelled to take to as their only means of livelihood. Thus the land might be prepared for future real-matter without our exclusive and the second for future real-matter without our exclusive and the second for future real-matter without our exclusive and the second for future real-matter without our exclusive and the second for future real-matter without our exclusive and the second for future real-matter without our exclusive and the second for future real-matter without our exclusive and the second for future real-matter without our exclusive and the second for future real-matter without our exclusive and the second for the seco pared for future reclamation without any serious sacrifice of revenue. -Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

Civil.—Mr. Wedderburn, Collector of Coimbatore, will, it is expected, be retiring from the service early next year. Mr. Grose will probably be his successor at Coimbatore, leaving Messrs. Stokes and Galton to be confirmed in their respective appointments of Secretary and Sub-Secretary of the Board of Revenue. - Madras Mail.

PUBLIC WORKS.—According to the Madras papers, Mr. Standish Lee, the Executive Engineer to the Madras Municipality, has resigned his appointment. At the next meeting of the commissioners it will, we believe, be proposed to give Mr. Lee the gratuity usual in such cases.

LEGAL.—Last week, in the Madras High Court, on the Original side, before the Hon. Mr. Justice Kindersley, on the motion of Mr. Johnstone, Mr. Robert Fletcher Grant was enrolled as a solicitor of the High Court.

Bellary.—The distress in Bellary continues very severe. Cholam is selling at nine seers per rupee. An inhabitant of Haraponhally has hung himself in consequence of being unable to support his EARTHQUAKE.—There was an earthquake at Secunderabad early on the morning of the 25th, at about twenty minutes after two. All the houses began to shake, and the shaking continued for about fifty or sixty seconds. Then again, at about 8 A.M., a slight shock was also felt in some places.

The University.—The number of candidates for the next Matriculation Examination at Madras is 2,500, the largest number ever known in any Indian University. Schoolmasters in Madras complain that as soon as the applications of the candidates are sent in the classes become deserted, and cramming is resorted to, simply to gain the useless distinction of having passed the examination.

DROUGHT AT MADRAS.—The Right Rev. Dr. Fennelly has issued a Circular letter to the clergy of his vicariate to the effect that as famine and scarcity are threatening Madras and its suburbs, he requested them to offer up prayers for rain. Accordingly yesterday morning Litanies and prayers were recited in all the Roman Ca-tholic Churches in Madras for rain before the usual service began. Madras Mail, Oct. 23.

Salt Traffic.—For a series of years past it has been observed that there was a gradual falling-off in the traffic in salt on the northwest line of the Madras Railway. The Government of India accordingly asked the local Government to ascertain the cause, and it appears that earth salt is preferred to the sea salt, and is manufactured in larger quantities than licensed. The salt manufactured at Nellore also finds a readier sale than that sent down from Madras.

THE WELD CASE.—Mr. H. S. Thomas, the Collector of Tanjor, is now engaged in preparing an elaborate defence of his proceedings in the Negapatam Sanyasi case against the strictures expressed and implied in the order of Government thereon. We also observe that some of the friends of the late Sanyasi are getting up a memorial to the Government, praying for the removal of Mr. Thomas from his appointment.

EDUCATIONAL.—The Madras Journal of Education learns that Mr. Fortey, the Inspector of the Second Division, returns shortly from furlough, and Mr. Bradshaw, the Acting Inspector, takes a few months' leave, on the expiration of which he is to act in the Fifth Division for Mr. Marden, who is about to take furlough to England. Mr. E. C. Caldwell is expected to return very shortly from England to resume his duties as Inspector of the Fourth Division. Mr. Moss, the headmaster of the Mangalore Provincial School, is, we hear, about to proceed to England on sick certificate.

THE HON. R. A. DALYELL.—The Hon. R. A. Dalyell will proceed to Calcutta shortly to resume his place as the Madras representative in the Legislative Council of the Governor-General. At the close of the session—if the few sittings of the Council in Calcutta can be dignified with such a title—Mr. Dalyell will probably take a furlough to Europe, to return we hope to take up the appointment of Chief Commissioner of Mysor. It is not thought that Mr. Saunders will hold that appointment more than two years, though it appears he is at liberty to keep it for five if so minded.—Madras Mail.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM.—Intimation has been received at Trevandrum that his Grace the Governor will arrive there on the 25th and at Cochin on the 29th instant. Grand preparations, says the Cochin paper, are going on at Ernacollum and Bolghatty for the reception of the gubernatorial party. Pandals are being erected, whitewash is being liberally employed, and prodigious are the efforts made to give Ernacollum—the capital of Native Cochin—an ordinarily decent appearance. But the Malabars must wait a little longer before they can hope to see the Governor .- Madras Mail, Oct. 24.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY BY SOLDIERS .- A correspondent, writing from Bolaram on the 4th Oct., mentions that a most daring highway robbery, in broad day light, was committed by three European soldiers belonging to the 16th Queen's Lancers. It would appear that a peon of the office of the Accountant-General, while returning from the Chudderghaut treasury with the pay of the office establishment, was waylaid by three European soldiers and relieved of a bag said to contain some six hundred rupees or more. The matter having been immediately reported to the police, they, our correspondent adds, have been successful in tracing the perpetrators of this daring act, who will be brought to justice in due course. The regiment leaves for England in November next.

THE MYSOR PRINCE AND THE IMPERIAL ASSEMBLAGE.—Grand preparations, though in a secret and mysterious manner, are being made for the departure to Delhi of the Maharajah of Mysor, accompanied by the Chief Commissioner of the province. A company of the Barr Sepoys and a squadron of the Silladar Horse are also, it would appear, to be in attendance, but for this statement we cannot vouch. No doubt, as days go by, most of the items of the arrangements will come out, as naturally as if the order of Government had been placed at the disposal of the press, as it ought to have been.

In the meanwhile, it will be interesting to know that the following European and native officers of the Commission are to form the suite of H.H. the Maharajah and the Chief Commissioner, namely —Colonel J. L. Pearce, Colonel A. C. Hay, Lieut.-Colonel W. H. Johnson, Mr. B. Krishniengar, Mr. T. R. A. Thumboo Chetty, Mr. Mahomed Ali, Mr. P. N. Kristna Murti, Mr. Chappadi Subbaiya, Mr. Kariappa, Mr. Gunapati, Major T. Clarke, Colonel R. Renton, Captain F. A. Wilson, Captain J. S. F. Mackenzie, and Mr. C. Rungacharlu.—Bangutore Examiner.

THE GUARDIAN OF THE MAHARAJAH OF MYSOR.—Colonel G. B. Malleson, c.s.i., whose guardianship of the young Maharajah of Mysor lately expired, is posted in general orders to do general duty at Fort William. What is to become of the pamphleteer? The Colonel tried hard to be Chief Commissioner of Mysor, but his "vaulting ambition" overleaped itself in a way that is not likely to be soon forgotten by the officers of the Mysor Commission, or by the Colonel himself. It was a comparatively easy thing for the Colonel to insinuate that the Commission, taken bodily, was a "bad lot," and that it required to be looked after by a Malleson; but the Colonel curiously miscalculated his influence with the Government of India under Lord Northbrook. The late Governor-General, unlike Lord Lawrence, was under no obligation to Colonel Malleson; and not only declined to accept the Colonel's own estimate of his own powers, but intimated in very plain language that the Colonel was hardly wise in making, however vaguely, rash charges against his brother officials which he could not substantiate, and endeavoured to palliate on the miserable plea that he had lately fallen from his horse and injured his head.—Madras Mail, Oct. 24.

THE FAMINE IN THE DAKHAN.

THE DAKHAN, Oct. 20.-I arrived at Dhond at about 11 o'clock last night. While en route from Bombay I learned from an official that the Collector of the Puna district had gone up to Seroor to inquire into and, if necessary, settle a disturbance which was rumoured to have taken place, owing to the scarcity of food grains and the high prices which the few merchants who were trading demanded. My informant added that the country about Dhond and Indapore was already suffering to a much more serious extent than any other part of the Puna Collectorate, and was in a worse condition than the adjoining district of Sholapore. I therefore stopped here last night with a view to ascertain as far as possible the real state of affairs, and I am happy to say that in one respect, at least, I have found the people much better off than I had expected. several sources I had heard that the Bheema was completely dried up, and that consequently the people were wholly deprived of water, Fortunately this is not the case. The river still contains a body of water which, as far as I can judge, ought to last for, at the lowest computation, two months more. This river takes its rise among the hills which lie to the north of Puna, and forms the boundary between the Puna and Ahmedauggur Collectorates along the northeast side of the former, until it reaches Bhawadeh, where it is joined by the Nira, which marks the southern limit of the Collectorate. The people who inhabitant the country on either side of these two rivers are dependent on them for their main—and in most places only—supply of fresh water; what the consequences of their failure would be it is difficult to prophesy, as it would be almost an impossibility to obtain an adequate supply of water from any distance

When I got up this morning I was struck with the barren, deso-late appearance of the country. Turn my eye in whatsoever direction I would the same sight met me on every hand. A great naked plain, red and fiery-looking under the morning sun; and except for a short distance along the opposite bank of the river totally devoid of trees. The few cattle visible were wandering about nibbling at the stunted blades of grass, which, few and far between, are of such a diminutive size that they almost escape the eye. The desert of the Hejaz I can truly say is not a whit more bleak and dreary than the country which surrounds me as I write this; even the cactus plants are withered and faded looking, and the earth crumbles into dust under your foot, being already half-pulverised by the long dry heat. I walked over to the village this morning, and found the bazaar almost deserted; indeed, the whole place seems to be in a chronic state of decay. Dhond boasts of being a walled village—town I cannot call it; and the walls were apparently in their day no mean obstacles to the advance of the thieving hordes who, before the time of our paternal Government, ran riot over these undulating plains. Inside the walls I found one half the village nothing but ruins, while of the remaining half the greater part is deserted. The wily Mabrattas have fled before the approach of the foe, against whom they know they cannot contend, so gathering together their little household effects, their cattle and their worldly wealth of all other descriptions, they have left for various parts of the country, where either the "Sircar" is supplying work for the destitute, or nature, having maintained her customary routine, has provided for those who are willing to work.

In the bazaar, as I have already said, I found business at a standstill. Some of the shops seemed to contain a moderate supply of the much needed dana or grain, but none of the shops were open; all were closed, or at most, opened only so far as to admit light into the interior. Everywhere everything bore a deserted appearance, even the big Hindoo temple with its quaintly sculptured figures and grinning gods was left to the occupation of a solitary wandering ascetic, whose ash-clad body seemed in perfect harmony with the whole scene. Here and there at long intervals, amidst the narrow gullies and streets, a group of three or four disconsolate looking individuals might be seen, dressed in the scantiest apparel (their normal condition), standing in the roadway, and occasionally one or two of the "upper class" would sit at their heels, rest their clenched hands on their knees, and sorrowfully chew the cud of reflection

From the natives I could learn nothing trustworthy. Garulous enough the moment I touched on the subject of the famine, they began to flood my ears with sensational tales of "ruin, death, and misery" of such an extent that I could more easily believe in the bona fide existence of the Lilliputians than in the tales of my Mahratta friends. But amidst the wild mass of exaggeration which I was doomed to listen to, there was no doubt a substratum of truth, which, though it formed the foundation of their tales, was not to be easily severed from the fictitious superstructure which their imaginations has constructed. Villages wholly deserted, deaths from starvation, social ruin, family degradation, and many other incidents went to complete these piteous narratives; but I should be misleading your readers if I repeated them, for, so far as I have seen, the famine is as yet in the future, nothing worse than a scarcity being felt at present. There is grain to be had, but at an exorbitant price, and the people are doing wisely in clearing away from the doomed districts before their small funds are exhausted. They complain greatly of the grain vendors, mostly Banias and Bhatias I believe, who seem determined to keep as much of their stock on hand as possible, with a view to vending it when the famine will be at its worst, thus reaping a larger profit. At present the only thing to be done is for the Government to bring grain into the market and sell it at the lowest possible rate. The necessity for relief works on a large scale does not appear to exist here. The remaining population is extremely small, and they would seem for the most part to have some funds in hand—very little it must be, but yet some; and the Government should not grant assistance until it is absolutely necessary, except in the way of providing cheap grain.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

LATEST FROM THE FAMINE DISTRICTS.—We have received confirmation of the rain around Dharwar from three several correspondents. One gentleman, writing on the 20th says:—"We had a copious shower of rain yesterday evening, and to-day the sky in the east is dark with clouds . . . though it has come so late the rain will yet provide water in many villages where the want of it was severely felt, and it will revive the dying crops where they do exist, and with them the hopes of the unfortunate ryots. The grain dealers have been holding off their stocks of grain, expecting higher prices, but in this I hope they will be sadly disappointed. One of the oldest and most enterprising European firms in these districts has, I understand, made arrangements for importing large quantities of the grains used by the poorer classes. I think they run a good deal of risk in doing so, this being a grain-producing district. There is, I learn, large stocks of grain in the country, stowed in grain pits, sufficient to feed the people till next year's harvest, and unless famine prices prevail, grain from Bengal and other parts of India could be imported here only at a loss. Great distress is felt by the people, owing to the difficulty experienced in obtaining grain, especially jowaree, the staple food here, which is caused by the reposity of the grain dealers. Mr. Debett, with G. 2000 and the control of the grain dealers. the rapacity of the grain dealers. Mr. Robertson, the Collector, has been making the most praiseworthy exertions to counteract this evil, but with principles of free trade this is indeed a difficult task in districts like ours, where means of communication are neither easy nor rapid." Another correspondent, writting hopefully from the district, says:—"We had a heavy thunderstorm yesterday afternoon, with a fair amount of rain. Thunder showers are, of course, always more or less local, but this storm, from what I hear, passed over a wide extent of country, and while reviving the withering crops, will also enable the poor ryots to plant their cold weather crops, and if more rain comes, which I think likely, the wheat, gram and white jowaree will soon be put in. It is too late for cotton now, and not much is planted." A native gentleman tells us that the effects of the famine are already felt in Bombay "to a considerable Where a family of four or five persons had to spend Rs. 30 degree. or Rs. 40 for the monthly food, half as much more does not cover the expense." This is due, he suggests, to the "greed of the grain dealers," which, unless it be checked, must result in "divesting Bombay of the labouring and middle classes." But we confess that we cannot quite see, even if these statements are accurate, where they will be better off. We have received Government papers to the effect that nine relief works, involving the expenditure of half a lakh over the estimate for the present year, have been sanctioned for the Belgaum Collectorate, and elsewhere we acknowledge the receipt by Mr. Grant of Rs. 500 towards the Relief Fund.—Times of India, Oct. 30.

Miscellaneous.

EDUCATIONAL.—Out of the two hundred candidates who presented themselves for the Departmental Examination, held at the Bombay Town Hall last week, only thirty have passed successfully.

COLONEL H. H. A. WOOD.—Colonel H. H. A. Wood, c.B., Commandant 4th Rifles, has been promoted to the rank of Brigadier-General, in succession to Brigadier-General Beale, whose tenure of office will expire on the 3rd of next month.

THE COMING NEW YEAR'S DAY.—We hear that a considerable sum of money has been sanctioned by the Bombay Government for the grand illumination of the Town Hall, Public Works, Post, Telegraph, and other Government offices, on the night of the 1st January.

MILITARY.—One of the effects of the great scarcity now prevailing throughout the Southern Maratha Country will be, I am credibly informed, to cause the 4th Rifles to stand fast at Sattara, and the 12th to remain at Dharwar, instead of relieving one another, as originally ordered. This arrangement will, if I mistake not, be equally agreeable to both corps.—Times of India Correspondent.

The Gaikwar of Baroda.—A Baroda correspondent states that H.H. Syyajee Rao Gaikwar, accompanied by Ranee Jumnabaee will leave for Bombay on the 7th December en route to Delhi. His Highness and party expect to meet his Excellency the Viceroy here before they take their departure for the Imperial city. As Sir T. Madava Row will form one of the party, the Dewanship of Baroda will be entrusted during his absence to the Sir Sooba Cazee Sahib.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.'S. TROOP SHIP "CROCODILE."—Her Majesty's troop-ship Crocodile, 6,211 tons, Captain P. R. Sharpe, arrived in harbour on Oct. 24, from Portsmouth, which she left on the 17th Sept., Queenstown on the 22nd, Malta on the 2nd October, Por. Said on the 7th, Suez on the 8th, with fifty-seven officers, ten ladies, and eight children, 966 men, 90 women, and 129 children. During the voyage there were four deaths of children, and she experienced fine weather throughout.

DIOCESAN HIGH SCHOOL.—On the 13th October the Bishop of Bombay inspected the Diocesan High School, Byculla, of which his lordship is visitor, and in which he takes a warm interest. After examining the upper classes at some length, and testing the attainments of the students who are preparing for matriculation, he expressed his satisfaction with the proficiency of the pupils, and with the condition of the school, which has doubled in number since Mr. and Mrs. Houston took charge of it in June last.

KARACHI HARBOUR.—On the 25th September the Acting Master Attendant at Karachi wrote as follows to the Chief Commissioner in Sind:—"I have the honour to report, for your information, that the steamer Guy Mannering, of 2,817 gross tonnage, drawing 23 feet 3 inches, safely left the harbour yesterday for Marseilles with a full cargo of upwards of 3,500 tons, principally consisting of seed. The Guy Mannering is nearly 400 feet in length, and is the largest vessel that has loaded at this port." On forwarding this report to the Government of Bombay, Sir William Merewether remarks:—

"This report shows that ships of the largest size and of great length can now be admitted, berthed, and despatched from the harbour of Kurrachee with perfect ease and safety.

ACCIDENT AT CARNAC BUNDER.—An unfortunate accident took place on Tuesday last at the Carnac Bunder. Sub-Lieut. Maclean, one of the officers of the Crocodile, went to see some of the officers who arrived in the troopship off by the second special troop-train which left Carnac Bunder at 9 P.M. When the train started he was shaking hands with some of his friends and ran by the side of the train. Unfortunately he slipped down, and the train passed over or the native pointsmen, who caught hold of him and held him down, he would, in all probability, have lost his life, as in the attempt to get up he would have knocked his head against the step of the carriage, and been thrown under the train. He was at once removed to the European General Hospital, when it was found necessary to amputate his index and second fingers. On Wednesday he was reported to be doing as well as could be expected.—Times of India, Oct. 30.

ACCIDENT ON THE BHORE GHAT.—An accident took place at Lanowlee about midnight of the 18th October. The pointsman was unaccountably absent from his post, and though the train did not run away, the guard does not seem to have read the signals clearly, and naturally, as it was unchecked, ran on to the runaway riding about 200 yards from the station. The siding and the earthwork embankment in front fully justified their purpose, for the first engine plunged into the embankment, and clean carried away its ten yards of earthworks; this time steam was stopped, and the struggling monster fell over on its side into a ditch on the right hand side, thus blocking up the down line, which was parallel to the runaway line. The second engine and the rest of the train were left on the rails. No one was injured, and the half-buried engine itself did not seem to have suffered any damage. Next morning she was hoisted by a crane with great difficulty, and moved backward on to the rails, and traffic was restored by five o'clock. Mr. Goldsworthy and the staff of European assistants deserve great credit for the energy and vigour they displayed.—Times of India, Oct. 30.

THE BREAKWATER.—The Breakwater works are progressing favourably; 5,000 tons of ballast foundation have been deposited along the intended line, and the "Titan" is now being erected to place the blocks in position.—Ceylon Times, Oct. 13.

PEARL FISHERY.—The Master Attendant of Colombo was to start for the Aripo banks on the 20th Sept. to make a final examina-tion of the Pearl Banks, and lift samples to determine the probable value of the fishing in March next.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—A contemporary states that the health of the Rev. J. R. Brotchie, Colonial Chaplain of Wolfendhal Church, is so greatly impaired that his medical adviser considers it necessary that he should retire from the service at as early a date as possible.

MATELLE RAILWAY.—Papers connected with the Matelle Railway survey, just published, show that there will be returns equal to 52 per cent. on the outlay according to existing traffic, and with an early increase to 8 per cent. The plans and tracings are nearly completed.

PROPOSED CABLE.—There is a rumour of an opposition line of telegraph cable being laid down from Point de Galle to Australia via Singapore, existing arrangements being considered most unsatisfactory. We shall be glad if this project can be carried, if only for the sake of our Southern port, to which such a line would prove a great boon.—Ceylon Times.

THE MALDIVE ISLANDS.—It is said the Governor intends or de sires to pay a visit to the Maldive Islands provided time can be found between the closing of the Legislative Council and his Excellency's departure for Europe. A visit to the islands would no doubt elicit a good deal of interesting information; and if the Governor were accompanied by a photographer and some one to take notes of incidents of his travel, a very acceptable report might be drawn up for presentation to the Secretary of State and for ultimate publication for general information.—Ceylon Times.

STAFF COLLEGE, SANDHURST.

Oct. 6.—Under the authority of H.M.'s Government, it is hereby notified that officers of the staff corps and Indian armies will be allowed to compete for entrance to the Staff College, Sandhurst, under the terms of the annual Horse Guards general order publishing the conditions, with the exception that one of the conditions of qualification is, service in the staff corps or in India of not less than five years, exclusive of all furlough or leave of absence (except privilege leave) or the leave annually granted in England.

2. Of the officers competing annually, the three highest on the list will be admitted to the college, provided they secure a position within the number permitted to join.

3. The selected officers will travel at the public expense, and be provided with passage in the troop-ships. They will proceed to England about Nov. 15, so as to join the College on Feb. 1 following.

4. From the date of leaving India to the date of their return they will receive English pay of rank, and in addition, while at the Staff College quarters, or the usual allowances in lieu, the ordinary extra allowance to staff college officers, forage, fuel, and light, and be on exactly the same footing as officers of the British army.

5. The whole time from date of leaving appointment on duty in India to the date of rejoining the same after passing through the college, will count as "duty," both for promotion and pension (but not for furlough as service in India), provided the final examination be passed successfully.

6. Any officer recommended for removal from the College by the commandant, as unlikely to make an efficient staff officer, or failing to pass the probationary examination at the end of the first year or the final examination, will be required to rejoin in India with the least possible delay, and the time spent from the date of leaving regiment, appointment, or duty in India to the date of rejoining the same will be absolutely forfeited, but will not be counted as furlough.

7. The course with other arms (see Horse Guards general order No. 26 of 1874) will be undergone in India, and officers on passing the final examination will be allowed six weeks' leave of absence, and be required to embark for India by a troop ship on or about Feb. 1.

DISASTERS AT SEA.

News comes from Calcutta of the wreck of the City of Manchester, a large vessel of nearly 2,000 tons burden, and probably the whole of the crew, with the exception of the captain and steward. It has been known in London for some days past that the vessel has been in distress off Akyab, having suffered severely in the very rough veather which has lately prevailed in the Bay of Bengal. 10th inst. it was telegraphed to England that she had only her lower fore and mainmast standing, and a telegram, despatched yesterday morning about seven o'clock, has been received from the same place, announcing that the ship had sunk off Oyster Reef, some twenty-five miles to the west of Akyab, and that only the master, Captain Peter Holmes, and the steward are known to be saved. Unhappily, there is little doubt remaining that the rest of the officers and crew have been drowned.

The following is a list of the crew:

Captain Peter Holme, Glasgow and Birkenhead; Charles Wright, Liverpool, 1st mate; David Swainson, Liverpool, 2nd mate; George Fleury (? Flurry), Jersey, carpenter; Manuel Minto, Sandwich Islands, boatswain; James Payne, Plymouth, sailmaker; William Timm, St. Vincent, steward; Boyan (? Bryan) Connor, Jamaica, cook; Alexander Smiley, Nassau, A.B.; Charles Hicks, Halifax, A.B.; Thomas Tucker, Bermuda, A.B.; John Carpenter, Boston, A.B.; Israel Pollock, Jamaica, A.B.; Charles Oliver, St. Helena, A.B.; Alexander Dublin, New York, A.B.; Manuel Santos, Cape de Verde, A.B.; William Green, Virginia, A.B.; Manuel Martin, Madeira, A.B.; Lewis Hill, Baltimore, A.B.; George Robinson, Nassau, A.B.; Alfred Ward, Bermuda, A.B.; Solomon Bethel, Nassau, A.B.; John Herbert, St. Vincent, A.B.; George Felix, Martinique, A.B.; Richard Bean, Bermuda, A.B.; Samuel Ward, Nassau, A.B.; Daniel Townsend, Jamaica, A.B.; William Holme, Glasgow, boy; Alexander Washington, Africa, O.S.; S. C. Rickison, Bermuda, O.S.; John Stevens, St. Stevens, O.S.; Edward Jones, Liverpool, O.S. St. Stevens, O.S.; Edward Jones, Liverpool, O.S.

The City of Manchester was an iron ship of 1,892 tons gross, 1,794 tons net, 265ft. long and 37½ft. wide. She was formerly a steamer of the Inman Line. She was built at Glasgow, in 1851, by Messrs. Tod and M'Gregor, and is now classed for twenty years (black letter) in the Liverpool Register. Her late owners were Messrs. H. Fernie and Sons, of Liverpool. She left Liverpool on the 26th July, on a voyage from Calcutta, round the Cape of Good Hope. Her cargo, which is valued at £17,000, and insured both at Lloyd's and in Liverpool, consisted of 63 tons of machinery, 594 tons of metal, and more than 1,000 tons of salt. The salt is, of course, irretrievably lost, and has probably dissolved by this time, but as the greatest depth about the Oyster Reef, where the vessel has sunk, is twelve fathoms, there is reasonable hope entertained of a successful salvage, if not of the ship, at any rate of a great part of the cargo. The City of Manchester's official number is 15,396, and the crew signed articles for three years on the 24th July, 1876.

Miscellaneous.

THE SUEZ-ADEN TELEGRAPH.—Intelligence from Aden has been received to the effect that the Suez-Aden section of the Eastern Telegraph Company's duplicate cable to Bombay has been completed and certificate granted.

THE COUNCIL OF INDIA.—The Solicitors' Journal understands that Mr. Whitley Stokes, Secretary to the Legislative Department of the Government of India, will succeed Mr. Arthur Hobhouse, Q.C., as legal member of the Supreme Council of India.

EXPORT OF BULLION.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Khedive left on Thursday for the East with £319,700. Of this sum £23,500 was in gold for Alexandria and Galle, and the remainder was silver—viz., for Bombay, £88,000; Calcutta, £101,000; Plang, £23,000; Singapore, £10,000; Hong Kong, £20,800; and Shanghai, £53,400.

Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.—At the monthly meeting of this society, held on the 17th inst., at the offices of the society—Bishop Claughton in the chair—a report was read detailing a proposal for the sending of some Cambridge men to strengthen the mission in Delhi, to live together in community, the nomination of the missionaries being in the hands of the Cambridge University professors and others. The plan was approved.

"SHORT GUNNERS."—Following the recent inspection by the Duke of Cambridge of a battery of artillery—Major Harvey's, C Battery 24th Brigade—on Woolwich Common, manned exclusively by men of the driver standard, an order is about to appear directing that of the driver standard, an order is about to appear directing that all drivers between the heights of 5ft. 5½in. and 5ft. 6½in. are to be taught gun drill, and clothed and equipped as gunners. They are to be described as short gunners, and will probably be employed to man light field-guns, while the ordinary gnnners of 5ft. 7in. and upwards will work the heavier guns, the twelve and sixteen pounders, and the still more powerful field-guns which may hereafter be introduced into the service.

NATIVE ORDERLIES TO THE PRINCE OF WALES.—The Prince of Wales has appointed Ressaldar Sirdar Anoop Sing, Bahadoor, 4th Regiment (P.W.O.), Bengal Lancers, and Ressaldar Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan, Khan Bahadoor, 11th Regiment (P.W.O.) Bengal Lancers, to be native orderly officers to his Royal Highness.— Gazette.

MUSEUM FOR INDIA AND THE COLONIES.—At the last meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce it was resolved to memorialise her Majesty's Government in favour of the proposal to establish an Imperial Museum for India and the Colonies on the Victoria Embankment. The Town Council, as also the Chamber of Commerce of Bristol, have likewise adopted a similar course.

ORIENTAL GAS COMPANY.—The report of the Oriental Gas Company, just issued, states that the general revenue account shows a balance of £14,611. This sum would admit the payment of a similar dividend to that of last year, but considering the unfavourable effect of exchange upon the profits, the directors recommend a distribution of 5 per cent., making, with the interim dividend of 4 per cent. paid in June last, 9 per cent. for the year.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Council bills to the usual amount of 35,00,000rs.—say £350,000—were allotted at the Bank of England on Wednesday, Calcutta taking £200,000 and Bombay £150,000. Tenders on Calcutta "for bills" at 18 8 $\S$ d. per rupee received about 14 per cent., and those on Bombay at that price about 33 per cent. of applications. This shows a reduction of 1-16d. to  $\S$ d. per rupee since last week, and consequently bar silver was a trifle less firm at 54d. per oz.

MOYAR COFFEE COMPANY.—From the report of the Moyar Coffee Company (Limited), a profit is shown of £4,006, out of which an interim dividend of 3 per cent. was paid in June, leaving £2,153. A further distribution of 2 per cent., making 5 per cent. for the year, leaves £917. The annual meeting will henceforth be held in November instead of May, as heretofore. The company is apparently possessed of some reefs containing gold, but have wisely resolved to remain passive until the directors see the result of mining operations in the vicinity.

The Le Bas Prize.—The subject for the Le Bas prize for the present year is the "Ethnology of the Ottoman Turks and the circumstances which led to their establishment in Europe." The essays, which are to be written in English, must be sent to the Vice-Chancellor before the end of the Eastern Term, 1877, each having some motto and accompanied by a sealed paper bearing the same motto and enclosing the name of the candidate and that of his college. Candidates must be graduates of the University who are not of more than three years' standing from their first degrees when the essays are sent in. The value of the prize is about £60, and the successful candidate is required to publish the essay at his own expense.

THE CASE OF THE "FRANCONIA."—The Court for Crown Cases Reserved sat on the 13th inst., for the delivery of judgment on the part of the Lord Chief Justice of England in the matter of the Franconia, the main question being whether Captain Keyn, who commanded that vessel at the time of her collision with the Strathclyde, was amenable to English law. His lordship referred to the facts, and elaborately reviewed the principal authorities on international law, and decided that the conviction of the appellant must be quashed for want of jurisdiction. The majority of the Judges being thus against that conviction, it was quashed accordingly. Proceedings against Captain Keyn, of the Franconia, for manslaughter through culpable negligence, have been instituted by the Public Prosecutor of Hamburg.

Land Mortgage Bank of India.—It having been determined by the Land Mortgage Bank of India to discontinue mortgage business, and to reduce the debenture liability, tenders have been invited for the surrender of debentures to the extent of £50,000 at rates not higher than 91 per cent. for the 1864 issue, and 90 per cent. for that of 1866. The market quotation to-day for these bonds was 96 to 98, and however unprofitable the company's business may have been through past mismanagement, there is still an uncalled share capital of £1,500,000, which we imagine is a sufficient gurantee that the debenture-holders will receive "par" for their security in due time by the regular drawings. The reasons for asking them to accept 90 or 91, when they can get 96 in the open market, and 100 at maturity, are therefore not clearly apparent.

The Charge of Fraud Against an ex-Indian Officer.—At the sitting of the Queen's Bench Second Division on Thursday, the defendant in the case of the "Queen v. Jervis," who had failed to appear on Monday, the 13th inst., in discharge of his bail, was brought up in custody and committed to Holloway Prison. He stands indicted by order of the Court of Bankruptcy for fraud and misrepresentation, whereby he had obtained credit and goods by such fraud.—Application was made in the Queen's Bench First Division on Saturday to admit to bail Ernest Scott Jervis, who absconded on the last day of his recent trial on a charge of fraud under the Debtors' Act of 1869. Mr. Serjeant Parry, who made the application, confessed that he could not say one word in defence of his client's conduct. The Court fixed the bail in two sureties of £750 each, and the defendant in a like sum.

Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company.—The dividend to be recommended by the directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company at the annual meeting on the 5th proximo will be 2 per cent. for the half-year ending September 30 last, making, with the interim dividend paid in June, 3½ per cent. for the year. The total payment for the year 1875 was also 3½ per cent. At the meeting the Hon. Charles D. R. Hanbury Tracy, M.P., will be proposed to fill the vacancy at the board occasioned by the death of the late chairman.

DEATH OF A NAVAL OFFICER.—An inquiry was held on Tuesday at Greenwich respecting the death of Ernest Morton Drummond, aged twenty-one. The deceased was a sub-lieutenant in the navy, and having been invalided from an East Indian station, had entered the Royal Naval College at Greenwich as a student. On the 26th ult. he took part in a game of football with a number of fellow-students, and in the course of the match received a kick in the side. The deceased made no complaint at the time, and on the following day he played at lawn tennis. On the succeeding Sunday, however, he was taken ill, and an abscess formed in his side. He became worse, and died on Saturday week. The deceased had been under medical treatment for blood poisoning, and Mr. Armstrong, the surgeon of the college, deposed that death had resulted from that cause, accelerated by the kick in the side. A verdict to that effect was returned, the jury adding that they were of opinion that the kick was purely accidental.

DIVORCE CASE.—WATSON v. WATSON AND BLUNDELL.—The petitioner, an agent in India to the London and Chartered Bank, was married to the respondent on March 10, 1860, at St. Andrew's Church, Calcutta. They lived happily together, and there were nine children born. In January, 1874, the respondent left India for this country, bringing with her five of the children. On the voyage home she made the acquaintance of the co-respondent, a young gentleman of means, and with him she committed adultery, and by whom she had a child. The petitioner afterwards received a letter from his wife stating that she had been unfaithful to him, and that at the time she did not know what she was doing, as she was under the influence of drink. She pleaded for forgiveness, and asked to be spared the disgrace of a public exposure of her guilt, signing herself, "Your wretched wife, Eliza." Upon the receipt of this letter, Mr. Watson obtained leave of absence, and returned to Eugland, and, finding that what his wife had confessed to was true, he filed the present petition. The case having been proved, Sir Robert Phillimore pronounced a decree nisi, with costs.

PURCHASE SUBALTERNS.—There is a report, which we trust may not be well founded, that promotion out of their regiments is to be denied those "purchase subalterns" who are doing duty with the twelve line regiments added to the Imperial establishment from the Indian Army in 1862. If this be so, the decision will prejudice the chances of the officers in a manner which can scarcely have been fully realised. It is a known fact that promotion in the old Indian regiments is slower than in those more purely Imperial; such is, at all events, the case in the three cavalry corps, the 19th, 20th, and 21st Hussars. If, then, the unfortunate subalterns are doomed to await advancement until vacancies are created by the withdrawal of their immediate regimental seniors, they will, many of them, be deprived of promotion until the regulations render it necessary for them to quit the Service. Among the subalterns of the three cavalry regiments are to be found some of the smartest cavalry officers. They were, for the most part, trained at Sandhurst in the old days, and having a taste for the cavalry, and boasting but limited means, they went to India and joined the old Indian Hussars. To deny these officers privileges extended to others, for the simple reason that they, on entering the Army, found themselves posted to regiments not strictly Imperial, would be manifestly unfair, and we can only hope that an early Gazette may be the means of removing the impression created by the recent promotions in the Royal Dragoons and 14th Hussars.—Army and Navy Gazette.

India and the Sultan.—The Arabic text of the following letter, published in the al-Jawaib of the 2nd inst., has been sent to that journal, on behalf of the Mohammedans of Bombay:—"After the salutation of peace, I beg to inform you that the appeal made infyour journal, calling upon the Muslims in India to contribute towards the fund which was being raised in support of the Ottoman Sultan, on the ground that he was the Imam of their religion and the representative of the Khalifate, produced a great impression upon the Muslims here, who all cordially hold the belief which you attribute to them, and who would gladly give their lives as well as their property as a ransom for his Majesty and the Muslim Khalifate. This matter has accordingly been taken in hand, and here at Bombay a committee has been formed, called the Anjumani Islam, composed of Sunnis and Shialahs, for the most part men of worth, learning, and wealth, among whom also are several who have lost the Indian torpor through experience acquired in Europe, and who are fully alive to the requirements of civilisation and progress. These, assembled in committee, resolved that this meritorious work should be commenced forthwith, and should be persevered in until, through the goodness of God, matters were prought to a favourable issue. It was then unanimously agreed upon that a petition should be addressed to Queen Victoria, praying that her Majesty would adhere to the friendly alliance which had hitherto subsisted between Great Britain and the Ottoman Government, and begging that she would not listen to those Englishmen who wished her to withdraw her friendship from the Muslims of Turkey. Next, the sub-committee of the representatives of all classes of the community was charged with the task of collecting subscriptions for the wounded of the Ottoman army, for the sick, and for the widows and orphans of the martyred soldiers. This, which is the first committee of the kind formed in India for the purpose, will be followed by others, and the sums subscribed will be duly forwarded. On Tuesday the Anjuman reassembled, and, in consequence of the earnest representations of its members, the sum collected amounted to 20,000 rupees. The collection is still in progress, and every Muslim, rich and poor, is being urged to give according to his ability."

THE DEATH OF COLONEL DICKENS.—We regret to announce the death of Colonel Dickens, the Commissariat Officer of this Circle, which occured last Sunday night, Oct. 15. From what can be ascertained, it would appear that the germs of the disease to which the gallant officer succumbed (jungle or Terai fever), must have lain dormant since February last, when the Colonel was out in the Nepal Terai with the Prince's party, and most probably in the course of his duty in camp had considerable experience of the malaria which reigns supreme in the fetid molasses of those rank jungles. We believe, also, that Colonel Dickens was out in the Terai only a short time ago, during his recent visit to Naini Tal, and it is not improbable that this second excursion more fully developed a disease which is most difficult to be thrown off when once fairly engrafted into the system. It is needless to add that all the resources of medical science were availed of to avert the termination which we sadly record, but without avail; and the end came not unexpectedly. It is but a continuation of a lamentable event, if we here add that Miss Dickens, the only daughter, we believe, of the deceased, was to have embarked at home for India during the current month, but a telegram was promptly despatched announcing the death of her parent, and the young lady will be spared the additional trial that must have awaited her had she already started for this country. The funeral on Monday morning was attended by the General Commanding and staff, almost all the officers in cantonments, a number of the troops, many civilians, and well nigh the complete establishment of the Commissariat Department here. The respect entertained for the memory of the deceased is widespread, and extends beyond his immediate circle, and much sympathy is on all sides expressed and manifested for the daughter who has been so suddenly bereft of her only earthly parent.—Lucknow Times.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

ONLY GENUINE. THE ORIGINAL AND

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrheea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.

Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majestry's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browne was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1\fd., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

Our latest advices by the Overland Moil are—from Bombay November 6; Agro, Allahabad, and Madras, November 4; Calculty November 3.

From the drought-stricken districts in Western India we learn that the numbers on the relief works in Nasik and Khandesh were increasing daily, and a rush thither was expected, as soon as the scanty harvest had been gathered, and the fate of the rabi become sealed; for the rabi, also, it seems, must fail. With the rabi will go all the hopes of the poor cultivators. Cotton had been a complete failure, and was withering while yet in blossom. Jowari presented nothing but a dried-up mass of earless stalks. Bajri was being cut, but the ears were only half-filled, while the valley of the Tapti presented the same barren appearance as ever. "Looking at the state of the country"—says the Bombay Gazette—"one would imagine that it was the end of the hot weather instead of the end of the rains. If this is the state of things in the green tree, what will it be in the dry?" The yield of bajri will save the country for a couple of months from the fear of actual starvation, but once the stock is exhausted the worst may be expected and should be provided for. The same journal warns us that after a succession of bad or short seasons, such as Khandesh has experienced, the beginning of famine is like the letting out of water. "Before the incipient evil can be checked, all ordinary calculations are overthrown, and the country is flooded with the dying and the dead ere relief measures can be organised."

THE latest accounts from the Southern Maratha Country, from the Nizam's dominions, from Mysor, and the Madras Presidency are also dismal; the N.E. monsoon having held off in a remarkable and unusual mauner, threatening the entire Madras Presidency with serious consequences. There was no prospect of any rain to fall in the southern parts of the Bombay Presidency. Prices were rising, and there was no food for the cattle which were being taken away to more favoured spots. The Governor of Bombay was expected to return to Bombay at the end of the present month, when public meetings will be convened to provide help for the distressed people in Sholapur and other parts.

MR. CHARLES SAUNDERS, Chief Commissioner of Mysor, has already begun taking active measures for the relief of distress in that province. The rayats for instance are invited to sink wells for irrigation, especially in the beds of dry banks; Government paying a quarter of the cost. Railway embankments will be started on the line to Mysor, and such points as may be selected between Bangalor and the border of the Shimoga District, via Tiptar, as the crops have almost utterly failed in those parts. The sum of Rs. 43,500 is to be spent monthly in relief works in eighteen different places. If the necessity should arise, grain will be bought through merchants at Madras or elsewhere, and laid down by contract at certain points where large relief works may be going on. Meanwhile provision will be made for public kitchens, and for supplying water to the people; whilst efforts are to be made to store up grain as soon as possible, without interfering needlessly with the general dealers in respect of sales.

THE Bombay papers mention the death, on November 1, of Mr. W. H. Havelock, Commissioner for the Southern Division of Bombay Presidency. Shortly after his return from furlough the crops in his division began to feil, and Mr. Havelock early in October set out on a tour of inquiry in Sholapur and Ahmadnagar. Overwork and exposure brought on an illness which drove him back to Puna, whence, growing worse, he was forwarded to Bombay for sea-air. There, a week afterwards, he died of exhaustion at the age of forty-nine, to the great regret of his many friends; a regret shaled by the Government, who thus record their own estimate of his worth:—

worth:—
During his long service Mr. Havelock was ever distinguished by his conscientious sense of duty, and by the ability, energy, and industry with which he endeavoured to promote the welfare of those with whom his official duties brought him into relation. It is not too much to say that he sacrificed his life in the service of the country. While already unwell he undertook a tour of inspection through the districts now suffering so severely from drought, and he has sunk under the effects of the exercion and exposure to which he was thus subjected. The Government have lost in him a sound and reliable adviser on the varied and important questions connected with the administration which are daily submitted through the office of the Revenue and Police Commissioner. By the native community his death will be sincerely deplored, for he was conspicuous for his straightforwardness and impartiality. His many personal friends will mourn the loss of one who possessed in a remarkable degree the truest and bighest qualities of a gentleman.

The deceased gentleman entered the Bombay Civil Service in 1847. After passing through the lower grades of Assistant and Acting Collector he was transferred in 1859 to the political charge of Kolapur. From 1362 to 1864 he served mainly in the Secretariat. In 1867 he rose to be Commissioner for Sind, and in the following year was appointed to the post he held at the time of his death.

THE Pioneer has "good reason to believe" that Sir Philip Wodehouse, Governor of Bombay, has asked Lord Lytton to excuse him from attendance at the Delhi assemblage, because the threatened scarcity requires his watchful presence at the head-quarters of his Government. In the Pioneer's opinion, "it is scarcely pessible the Duke of Buckingham can take a lighter view of his responsibilities than his brother on the West Coast. Even if the bent of his genius may fit him better for an elephant procession than for the management of a famine the ruler of a province must keep up appearances, and a Duke should remember that noblesse oblige." Their absence, however needful is to be regretted if it be true that

"the gathering as designed would have been favourable to the settlement of some State questions." It is seldom that a Viceroy can discuss any views viva voce with all his provincial lieutenants around him; and the Pioneer has "reason to know that a good deal of serious business was reserved for discussion at the Assemblage, though the ceremonial part of the programme was more generally talked of."

It appears from a telegram published in the Times of India that a party, consisting of Captain Wilberforce Clark, Messrs. Derinzi, Fox, and others, was to start the second week in November from Karachi for the purpose of laying out and surveying a line of railroad from Sakkar to the Bolan Pass.—With regard to the report that the military occupation of Khelat has been resolved, we are told that it is incorrect. The Sindian contradicts the assertion that Major Sandeman's peaceful policy has broken down. It is also stated that the Mission whereon Colonel Colley and Major Upperton have been sent does not affect Major Sandeman at all.

THE belief is gaining ground in India that Sir R. Temple will shortly succeed Sir P. Wodehouse at Bombay, the Hon. Ashley Eden replacing Sir Richard in Bengal. We are inclined to think that the belief in both cases rests on good grounds, and we also venture to guess that Sir H. Norman will soon be heard of as successor to Sir R. Davies in the Punjab; nor would it greatly surprise us to hear of the Duke of Buckingham's early succession to Lord Lytton, who for various reasons may be expected home next year. The creator of an Indian Empress will hardly be satisfied with a Viceroy of lower rank than a Duke, and Lord Lytton must by this time be heartily sick of India and all that is therein.

By the latest advices received in London it appears that the steamer Guy Mannering, which is 400 feet long and 2,817 tons gross burden, has sailed in safety with 3,500 tons of rice from the harbour of Karachi, which is now navigable by vessels of the largest class. Meanwhile, the Indian Government have just taken up a project for further improvements in Karachi harbour, to be made under the Superintending Engineer of the Indus Valley Railway. The present groyne is to be extended 700 feet seaward, to form suitable landing piers with train and carriage-way running at once into deep water.

WE regret to learn that cholera has appeared in some of the famine districts—at Sholapur, and in portions of the Ahmadnagar and Sattara collectorates, and according to later accounts in Puna.

HIS GRACE THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS has left Ceylon and arrived at Mangalor on his return to Madras.

We learn that from the beginning of this year down to the 26th of August the gross receipts on Indian guaranteed railways came to Rs. 5,61,44,602, on State railways to Rs. 27,02,868, showing a total of Rs. 5,88,47,470. Last year, from the 1st of January to the 28th of August, the gross receipts on both kinds of railways came to Rs. 5,32,58,021, or Rs. 55,89,449, less than they have been this year.

It is stated in India that Colonel Cracroft, Commissioner of the Rawal Pindi Division, retires under the fifty-five years' rule almost immediately, and will be succeeded by Mr. Donald Macnab, Acting Commissioner of Peshawar. No officer in the Punjab Commission, says the Pioneer, "is better known or more popular than Colonel Cracroft, whose loss, however the Punjab may desire promotion, will be much felt. Having been for long Commissioner of Delhi, he is well known beyond the Punjab, by many in India to whom his unvarying hospitality and kindness have been always extended. Meanwhile, we understand the Government of India will appoint him to some special duty during the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi, where his intimate local knowledge will render his services very valuable."

THE question of a permanent site for the European General Hospital in Bombay has advanced a step. The Bombay Government has just published a resolution in which, after reviewing the history of the European General Hospital, the Government decline to use the new Sailors' Home as a temporary hospital. To this decision they have been driven by the fear that legal proceedings might be taken if the Sailors' Home were so occupied; the Advocate General as guardian of charitable trusts having legal power to compel the use of the new Home for the purposes for which it was originally designed by the late Gaikwar, the Government of the day, and those who supported the project. As the building in which the patients of the European Hospital are now quartered will soon be required, the Government have proposed to alter for their use the buildings known as the Officers' Quarters in Fort George, and to erect the permanent building for the European General Hospital close by, behind the new railway station. The arrangements now proposed are to last for five years, in which time the Government hopes to be able to provide the funds requisite for the future building.

WE note that Colonel Melliss, Examiner of Public Works Accounts in Bombay, has been appointed to act as Accountant-General in the Indian Public Works Department, in succession to Colonel Macleod Innes, v.c., R.E., who is proceeding to England on furlough. Mr. Pryce Phillips will officiate at Bombay for Colonel Melliss.

THE Pioneer takes heart of hope from some "rather good news," which it has lately received, concerning Lord Salisbury's inclination in reference to the appointment of natives to high employment in the Civil Service, under last year's rules. "On testimony which it is impossible to disregard, we are assured that Lord Salisbury himself is strongly averse to the idea of taking any violent measures in this direction. This information, indeed, leaves the whole subject in a somewhat mysterious condition, because some pressure has apparently been brought to bear lately on the Government of India in favour of giving effect to the rules. But, on the other hand, it reduces to a minimum the danger of any positive action in the matter for the present."

To prevent in future any misunderstanding as to the extent to which the local magistrates can interfere in the regulation of the annual Hindu festival processions, Sir Richard Temple has issued a minute defining the functions of those officials in respect of such celebrations. While disclaiming all desire to meddle with any Hindu ceremony that may be under public observance, the Government insist that magistrates are bound to interfere wherever the dragging of a lofty and heavy car by a large number of men threatens the safety of the crowds assembled on these occasions. This is the extent of supervision permitted alike to the higher executive officers, their subordinates and the police; any active part in carrying out the details of the ceremony being strictly forbidden. The needful precautions having been resolved upon, the magistrates are enjoined to carry them out rigidly, avoiding in every case any excess of the instructions they have pre-announced to the managers of the pageant. The needful information as to the course and order of the processions should be communicated to the managers at least six weeks before the date of the festival, so as to leave them room for advancing any objections they may feel to the magisterial programme, and to render any modification of it possible by appeal to higher authority.

THE sentence passed on Colonel John Macdonald, of the Irdian Revenue Survey, by the Indian Government has evoked much angry comment from many quarters. It appears that Lieutenant-Colonel Macdonald brought certain charges against the administration of the Survey Department, to the effect that the surveys have been hitherto made at a much higher cost than was required. These charges he afterwards repeated in the columns of the Friend of India. The Government of India refused to inquire into the correctness of these charges, but ordered that Colonel Macdonald should be suspended for three months, and then reduced four steps on the list of deputy superintendents. Whether the charges are true or not the Government will not say, and no one outside the department can tell; but, according to the Pioneer, the severe rebuke administered to Colonel Macdonald is entirely owing to the insubordinate tone in which he complained against Colonel Thuillier. An officer does not, however, usually throw away his character and prospects in the way that Colonel Macdonald is thus supposed to have done. There is a strong feeling on behalf of Colonel Macdonald in Calcutta, where the press are unanimous in condemning the Government, whom they charge with having wiped out the word honesty, along with all its congeners, from their dictionary."

It is probable that the Indian Government will hear more of this affair. It appears from the Friend of India that a few months ago Colonel Macdonald wrote two articles for that paper, in which he exposed the maladministration of the Survey Department, and brought a charge of a somewhat different kind against its Head. Some of the most valuable matter in the Manual of Surveying published in the names of Colonels Thuillier and Smyth was the work of an able native, Babu Radhanath Sikhdar. In former editions this fact had been frankly acknowledged, but in the new edition the Babu's name and services were wholly ignored. This was a statement which certainly seemed to challenge some reply. The same journal understands that the Government has dealt thus severely with Colonel Macdonald, "because it had been led to believe that he wantonly attacked his Department and the Head of that Department in a public journal without having in the first place taken proper measures to bring the matters he denounces privately before his official superiors and to obtain an official investigation without public scandal." This, however, was not what really happened.

It was not till after he had made every possible effort in his offic'd capacity to get matters investigated and abuses reformed, and found that every such effort was fruitless, that he at last appealed to the public through the Friend of India, and disclosed the facts which as an honest and honourable man he could not conceal, and which in this way only he found it possible to disclose.

Perhaps the official objections to the tone of the Colonel's correspondence drew their strength from his unlucky reference to the Surveyor-General's literary effacement of the Babu. It is always a perilous thing for a subordinate to wound the sensibilities of his Chief; but we must bear in mind on the other hand what the Pioneer's correspondent assures us, that "everybody in the Department knows Colonel Thuillier to be generous and kind-hearted to a fault."

ONE of the charges which Colonel Macdonald brought against the heads of his department was thus worded in the Friend of India's article of June 24:—

It may be expected that where the professional measurements of the Revenue Survey check the work of the Topographical, great discrepancies occur in the delineation of hills and in the course of streams. A most amusing instance of nonchalance in treating such discoveries in discrepancies between two maps may be instanced of a case where there is a great difference of the topography on the border of Khandeish touching on Betul-a revenue-paying district of the Central Provinces surveyed by the Revenue Department on the scale of four inches to the mile. Along nearly fifty miles of boundary there was absolutely no accord; on open cultivated plain according to the revenue map the Topographical Surveyor had shown hill slopes, and everywhere hills and drainage were absurdly different. We heard that when this was brought to the notice of the Superintendent of the Topographical Survey, who by-the-bye is also the official publisher of the maps and morally responsible for their accuracy, he replied officially saying that he had examined the original plane-table sections which were quite in accordance with the Revenus Survey map, but that the draftsman of the eight-degree sheet drawn for publication had generalised too much, and hence the existence of error. A more abominable instance of carelessness in the executive officer's office as well as in the examination by the head quarters office in Calcutta could not be repeated. In these days, when the public wants to know what it gets for its money, it is well that such a fact, showing a cynical indifference to truthful work which is very wonderful, is re-

A conscientious officer might well feel strongly about such instances of seeming disregard for accuracy in matters where accuracy is of the first importance. But to express strongly what one feels strongly may lead sometimes to unpleasant consequences.

THE influence of forests on the rainfall of large districts and through that rainfall on the fertility of the soil, is a subject of special interest in its bearings on the famine which now threatens part of Western India. On this subject a Puna correspondent of the Bombay Gazette make these pertinent remarks:—

The tree-covered portion of this collectorate has practically demarked its rainfall. East of Loni (a village nine niles east of Puna) there has scarcely been any rain whatsoever, while most of the crops west of and near Puna are in fair condition. Thousands of sheep and cattle are daily coming from the Serur and Indapur talukas—almost entirely denuded of trees—to the western talukas and the ghats where remains of forests still exist.

With the destruction of the forests upon the hills and mountains stretching eas ward, streams—the feeders of and the second system of rivers—have dried up, the climate has become dry, natural leaf manure is entirely wanting, wells and tanks have silted up; the soil is washed off the sleep slopes of hills and mountains, and the natural subsoil irrigation is entirely destroyed. They now dig wells in vain in the eastern talutas. The water by the law of gravitation has sunk, and trees are alone the means of bringing again by the law of capillary attraction water near enough to the surface to be absorbed by the small roots of grain crops. The present seems a good time to endeavour to enlist the sympathies of all in any method which might increa e the productive powers of the soil in the tree-denuded districts and portions of districts now suffering from a grievous famine. "Brown," on the denudation of hills and mountains, is a good work to read, and there are hundreds of others. . . . . Though Government have a Forest Department, fearfully undermanned, still there is no Forest Act, and therefore no real conservatism possible. Things are yearly getting worse and worse. Springs are drying up all over the Deccan, and the atmosphere getting less moist. This is proved by the Libi obstree now working its way westward. It is now occasionally to be found within five miles of the Western Ghats. Hills and mountains forest-clad are elevated by natural water-reservoirs, yet there is no real attempt made to retain hills and mountain sespecially for forest. Rain falls in this tropical country but for one brief season during the year, and hill and mountain forests can store that rain, and give off in the cold months dew for the benefit of cultivation, and streams during the hot months to feed lakes and rivers and leaves for natural manure.

In Berar however, if nowhere else, forest conservancy has already produced a sensible change in the physical character of the reserved tracts. Here are the remarks of the Deputy Conservator, reporting in 1875:—

The extreme heat of the hot weather is modified by increased moisture, diminished radiation, and other effects of a dense and extensive undergrowth; whilst in open tracts, during the cold season, frosts are becoming common.

Water is now much more plentiful throughout the reserve than it was a few years ago. There is scarcely a nullah of any size that does not contain a few pools of water in the hot weather, whereas formerly it was the exception to find water anywhere after February, except in the main streams.

In former years sudden floods used to occur regularly in the Seepua, Kapra, and Kandu rivers at the commencement of the rains. Since 1871 these floods have occurred later, and with less severity year by year, which is attributed to the effect of the unburnt vegetation in retarding surface drainage.

There is less mortality at the commencement of the rains among the cattle in the reserve than in the unreserved forests. The cattle are, moreover, in better condition. This is a tributed to the cattle not being able to gorge themselves with young green grass as they do in burnt jungles. It appears on the other hand that the climate of the Berar reserves is getting more unhealthy every year, and that fever and dysentery are now particularly rife at the end of the rains and the outset of the cold weather. It seems to us a question however whether these drawbacks are inseparable from a proper system of forest cultivation.

FROM a Times telegram of yesterday's date we learn that the last edition of the Government Gazette contains a Minute by Sir R. Temple on the recent eyelone. He says that three storm waves in rapid succession swept over an area of 3,000 square miles, containing a population of 1,062,000, of whom it is believed that at least 215,000 perished. The waves completely covered the island, and penetrated about four miles inland. The people had only a few minutes' warning before the waves, from ten feet to twenty feet high, rushed in about midnight. They began to subside about 2 A.M., but the survivors were unable to leave the trees where they had taken refuge until noon. Some villages lost 70 per cent. of their inhabitants. Daulatkhan town was entirely destroyed. It is impossible to estimate the loss of cattle. Even the birds were drowned in large numbers. Sir R. Temple says that the crops have suffered much, but he hopes that enough has been saved to prevent distress. whole country presents a bare and wintry appearance. Robbery and crime prevailed for some days, but order is being rapidly restored. An outbreak of pestilence from the stench of decaying bodies of men and animals is the thing now most feared. The Supreme Government, in acknowledging Sir R. Temple's Report, conveys its thanks to the district officers and others for the energy they displayed, and says that the Queen, upon hearing of the calamity, telegraphed to the Viceroy expressing her deep concern. The full extent of the disaster is not yet accurately known, but it is evidently the worst since the great cyclone which devastated the same districts in June, 1822, and was, perhaps, even more destructive.

THE following items are derived from the same source:—
Accounts from Bombay report that the prospects of scarcity are more gloomy. The probable extent of distress can hardly be accurately estimated before the end of December, but it is stated that persons knowing the country well entertain grave apprehensions. The rainfall in the distressed districts, which is always scarcy, but been this year to one-third of the average. Relief works are in active progress, and notwithstanding the sensational stories to the contrary, there is likely, if any, dauger of acture starvation as yet. The Bond ay read to proposed to bold a public meeting on the subject and asked the Covernor to preside but he refused, on the ground that the step was premature. Madras reports also are far from favourable. Much distress seems probable in Mysor and some B. Itish districts. Large quantities of rice are being exported from Calcutta to Madras. During the last three or four days the weather here has been very gloomy and wet, a most unusual thing in November. Some fears were felt of another cyclone. If rain extended to Bombay and Madras it might possibly to some good. might possibly to some good.

The Vicercy met the Mahamiah of Kashmir at Madhopur, and proceeded thence, vid Rawal Pindi, to Peshawar. He is to arrive at Lahor on Tuesday, and leaves on Friday for Multan. The Khan of Khelat has accepted the Viceroy's invitation to the Delhi Assemblage. The Yarkand Envoy has already arrived at Delhi, and remains there for the Assemblage.

THE question of a successor to Sir W. Gregory in the Government of Ceylon has been settled by the appointment of Sir J. R. Longden, Governor of British Guiana, to that post, on the retirement of Sir W. Gregory early next year.

WE learn that Mr. Smollett, M.P., intends next session to propose the reduction of the expenditure of India by five millions, and believes that he can show the House of Commons how that reduction can be effected. If he can do so, we wish him all success in a movement which few persons are likely on such a condition to oppose.

WE regret to notice the death on the 25th of Major-general L. S. Hough, of the Bombay Staff Corps. The deceased officer entered the Bombay Infantry in 1834, and became a Major-general in 1868. He served against the Bhils of Baroda in 1839, and commanded the 2nd Beluchis throughout the Persian Campaign of 1856-57, including the capture of Reshir and the battle of Khushab.

MR. RAIS-UD-DIN AHMAD wrote the other day to Mr. Gladstone complaining that the Covenanted Civil Service is only nominally open to the natives of India, while the naval and military services are both theoretically and practically closed against them; that the large number of marks allotted to Greek and Latin in the examinations, as compared with those allotted to Arabic and Sanskrit, "the most difficult of classical languages," favours English candidates; and suggesting that Mr. Gladstone should not devote himself to foreign affairs, but to the rectification of the faults of his own Government and the removal of the tyranny under which India groans. Mr. Gladstone, in his reply, observes "that he has the pleasure of agreeing with his correspondent more in principle than in fact." adds, "I believe that by drawing the natives of India to participate in the English forms of education we are doing our duty by them, and enabling them to serve their country and their people with honour. I neither expect nor desire to make Eng-lishmen of them, but only that they should be good Indians; and with this view there are few things I love more than to see Orientals at my own old University of Oxford. .... We and our institutions have many faults, but there is at least one good thing in this country, the power of free discussion on all sub jects. I am glad there should be men strongly on behalf of Indians, and to reproach us when they see fit.

THE BAKARGANJ DISASTER.

THE havor wrought by the storm-wave which followed the cyclone of October 31 in the Bay of Bengal appears to have surpassed all that has ever been recorded of great physical catastrophes in any part of the world. If it be true that, wherever the storm-wave passed, two-thirds at least of the population were swept away, the total of human lives lost on this occasion must have far exceeded that of the loss due to the most fatal earthquake, flood, or hurricane of which we have any trustworthy account. The island of Dakhin-Shahbazpur alone contained some 220,000 people within its area of 800 square miles. The smaller islands off the eastern shore of the Meghna estuary with the strip of adjacent shore make up the total to about 330,000. If we are to suppose that two-thirds of that number have perished, the total loss of life would be more than four times as great as the loss caused by the great earthquake at Lisbon, or by the Calcutta cyclone of 1864. Even at the lower estimate quoted in our last issue, the loss would have exceeded that caused by the great cyclone of 1822. There is no need for us to enlarge on the horrors suggested by the recent telegrams. The imagination can easily fill up the outlines of their dismal story. From what has been already reported we may even guess at the mode in which the forces of Nature pent their rage on the doomed lands. It appears that the havor dealt in Dakhin-Shahbazpur and Hattia was mainly caused by a storm-wave sweeping down the Meghna from the north, whereas in Sandwip and the mainland of Chittagong the destruction came from the south. This may perhaps be accounted for by what Mr. Beveridge, in his work on Bakarganj, tells us of the tides in the Meghna. There appear to be two tides in its estuary, named respectively the Chittagong and Daula tides. The former, after passing up between Sandwip and the Chittagong coast, turns westward round the north of Sandwip, and flows southward along the east coast of Dakhin-Shahbazpur. On its way south it meets and drives back the Daula tide, which flows up between Dakhin-Shahbazpur and Hattia. Imagine the shock of such a meeting of the waters about the time of the full moon, under the influence of a raging hurricane! The bore in the river rushing up in a white wall more than twenty feet high was met by the full sweep of the tidal wave from above. In the fight for mastery one toppling mass of water broke and poured over the islands on either side, engulfing everything within its reach for miles round, while another great mass surging backwards on Sandwip and Chittagong may have carried like destruction elsewhither. Even if it should turn out that all the damage done at the latter places was caused by the first advance of the storm-wave up the coast. it seems pretty certain that the mischief wrought in Dakhin-Shahbazpur was heightened by the clashing of the two tides in mid-career. As the whole island is a flat plain raised but a few feet above the sea-level, the breaking of a great body of water twenty feet high would account for the temporary submersion of a wide extent of land, and even for the wholesale destruction of the villages that dotted its surface. In some parts of Bakarganj the village dwellings are built on mounds surrounded by trenches, so as to guard against the risk of floods. But either those in Dakhin-Shahbazpur are not so raised above the flood-level, or else the floods in this instance must have overleapt all wonted barriers.

Had only the southern half of the island been flooded, the loss of life would have been restricted mainly to the cattle which graze there over grassy plains interspersed with few villages and a good deal of low jungle. But the northern and central parts are described by Mr. Beveridge as "one continuous garden of cocoanut and supari (or betel) trees, and studded with homesteads." In these parts also rice is widely grown, and the Aman crop which is there gathered in October had been stored away, for the most part underground, before the cyclone burst upon the island. These stores appear to have been thoroughly soaked by the storm-flood; but the natives by last accounts were busily drying them in the sun, and the damage in that direction will probably be small. Not so however with the growing crops, which must have suffered a good deal of irreparable harm. The time of the catastrophe-between midnight and morning-must have tended greatly to multiply the loss of human lives. In the darkness and the bewilderment caused by a sudden rush of water, thousands may have failed to reach the safe shelter of the neighbouring trees, while of all those who trusted to the seeming safety of their own houseroofs, by far the greater number were carried off to sea, where they have all perished, except the few who have since turned up at Chittagong. Even the boats which abound everywhere in those parts failed the poor people in that hour of horror, for they had all, it seems, been swept away. But for the cocos and betel-nut trees, from which the villagers derive much or their little wealth, it seems that the actual survivors would have been very few indeed. What with the scarcity in the Dakhan and the prospect of a heavy bill to pay for the Delhi Assemblage, it is a melancholy comfort to think that the worldly wants of the actual survivors will involve the Government in no large and costly measures of relief. Cattle and their owners have perished in a common ruin; the greater the loss of life, the fewer the mouths that remain to feed, and the larger the stock of rice and cocoa-nuts available for human food. According to present advices, all danger of distress will be over in two or three weeks. One question still remains, how far human precautions can avert the recurrence of so terrible a disaster. The example of Holland has been quoted to show what can be done in the same direction by means of dykes and other appliances for shutting out the sea from lowlying plains. But the task in Bakarganj would be infinitely harder and costlier, if it be even possible at all in a land of mud and sandy swamps, intersected by so many tidal streams. and exposed to the full force of the cyclones that sweep up the Bay of Bengal. In view of the recent failure of our engineers to save the railway station at Goalanda from floods, we may well doubt whether money spent on like efforts under more trying conditions in the Gangetic delta would not be spent

The Public Works Minister.—Sir Andrew Clarke left Simla on a tour of inspection on the 27th Oct. On that day he proceeded to Umballa; thence to Umritsur, Lahore and Mooltan. Leaving Mooltan on the 1st of November, he visits Sukkur, Jacobabad, Sehwan, Kotri, Kurrachee, and Bombay, and at the beginning of December proceeds to Delhi.

DESPOTISM, DISCONTENT, DISOBEDIENCE—I. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

A few words written in the Cabinet of England are like the sudden removal of a tiny bolt setting free the complex forces of a great engine. The vast machinery of Oriental war stirs and works; armies march, artillery rolls, lands are wasted, cities are stormed, the thrones of Asia go down, half the human race is shaken with alarm. And for all this . . . the nation does not care. It must learn to care, if it would keep the right to be proud of its empire. It must learn to care, or it may find that even carelessness is not exempt from the penalties of wrong doing. It must learn to care, if it would not have the charges of injustice and tyranny, which it zealously throws in the teeth of Russia and France, flung back on itself with the added brand of hypocrisy.—Page 10 of Lushington's "A Great Country's Little Wars."

SIR,—The neglect of the nation to make itself acquainted with what is going on in India renders it liable to the charge of hypocrisy; it is always pretending benevolence towards India, but never attempting to learn how it can dutifully manage and direct the fortunes of 240 millions of human beings. Talk of education,—why the first and most important duty of England is to learn the art of governing her darkskinned subjects with justice.

I wish to sketch the manner in which despotism, discontent, and disobedience have worked, and are still working together, to hand over millions of poor people to be screwed by octroi extortioners.

The most remarkable part of this year's Blue-book on India -a statement supposed to exhibit moral and material progress -is the quiet resignation with which the despotic India Office in London records the disrespect with which its repeated instructions, and the instructions of its Agent, the Viceroy, have been received by the extractors of octroi taxes. readers of your Paper to study carefully page 3 of the Blue-book. Among other iniquities practised under the choongee or octroi system was the habit of taxing Manchester cloths and Birmingham and Sheffield hardware in every town and octroied village through which the goods had to pass. Of course our manufacturers became somewhat irate at the exaction of such transit duties and brought pressure to bear on the India Office which that grand establishment was in no fit state to resist. consequences were that both Lord Lawrence and Lord Northbrook found it expedient to publish extensively that they did not approve of the exaction of transit duties by their subordinates. We now learn what is the result of the repeated protestations and proclamations of despotic Viceroys. Disobedience.—Transit duties are still collected, but an elegant rule-of-three sum has been invented, which shows how easily dust can be thrown into the eyes of the English people. Permit me to suggest that the following is a little more explicit than the smooth verbiage of the Blue-book :-

As the total imports into a town, including goods in transit still illegally taxed, are to a wild guess as to the amount of local consumption, so are the former exactions, to the present exactions.

There is nothing like lumping extortions if you wish to mystify ignorant people.

But the writer of page 3 of the Blue-book evidently thought that it might meet the eyes of some persons connected with our manufacturing and commercial industries who might object to the ingenious rule-of-three sum, so he has recorded the following:—

While this practice has been instituted by the Local Governments with the express object of guarding against the danger above referred to, it is, nevertheless, opposed to the principles laid down by the Government of India; and the Secretary of State has pointed out to that Government that, if it be thought desirable to continue it, the greatest scrutiny and vigilance will be required to prevent its practically defeating the purpose which it is designed to accomplish.

I commend this queer official paragraph to the study of those who may have wished to find out whether I have been in error in denouncing during the past twelve years the attempt to extract an octroi tax out of straggling towns without the vestige of a wall as an apology for a visible barrier.—Your obedient servant,

T.

Les Colliers d'Or, Allocutions Morales de Zamakhschari. Les Pensées de Zamakhschari. Both par C. Barbier de Meynard. Paris: Imprimerie Nationale. 1876.

M. de Meynard has given us in these two books the texts and translations of two interesting Arabic works of the eleventh century of our era. The translations are accompanied by a great many philological notes, explaining and illustrating such words and constructions as are either new to Arabic grammar or difficult of apprehension. The "Colliers d'Or" is, furthermore, supplied with an index, which reveals the fact that that short work contains no less than four hundred words and uses of words which have not yet found their way into any Arabic lexicon. The value of this little text (containing only one hundred short paragraphs) to the Arabic scholar is, therefore, considerable; and M. de Meynard has taken pains to state, in his carefully-prepared notes, the reasons for the senses he ascribes to the words of the original.

Abu-l Qasim Mahmud, the author of the books of which was are speaking, was born (A.D. 1075) at Zamakhshar, a vil. of Kharizm, whence he obtained his nom de plume. He trequented the schools at Bukhara and Samarkand, and spent some time at Baghdad, where he acquired the taste for reasoning on matters of revelation which led him to profess in after life somewhat heterodox opinions. He was a prolific writer on grammar, lexicography, and morals, and was among the most famous commentators on the Qurân. makhshari may be considered a liberal-minded Muhammadan; and this circumstance lends some interest to his lucubrations on the fickleness of fortune, the sweets of sincere piety, and the dangers of hypocrisy—themes upon which he loved to descant. In the books before us, Zamakhshari pours forth his linguistic knowledge, wrapping his ideas in refined and harmonious expressions, introducing examples of assonance and other tricks of language; but at the same time pursuing with remarkable ease the natural development of his thought. The difficulties of the text are, therefore, formidable; and M. de Meynard must be felicitated on the success with which he has grappled with and surmounted them. Both M. de Meynard's books will be welcomed by Arabic scholars, as only imperfect and fragmentary recensions of them were previously procurable.

CENTRAL ASIAN POLITICS.

The Pioneer holds that few really competent judges will question its belief that what we must fear from Russia is not so much a hostile advance of her troops as the influence she will exercise on our neighbours in Afghanistan and Kashgar. It is not difficult to guess at one direction in which that influence will act. The northern dependencies of Cabul are bound by no very strong ties to the central Power. Very little trouble on the part of the Russians, perhaps the mere fact of their proximity, might make these dependencies as clamorous for autonomy as the Servians. Nor, if as we inferred the other day, Russian influence has so changed Bokhara for the better, is this a thing very much to be dreaded? The autonomy of Afghau-Turkestan, provided there be a settled Government to the north and south, is quite possible; and with the Russians exercising the same wholesome influence as they do on Bokhara, and with Afghanistan all the stronger for being rid of an encumbrance, the countries about the Upper Oxus-Shignan, Roshan, Wakkhan, and Badakshan-might again be formed into one coherent principality. Again, if Russia, on account of European disturbances, had ever a mind to take the countries north of the Hindoo Koosh, it would make very little difference whether Badakshan were a dependency of Cabul or independent. And for the Afghans, Afghan-Turkestan has ever been a source of weakness to the rulers of Cabul, and nothing but the loss of it can make the real consolidation of Afghan-istan Proper possible. All this is something very different, of course, from the old idea of a neutral zone, for the new principality, should it ever exist, must be under the influence of Russia. The changes, however, that we have indicated are not likely to come to pass as the results of any diplomatic action; we must rather look to the death of Shere Ali, and a disputed succession, as inaugurating a new order of things. With regard to Kashgar, it is more difficult to forecast the course of history. Perhaps, as in the case of Afghanistan, we must wait for the disturbances which are sure to follow the death of an energetic ruler. Out of them may be evolved some condition of things with a greater promise of stability than any that exists now.

INDIAN OBSERVATORIES.

The Englishman remarks that the Indian Government has been urged to set up an observatory for solar observations, and one of its military officers in civil employ thinks he has a special aptitude for erecting and conducting such an observatory. But the Indian Government has already on its hands an observatory in Madras, which it finds itself compelled to starve into inanition for want of the requisite funds. The Madras Observatory has an honourable history dating from the last century; it is acknowledged to have done much good work, and it is presided over by an astronomer who enjoyed a European reputation when the Astronomer Royal of England selected him for the post, and who has added to his reputation since he entered upon it. This gentleman has for years complained that he has neither the instruments nor the assistance requisite to keep him abreast with the demands of modern astronomy. The work of an observatory divides itself into branches, observations, and calculations, or reductions from them. For the first part of his duties the instruments at the Madras Observatory are now altogether inadequate; for the second part of his task he long implored in vain a grant for a single European as-Much work that might have been performed with the help of proper instruments has been left undone for want of them; and the publication of results has fallen into arrears. Under these circumstances, it seems to us that the proposal for a new observatory is ill-timed. First let the existing observatory be raised to the standard of modern efficiency, and then by all means let us have a second observatory if we can afford it. At any rate, let the matter be fully and fairly discu-sed on its merits, and do not set the rabble of British science to yelp at Government while the subject is under consideration. We are well aware that a second observatory would conduct a class of solar investigations for which the one at Madras is not fitted. But the most enthusiastic student of solar astronomy will not place the value of the proposed class of observations above the class for which the Madras observatory was designed. Both classes are of great utility, and the Government of India would confer a favour on European science if it could spare money for the prosecution of both. But at present it is not able to find funds for the efficient maintenance of one observatory, and, till it can do this, t seems premature to urge it to set up a second one.

THE DELIII ASSEMBLAGE.

The Friend of India says that, as soon as it was announced that a proclamation was determined on with pomp and pageantry, it at once admitted the necessity of making the pageant effective at whatever cost. And we tried to show how it might be turned to so good account that it would prove a real gain to the empire. Since then we consistently abstained from attacking the Government for the proposed expenditure, as to do so would only have tended to create dissatisfaction and bad feelings, and could have done no good whatever. But the circumstances are now very seriously changed, and it becomes a grave question whether, while many millions of our Indian subjects will be with difficulty kept from starvation by the wide-spread famine that is now a certainty, and indeed a present fact, it will not be something very like a crime to expend so many bundreds of thousands of pounds, as it is proposed to spend at Delhi on shows and festivities, and to blow away in gunpowder and blaze to beaven in rockets at every important town in the country. not only occur to most of us that the money would be better spent in meeting the necessities of the distressed peasantry in the famine districts of Bombay and Madras, but that while the outcry lasts that India is too poor to spend money on roads, canals, railways and the planting of trees to prevent the recurrence of famines, it is little better than profligacy to waste vast sums on state spectacles of this extraordinary kind. We fully recognise the embarrassing position of the Government. Had these famines been foreseen, it is probable that the pageant would either have been deferred or projected on a smaller scale. But now that the arrangements are so far advanced, how can they be arrested? We shall merely throw out two observations. The first is that an announcement to the effect that in view of the impending famines it was resolved very greatly to curtail the expenditure on account of the Proclamation; that a simple proclamation like that already made in London would be made at Delhi and simultaneously at other principal places in India; that the Durbar and all expensive pageantry would be deferred; and that the treasure thus saved would be available to aid in relieving distress in the famine districts—would have a grander moral effect on the minds of the people of India than any pageantry could have. But if it be determined that at all costs the Proclamation must take place as designed, without curtailment of expenditure, we would suggest in the second place that England, for whose honour and glory it is intended, should bear the expense of it. Otherwise it will be a world-wide scandal.

The Bombay Gazette asserts that a feeling is spreading throughout a great portion of the country that the forthcoming Imperial Assemblage at Delhi should be abandoned for two reasons—one, that the expenditure of a vast sum of money on a mere prodigal display of power in the eyes of native chiefs would be shameful while many thousands—nay, millions of people—are in danger of starvation in the Bombay and Madras Presidencies; and the other, the aspect of affairs in Europe is so unsettled that there is no telling what a day may bring forth. In Simla, a number of officials think candidly that Lord Lytton will make a mistake if he holds the Assemblage; and there is a more general opinion in India that if the Imperial Title must be proclaimed, the ceremony can still be done effectually if the Delhi Assemblage were abandoned. The Imperial Title could be brought prominently before the majority of the people on the Continent if local officials were commanded to proclaim it upon a given date, and if they were assisted to give celat to the fact by small grants for fireworks and rejoicings. There is much cogency in these views; but we doubt whether it would now be wise to abandon a ceremony which has been announced with such splendid preparations as the Imperial Assemblage. The districts affected by distress are very small compared with the extent of the Empire; a person has only to travel in Bengal or the Punjab to realise this; and it might have a very bad moral effect, and besides prove exceedingly uneconomical, if Lord Lytton were now to destroy all the arrangements he has made as well as all those which have been made by native

THE FORTHCOMING IMPERIAL ASSEMBLAGE.

Colonel W. G. Davies, Commissioner of Delhi, Lieutenant-Colonel Mark Heathcote, Assistant Quartermaster-General, and Mr. Daukes, Assistant Secretary, Foreign Department, who form the Executive Committee to complete arrangements for the forthcoming Imperial Assemblage, have, we hear, commenced work. Sites for the various camps have been fixed upon, and this has been no easy task, considering the space necessary for each encampment, and the numbers that have been summoned to attend. The platforms for the great day will be erected under the supervision of Mr. Kirby, Superintending Engineer, on the plain where the march past before the Prince of Wales took place. Agents of Native Princes are already flocking to Delhi to secure houses, carriages, and furniture for their masters.

Going more into detail, we may explain that the camps of the Viceroy, the Governors of Madras and Bombay, and all Licutenant-Governors are to be located on the old Parade-ground beyond the ridge, the Viceroy's being on the road running down from the Flagstaff Tower, the other camps on either side. The Commander-in-Chief's camp will be where it was last year, on the road which runs at right angles to the road on which the Viceroy's camp will be situated. The Punjab Chiefs will be on the glacis of the Fort, very much where they were in March, 1875; the Rajpootana Chiefs beyond the Delhi Gate; the Bombay Chiefs on the Alipore-road; the Madras Chiefs near the ridge towards the Subzee Mundee. The Nizam is to have his camp in the Metcalfe compound, which has, we believe, been purchased by a contractor with a view to erecting temporary houses for some of the Nizam's followers. The Deccan visitors will require a good deal of accommodation, as so many ladies are among them. The Guicowar and the Rajah of Mysore are to be as near the Viceroy's camp as possible, under the ridge. Pontoon bridges are to be run across the river, and Oudh Talookdars and others are to be located on the left bank of the river. The troops are, we believe, to be encamped on the plain across the escape canal. Under the orders of the Viceroy arrangements are being made for

Under the orders of the Viceroy arrangements are being made for extensive rifle matches at Delhi among the troops to be assembled for the Imperial Camp. Some eight or ten ranges are being prepared on the banks of the Jumna for the purpose, and it is intended that the second stage for the Commander-in-Chief's prize should also be shot off there by the competing regiments assembled in the Camp. A range is also to be devoted to the Northern India Rifle Association

By the time the Delhi assemblage is over Lord Lytton will have had more experience of attar and pan than any man who ever came to the country. He is to receive visits from and pay return visits to all the chiefs present of a rank entitling them to the honour; and as we announced some time ago there will be over seventy ruling princes at the Imperial gathering. All this visiting is to be got through before the 1st of January, and as at present calculated his Excellency, from the time of his arrival in camp to that date, will have to spend four hours a day in the morning and four hours in the afternoon in this laborious duty.

Besides the two days' racing there will be public games at the Assemblage. A horse show, moreover, has been talked about, and an exhibition of fabrics, jewellery, &c., also a march past of the troops, and rifle matches; we have not heard that his Excellency intends to give a ball, but there will be a series of evening parties at which both Natives and Europeans will be present. There is a rumour, moreover, of a calico fancy ball, and of amateur theatricals by some of the amateurs who have been acting this year at Simla:

and one of the pieces mentioned as likely to be played is a hitherto unacted work,—a drawing-room play, we believe—by the late Lord Lytton. A levee will, of course, be held: at first it was proposed to hold it in the Dewan-i-Am, but this idea, for various reasons, was abandoned, and the ceremony will take place in the Viceregal Camp. The troops will be arriving any day and every day after the first of December, and the railway authorities are already laying out their plans with the view of bringing in the chiefs and their followers in order and comfort.

THE RECENT RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

On Saturday night an accident occurred to the mail train from Bombay to Allahabad, which was nearly being a very serious dis-The following details have been supplied to us by an eye-About five miles north of Jubbulpore, when the train was going at a rate about which there are different opinions, but probably between twenty and thirty miles an hour, the passengers in the first and second class carriages in the middle of the train felt a violent jolting, which plainly indicated that the train had left the rails, and was tearing them up and ploughing through the ground and bumping over the sleepers. The brake-van and two first-class carriages in front of it at the end of the train had become detached from the train, and the consequent breaking of the communication blew the whistle on the engine, and was probably the first intimation to the driver that something was wrong. He immediately shut off steam, and the rest of the carriages were brought to a standstill after going on about two hundred yards. Had they gone two or three hundred yards further they would have been precipitated over a bridge into the bed of a river. The carriage immediately before the brake-van had somehow or other got completely off the line, so that the brake ran into it almost broadside on, and knocked it over with such violence that the roof was taken clean off, and the occupants were ejected like cannon balls clean through the open roof, and found themselves on their backs in the open air. The gentleman and his wife and child in one compartment were all injured, but the gentle-man in the other compartment came off unhurt. Had this carriage been full of passengers, as it was on the previous night, there would probably have been many serious casualties. In a first class carriage about the middle of the train a lady who had just retired to rest on one of the upper sleeping berths was thrown violently down, and sustained a severe injury in the leg. All the third class carriages being in front escaped the accident, but in the first and second class carriages behind them the state of things was more alarming. Solid tables were snapped in two, portmanteaus were flying about as in a spiritualistic séance, and besides the serious cases mentioned in the medical report, many a knock and bruise was received, of which nothing more was said. There were fortunately three medical men in the train, Dr. Murray of Rajputana, Dr. Alexander Smith, Deputy Surgeon-General, going to Rawal Pindi, and Dr. Bennett, so that the injuries of the passengers re-ceived immediate and efficient attention. It was a bright moonlight night, so that the inconvenience and confusion were less than they might have been. The accident occurred about ten minutes The first thing done was to send off the engine to the next station to telegraph up and down to stop traffic and to get assistance from Jabalpur. After an hour or two the station-master of Jabalpur arrived with coolies and material to mend the line. At this stage an effort was made to discover the cause of the accident at the spot where the first indication of a carriage leaving the line was observable. The gauge showed that there was no contraction or extension of the rails to account for the wheels leaving them. The wheel mark on the sleeper was clear on one side and faint on the other. This points to the conclusion that the giving way of a wheel or axle on the left side was the cause of the accident. This, however, will probably be the subject of careful inquiry. It was evident to all observers that the line was in a very unfinished state at this point, and that it should have been gone over at slow speed. The oscillation not only here, but at other points of the line, is so great even at moderate speed as to indicate a very defective state of the line. After about six hours, during which the comfort of the injured and agitated passengers was well attended to, the forward carriages, chiefly third elass, were taken on with all the passengers, and the after carriages were left behind. The gap left in the line is causing considerable interruption of the traffic. The passengers and mails reached Allahabad at two o'clock. Most of the baggage was left behind to be sent on later. Upon the whole, the feeling is that the accident might have been very much ways but it was quite had appropri might have been very much worse, but it was quite bad enough, and was an unfortunate introduction to India for the new arrivals of the Pekin and the Crocodile, who formed the majority of the passengers.—Pioneer, Oct. 30.

STATION TALK.

Delhi, Oct. 25.—The Queen of England, as Empress of Hindustan, has summoned all the chiefs and rulers from Peshawur to Cape Comorin to Delhi, and the first day of January, 1877, will be henceforth a red-letter day in the pages of Indian history. Never before have all the princes assembled together who will sit side by side on that day to hear their Empress proclaimed, and I suppose never will such a goodly throng of ruling Powers, Asiatic and English meet again. House-rent, as you may imagine, has risen to fabulous prices; the poor landlords are afraid that they may not ask enough, and some of them decline to name their terms so early in the day, but prefer to wait and see how high the market will rise. has prompted certain houseowners to oust their regular tenants; but instances of this kind are, I am thankful to say, not numerous, and most of the inhabitants have been left in peace. At the previous gatherings in Delhi, two thousand rupees was looked upon as a great haul for a house, but this time nothing less than four or five thousand is thought anything of; these sums, ay, and more also, are being now paid by those chiefs who want a roof over their It was at one time, I believe, a question whether the native princes should be allowed to reside in houses, seeing that the Viceroy would occupy a tent, but this point has evidently been waived, and the Maharajahs and others can live where they like provided they have a camp pitched with durbar tents where they can receive the visits of the Viceroy, the Governors, and other high dignitaries. The Nizam of Hyderabad has the honour of paying the highest rent that has ever been paid in this country, or in any other I expect, for accommodation for one month. The Resident has engaged for him and his nobles the well-known Metcalfe Estate, which has lain in ruins ever since it was sacked and pillaged . by the Goojurs of Chundrawal in 1857, when the Mutiny first broke out. The rent to be paid is sixty-five thousand rupees. The palace (for I can call it nothing else) will be put in thorough order, and several new houses are being run up on the grounds, which are about a mile in length and half a mile in width. The property has been purchased from Sir Theophilus Metcalfe by a European firm of contractors for, I believe, half a lakh of rupees, which cannot represent one quarter of what it cost the original owner when it was in all its class. The Nizam will be better off than any one else here (and he ought to be, considering how well he paid for it); there will be no crowding round him, he will be apart from all the other chiefs, and enjoy complete privacy. He is bringing with him a large number of ladies; half the big house is to be partitioned off for them, and a regular zenanah constructed. Agents from the different chiefs are flocking in daily to engage houses and buy carriages and Prices are rising, and there is a great demand for every I will send you further news in thing, from houses down to tubs. a few days.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

ABSENT WITHOUT LEAVE. -Mr. P. Robinson, Professor Muir College, Allahabad, and reporter on the Vernacular Press, having been reported absent without leave from 2nd June, 1876, his services have been dispensed with.

CALCUTTA PORT TRUST.—The Hon. Vernon Hugh Schalch, c.s.I., is reappointed to be a Commissioner for making improvements in the Port of Calcutta from the 17th Oct., the date on which his term of office as a Port Commissioner terminated.

SAD DEATH.—A young European, named George Cant, employed as a fireman on the Eastern Bengal Railway line, met his death last week in a most lamentable and sudden manner, near Bailgurria station. It appears that he was the fireman attached to a train, and, while attempting to pass from the engine to the tender, he missed his footing, and falling on the line was run over by the train.

THE LATE MR. WOODROW.—At the meeting of native friends and admirers of Mr. Woodrow, held last week, it was resolved, that a letter of condolence be addressed to his widow, and that a committee should be appointed to arrange, in communication with other friends, European and native, for a public meeting to consider the best means of perpetuating Mr. Woodrow's memory. The committee, we believe, held its first meeting yesterday. Some of the most influential native educationists are actively concerned in the movement.—Friend of India, Oct. 28.

ABSENCE WITHOUT LEAVE.—The rules referring to absence without leave have been slightly modified. If an officer can persuade the Government that his default was owing to circumstances beyond his control, the local Government may let him keep his appointment, but he must not draw allowances for the time he is away. If the officer belongs to the uncovenanted service, the local Government may give as much as it thinks fit of any allowances during subsidiary leave, Section 18 (b), Civil Leave Code, to which he would have been entitled had he not remained absent after the end of his leave

KANGRA VALLEY.—The tea-planters in the Kangra Valley are suffering from what, from their point of view, seems to be a grievance, though it may be also considered as some proof of the success and development of their own trade. There is a plethora of currency notes in the valley, and no money in the district treasury wherewith to cash them. The planters are ordinarily paid for the produce of their estates in notes from Calcutta; the sums so received are now much in excess of any surplus from the collections made in the district after the district expenses are met; and the Accountant-General declines to remit rupees to a hill district, when other and more public exigencies exist elsewhere.

GWALIOR.—There were great rejoicings at Gwalior on Wednesday, Oct. 25, signalising the Queen's assumption of the Imperial title. A grand darbar took place in the new palace. The General, the Resident, Political Agent, the Maharaja of Dholpur, and the commanding officers attended. Rs. 2,000 were distributed among the European and native troops of the Morar cantonment. A sumptures out the property of a State direct purpose in the direct purpose. ous entertainment, consisting of a State dinner, pyrotechnic display, and soirée dansante was given to the officers and ladies at night. During the dinner Colonel Hutchinson proposed the toast of the Queen. He mentioned that when communicating the Viceroy's Proclamation regarding the assumption of the Imperial title, his Highness the Maharaja expressed his determination to signalise the event by demonstrations in his State. Colonel Hutchinson's eloquent speech concluded with the expression of a hope that all Britons would appreciate Sindia's loyalty and devotion to England. All who were present, numbering 150 ladies and gentlemen, rose and drank enthusiastically the health of the Empress of India. Sindia's health was then drunk with the usual honours.

THE MARINE SURVEY DEPARTMENT.—The Marine Survey Department at Calcutta was started a year ago, and the Surveyors have been collecting information for the improvement of charts and sailing directions for the navigation of Indian waters. A list of coast lights has been issued, which we have just received, together with three hydrographic notices, the first of a series intended to embrace the entire Indian coast line in due course. The first notice concerns the Rangoon river, being the result of a recent survey by Lieutenant F. W. Jarrad, R.N., in the I.G. Steamer Clyde. The other two are by the Superintendent of Marine Surveys, Commander A. D. Taylor, F.R.G.S. They were gathered on a tour of inspection along the P.R.G.S. Burmah and Siam Coasts in the early part of this year. We understand that sanction has been accorded to an inspection, during this season, of all coast ports between Calcutta and Bombay by the Superintendent who is known to scamen as the author of the "India Sailing Directory." His tour commences this week on a steamer going down the Coromandel Coast, and he revisits all the Madras ports two or three months hence on the return voyage.—Englishman, Oct. 30.

STATION TALK.

NAGERCOIL, Oct. 17.—The North-East monsoon has fairly burst upon us, and is not only true to its time but promises to be pretty good. It would be impossible to express the joy of the inhabitants of South Travancore at the timely showers which we have had for the last day or two. The last harvest was so great a failure, and the dearth has been so severe, that the poor have suffered very grievously both in meat and drink. The price of paddy is very high, but it would be higher still if there were no prospect of a good crop next time. The wells, for miles round—in fact, I may seem in the whole of the centh, have been proper or less day, many say in the whole of the south-have been more or less dry; many of the most celebrated for abundance of water have run dry altogether. The tanks, too, are as empty as possible; scarcely a sight of water can be obtained for many a weary mile along the great southern road, but the rains will now, we hope, fill all our reservoirs and revive the country in general. On the hills there has been abundant rain, and the coffee is flourishing and ripening apace. The crop is, on the whole, equal to that of last year, but that is not saying much. The price of coffee in the English market, and the glorious exchange make up pretty well for the lack of bumper crops. The Hill Magistrate, Mr. Cosby, has got well into harness on the Asambu, but he enjoys rather a sinceure. Very few cases are brought before him, not because there is no need for magisterial interference, but because his powers are restricted. He has, at present, no jurisdiction in civil matters, and these form the majority of the complaints among the coffee planters. Breach of contract in one form or another is the chief weakness of contractors and canganies, and this matter Mr. Cosby cannot touch. The Planters' Association have made a strong representation to the Maharajah on this subject, and it is hoped that the defect may be remedied. I am afraid Nagercoil will soon get a name as the hotbed of pestilence, if sanitary matters are not attended to by the Sirkar officials. The prisoners in the jail here make use of chatties for certain necessary purposes within the building. These chatties are brought out every day and deliberately emptied on one road where it crosses a nullah, and within a very few feet of a much frequented highway. No attempt is made to cover the vessels when full, or their contents when poured out on the road, and thus a little horribly stinking cesspool is formed by the discharges of the prisoners. Every morning, too, these prisoners are marched out along the same road, and are forced, by the peons in charge of them, to make use of a narrow strip of land touching the road as a latrine. There is nothing to obstruct either the view or the smell, and the effect is, as the penny-a-liner says, better imagined than described. Decency and sanitation are publicly insulted at Negercoil by the Sirkar himself. There is a little flutter of excitement at this end of the world at the report that "the Duke" is coming to Trevandrum. No official intimation has reached the place, but the news has arrived somehow. If the monsoon holds on its course the Duke will have anything but a pleasant reception. We are in the midst of the Deevali festival.—Madras Times Correspondent.

THE DELHI ASSEMBLAGE .-- A telegram has been despatched to England from Madras, informing an influential member of the Indian Council of the present distressed condition of the country, and the fear of still more widespread suffering, and urging the postponement of the Delhi Assemblage until brighter times.

THE RAJAH OF CALASTRI.—The Rajah of Calastri incurred an expense of Rs.25,000 on the occasion of the Prince of Wales's visit; and now contemplates with dismal forebodings the necessity under which he finds himself of choosing between spending Rs.50,000 on the trip to Delhi and being regarded henceforth with suspicion by the Government as to his "loyalty."—Madras Mail, Oct. 31.

CLERKS' SALARIES.—On account of the scarcity in Madras Messrs. Arbuthnot and Company and Messrs. Parry and Company have added Rs. 2 to the salaries of such clerks as earn less than Rs. 20 a mouth. The Government of India can and ought to follow in a large way this praiseworthy example; but unfortunately the Government of India will only be able to look on and approve.

MILITARY.—The 11th Regiment Madas N.I. leave Nagode on the 7th Nov. and march to Banda, Cawnpore, Etah, Aligarh, and Delhi, which will be reached on the 18th December. The regiment Delhi, which will be reached on the 18th December. will leave Delhi after the Assemblage on the 5th January, and much to Aligarh, Etah, Cawnpore, Futtchpore, Allahabad, Benares, Shergháti, Hazaribagh, and Dorandah, which will be reached on the

THE DELHI ASSEMBLAGE.—The Rangoon papers tell us that the Commissioners of Arracan and Tenasserim will accompany the Chief Commissioner on his coming visit i. Delhi on account of the Proclamation Day. A number of native officials will also go with him, among whom will most likely be Woondouk Moung Oos, some Karen Myokes, and some headmen of the Panthay settlers. Major Street, Secretary, will most probably be one of the company. Major Duff, Commissioner of Pegu, will remain behind.

KILLED BY AN ELEPHANT. - Mrs. Stevenson, wife of the Conservator of Forests, Cochin, was killed by a wild elephant on Thursday at Palapully, near Trichoor. She was travelling with her husband on horseback, with a number of coolies, when the elephant suddenly appeared. Mrs. Stevenson being frightened jumped off her pony, and fell, and before she could get out of the way the elephant rushed on and trod on her neck. Death was instantaneous.—Times of India, MADRAS HARBOUR WORKS.-Mr. Parkes, the engineer, has arrived, and has made a thorough inspection of the Harbour Works, on which already upwards of five lakhs of rupees have been expended. It would seem that though slow the works are considered to have made fair advancement, and the surf bank, in spite of many disadvantages, may be said to have fairly progressed. The total quantity of laterite that has been tipped into the sea from the commencement of these works is close on 100,000 tons. The Titan crane is now at work, and though there is great difficulty in laying the concrete blocks it will have to be done. The undertaking is a gigantic one, and there must be difficulties to contend with, which engineering skill and proper supervision will no doubt battle against and eventually overcome. - Madras Athenœum.

CHANGE OF EDITORS.—We (Times of India) hear that Mr. James Hutton, who has been a valued contributor to our own columns, and who was formerly editor of the Englishman, will take charge of the Madras Times, while the editor, Mr. Sutherland, is at home recruiting his health. "We can only say," writes the Madras Athenaum, after expressing regret at the cause of Mr. Sutherland's departure, that "that paper is fortunate in obtaining his services. Mr. Hutton is a journalist of many years' experience, extensive as it has been varied, and our contemporary will scarcely suffer in his hands." After the customers apparatus of Paul Lands. After the customary amenities of Bombay journalism, it is pleasant to find an Indian city where pressmen, who may happen to be engaged on rival papers, can still keep up a good professional tone, and be as courteous to one another as if they had never left Fleet-street.

THE GOVERNOR AND THE SCARCITY .- On Monday night Madras will welcome home its Governor, after an absence of about a month, during which he has been wandering over sea and land, with benefit to himself we may hope, though with none, as far as can be seen, to the interests of the Presidency which he rules. One effect of these lengthened absences of the Governor from his post is that people begin to find that they can do without him, and this only goes to confirm the opinion expressed in some quarters that Madras and Bombay should be deprived of their respective governors and commanders-in-chief. It were well, therefore, that our governors bore this in mind, if we are not to be divested of the prestige which the Presidency now enjoys with a Governor. A great deal has been spoken and written about his Grace's absence at a time when the prospects of this Presidency are rendered so gloomy by a threatened famine and the distress that has already commenced to be felt, but though the head has been absent, the Government have shown themselves quite alive to the occasion, and the Hon. Sir William Robinson and Mr. Ellis have been meeting every day in Council in reference to the present scarcity, and all matters for relieving distress have been left entirely in their hands, owing to their experience of the Presidency. Regarding the scarcity itself which is now prevailing in most of the districts of this Presidency, the accounts continue to become more and more unfavourable, and further relief works have been sanctioned. Relief meetings, too, have been held in several parts of the country, and much good is being done in this way. In Bombay things have become worse since our last notice, but we are glad to add that the authorities there are working with a praiseworthy energy in their efforts to grapple with a calamity which threatens that Presidency, and which requires no ordinary exertions to overcome it.—Madras Times, Nov. 4.

SHOLAPUR, Oct. 23 .- During the past two months Mr. Grant has given employment to a large number of people within his collectorate, and the number is daily increasing. Relief works are progressing in many parts of the district, and others are in contemplation. Many works are sanctioned and will be commenced as the necessity for employing the people arises. Among the principal works are improvements to the tank at Nandani, on which it is proposed to spend one thousand rupees, and the tanks at Kamoni and Shetphal, for which Rs. 2,500 and Rs. 2,000 are to be re-appropriated from the local budget. The Welapur and Nateputa tanks are also to be improved at a cost of Rs. 2,000 and Rs. 2,600. Many of the roads are either being repaired or will soon be put in hand. The Government by a resolution which they passed advised that in carrying out relief works the expense should, in the first instance, be supplied from the balance on hand from the local accounts, and next by reappropriations from the local budgets, the Government guaranteeing grants of money where a need was shown for them, but only after the local resources were exhausted. Rs. 25,460 were accordingly appropriated from the budget estimates for the current year for the Sholapore district, the proposed total expenditure on relief works being Rs. 34,800. You have already given many details of the Sholapore works, and I need not here repeat them.

In the immediate neighbourhood of the town of Sholapore water is plentiful, the Ekrukh tank or lake, seven miles off, giving a large supply of good drinking water. The entire collectorate may be divided into villages of five different class s, arranged according to their water supply. Those which have wells used by and available to all classes may rank first, and of these there are eighty-nine. The next class would be those in which the wells are reserved in compliance with caste-custom for the use of the higher castes. Of these there are 296. Only five villages are supplied with water by means of tanks, while 261 draw their supply from running streams, the principal of which are the Bheema, running along the south side of the northern portion of the district and thence through the more southerly part in a south-west direction; and its affluent, the Seena river, running in a similar direction but further north, and joining the Bheema not far from Mandrup. The Bheema, as I told you in a previous letter, has still a good flow of water, and will at any rate last for some months. The Seena, on the other hand, contains but little water. One other class of village remains—those in which water is obtained by digging wells in the beds of nuddees; of these there are thirty-five, and the supply, I fear, will prove but precarious, if it does not fail altogether. Of the wells distributed through 385 villages very many are either dry or rapidly becoming so, and the prospect of a heavy drought would appear to be as bad in some places as the famine prospect.

Water is becoming scarce along the railway between Poona and Sholapur, and will in some places fail entirely before long. There were a few showers of rain on Friday night and again on Saturday in various parts of the district, but the quantity was very small. The sky still looks heavy, and we shall probably have some more rain. Unfortunately it would now require several days' constant and heavy rain to render the ground cultivable, and of this there is no chance; but any rainfall, however slight, tends in a measure to increase the water supply, and is therefore welcome.

Some deaths have occurred in this district from exhaustion. The Collector while out driving near the town the other day observed a man carrying a woman on his back, and seeing that the woman was in a very exhausted condition, had her brought into his compounds. All efforts to restore her were fruitless; exhaustion from want of food and the fatigues of travelling had produced their effect on her, and she died on Friday last. Her child died on the following day. These are, however, but isolated cases, and it may be hoped that there will not be many such instances. With the wide-spread efforts which are being made, they are not indeed likely to become more frequent. For some time the grain-dealers of Sholapore refused to part with any of their stock, but when pressed by Mr. Grant several of them ultimately consented to dispose of some of their grain, which they did at from  $8\frac{1}{2}$  to 9 seers a rupee. The sales were effected in the compound of Mr. Grant's bungalow, the dealers alleging that they were afraid to sell in the town. Now, however, many have taken courage and are selling their grain in their shops as usual.

AHMADNAGAR, Oct. 26.—While your columns are daily filled with accounts from the famine-stricken districts round about Sholapore, no one deems it worth his while to communicate to you tales of distress from here as harrowing as any related by your correspondent from Sholapore. Except in three talookas where there was a slight fall of rain, famine with all its evils prevails throughout the whole of this collectorate. Whole villages are seen as it were de-populated. The inhabitants have left their homes and gone to search for relief wherever it can be found. Hundreds of cattle are being sent daily to districts where plenty has blessed the people. Grain is sold at seven seers the rupee. In the larger villages where the market is held once a week the people fall upon the small quantity of grain that is brought for sale like so many hungry wolves. The small stock is soon disposed of, and those who have succeeded in securing a portion of it are considered the most lucky on earth. The rest have to walk home without any grain to mix with the chaff which is powdered, baked, and eaten. It is only in these hard times and under these exceptional circumstances that the English Government contrasts most favourably with any former native Government. What did the Government of the Peshwas do when about four score years back the Deccan was visited by a famine the like of which has never been heard of, when grain was sold at two seers and latterly at one seer per rupee; when thousands and tens of thousands perished without a morsel of food; when the mother was willing to part with her darling child for a cake of bajree bread, but finding no customer had to tear the same to pieces like a wild cat to satisfy the cravings of hunger? What measures, we ask, did the paternal Government adopt to alleviate the sufferings of these unfortunate wretches and keep from starvation its dying subjects? But now we find relief works opened all over the country, and those able to work have the means of saving their lives placed within their reach. Nay, instructions have been sent to the authorities of each village to provide to the traveller and the sick the necessaries of life without any charge. The Municipalities have opened relief works which have given employment to hundreds of the starving poor. - Bombay Gazette Corespondent.

LATEST ABOUT THE FAMINE.

Nassik and Dharwar may, says a contemporary, escape actual famine, although suffering great distress; but it is too much to expect that districts like Sholapur, parts of Puna and Khandeish, which have suffered from a succession of short seasons, will be equally lucky. The scarcity of water in these districts at the present moment tells its own tale. We learn that the village wells are drying up, and that in the large towns of Dharrangaum, Parola, and Jalgaum a water famine of the most serious kind is apprehended. We learn from our Bhosawal correspondent that there is every danger of the factories at Jalgaum being compelled to stop work for want of water. According to the Bombay Gazette the numbers on the relief works are increasing daily, and a rush may be expected as soon as what little harvest there is has been harvested, and the fate of the rabi becomes sealed; for that the rabi also must go there can now be but little doubt. With the rabi will go all the hopes of the poor cultivators. The Government of Bombay have advertised for the supply of 27,000 maunds of grain for the people employed on the Mutha Canal, near Puna, during the time the work will last. The tenders are to be for two months only, for 6,000 maunds of bajree and jowaree.

The accounts from most of the famine districts continue to be very gloomy. Grain is being sent up as fast as possible, both by Government and the Bombay Relief Committee. A correspondent writes from Sholapur under date of 31st October:—"There was a grand bazaar in the town to-day, to which the Goojar people sent about 1,500 head of cattle for sale. Grass and every description of provender are very dear, grass itself costing Rs. 20 per 1,000 little bundles, 25 of which are a day's food for a cow. Nearly 15,000 animals in all are here for sale, but as there are no buyers and no fodder, many of the owners are compelled to get rid of them as gifts to any one who will take them." The manager of the Bombay Cattle Saving Fund expects a large additional number of cattle to-morrow. They have already gathered together 2,000 animals in the Sholapur Mills compound, purchased at from two annas to six annas per head, while many beasts have been received gratis, as the owners had no other way of keeping them alive. The Fund, it may be remembered, amounts to about Rs. 10,000, but as each beast kept by it costs eight annas per diem, the fund will be speedily exhausted unless the Government at once accede to the reasonable request to grant the right of grazing over the nearest possible vacant grass land towards the hills. The Committee, as we said before, will guarantee the return of their cattle to their owners if the Government will thus lend their aid. From this and other districts we hear that the want of water is more dreaded than the want of grain. While grain may hereafter be retailed far and wide by Gograin. While grain may hereafter be retailed far and wide by covernment and other agencies, it will be only possible to provide against the want of water by an extended system of migration. Going to a totally different direction, we are glad to learn that since the opening of the temporary bridge over the Nerbudda at Broach many thousands of maunds of grain have been and are being carried to the famine districts in the Deccan from Guzerat, where the harvest this year of bajri and jowari has been plentiful. From Baropah, Broach, and Ahmedabad the desputch of grain is being pushed and Ahmedabad the desputch of grain is being pushed forward rapidly. Cultivators in remote villages who found it difficult to obtain remunerative prices for their produce find the grain dealers only too ready to take it off their hands. The collectors of Broach, Kaira, and Ahmedabad, are, we are told, rendering all reasonable assistance in this matter. The prices of grain have commenced rising in Guzerat. We are informed that the state of Bhownuggur has contributed Rs. 5,000 through the Political Agent, Mr. Peile, to the Famine Relief Fund. A requisition is being largely signed by the principal European inhabitants of Bombay, requesting Sir Philip Wodehouse to preside over a European Famine Relief Fund, and requesting our Sheriff to call a public meeting.—Times of India, Nov. 6.

Miscellaneous.

The Puna Riots.—After an unconscionable period of pickling, the Bombay Government is about to issue the report or reports of the Commission appointed to inquire into the Puna riots of 1875; but, as usual, there is a reservation. We gather that the report or minute by the late Mr. Carpenter is not to be published. The suppression of any important element in this way will vitiate the importance of the whole report.—Pioneer.

Wheat from Karachi.—The exportation of wheat from the port of Karachi seems to have begun in earnest. In the mouth of July the total was very small, a few hundred bags; in August more than 14,000 bags were exported, but in September the total reached 24,894 bags. Of this quantity only 52 bags were sent to Liverpool, the rest were exported to Marseilles, Genoa, and Calais. To the last-named port were exported 18,600 bags, equal in quantity to 27,900 cwts., and valued at Rs.1,30,200.

DEATH OF ME. W. H. HAVELOCK.—We regret to have to record the death in Bombay on Wednesday night of a very popular and zealous member of the Bombay Civil Service, Mr. W. H. Havelock. The deceased gentleman joined the service in 1847, and since 1869 he had filled the office of Revenue and Police Commissioner of the Southern Division of the Bombay Presidency. He possessed very intimate acquaintance with the Sholapore and other districts where famine threatens, and his loss will be greatly felt. The fever which caused his death was caught while travelling in those districts. Bombay Gazette, Nov. 6.

THE DELHI ASSEMBLAGE.—The invitations from the Viceroy to the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi which have been sent to Bombay do not appear to be so many as was at first supposed. They have been sent to his Excellency the Governor and the members of the Executive and Legislative Councils, the companions of the Star of India, and the editors of the two English, three Gujeratee, two Marathi, and one Ordoo newspapers. A special train will leave Bombay with the guests, for each of whom a separate tent will be provided at Delhi under the superintendence of Major Bradford. Invitations have also been sent to a dozen ladies in Bombay. Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy on account of ill health, and the Hon. Sorabjee Shapurjee Bengalee on account of pressure of business have declined the invitations with thanks. The following is the list of Princes and Chiefs of Western India who have been invited to Delhi. By the Viceroy their Highnesses the Rao of Kutch and the Maharaja of Kholapur have been asked. Invitations through his Excellency the Governor of Bombay have gone to Ali Murad, the Amir of Khairpur, the Nawab (Habshi) of Jinjira, the Nawabs of Cambay, Junaghar, and Radhanpur, and the Dewan of Rahlanpur. These are all Mohammedans. Of Hindu Chiefs, Rajput in descent mainly, there are invited those of Bhownagar, Nawanagar and Drangdra in Katiawar; those of Chota Udaipur, Idar, Rajpipla, Barria, Lunawara, Balasinor, Sonth, Banseha and Dharampur, all in Gujarat; also the Desni of Sawantwari from the Southern Konkan. The young Gaikwar is of Sawantwari from the Southern Konkan. The young Gaikwar is of course asked direct by the Government of India, the Bombay Government never being named in that connection.

Ceylon.

THE LATE DR. BOAKE.—The death is reported from Australia of Dr. B. Boake, D.D., at one time Principal of the Colombo Academy. He left Ceylon in 1871, and was appointed to Holy Trinity Church, East-street, Hilda. Dr. Boake was in his sixty-second year.

The Governor.—It is, the Ceylon Times believes, the intention of his Excellency the Governor of Ceylon to visit the Australian Colonies before resigning the Government of that island. It is probable Sir William Gregory may proceed on his comptemplated voyage at the end of January, returning to Ceylon in April in time to make the final arrangements for a railway contract. This voyage being resolved upon, probably the visit to the Maldive Islands will be abandoned.

An additional Judge.—The numerous complaints urged against the operation of the Village Councils Ordinance in judicial matters and the arrears of work in some of the District Courts have induced the Government to decide upon the appointment of an extra judge of the £800 a-year class, to act in the capacity of Judicial Commissioner, to visit all the Courts at uncertain periods, to look into their work, to inquire into and report on the causes of delays generally, and to aid in the working up of arrears when necessary. It will likewise be a part of his duty to watch the proceedings of the Gansabhawas, and ascertain in what respect their action could be modified and their usefulness increased—Ceulon Times fied and their usefulness increased.—Ceylon Times.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—A telegram from Colombo to the Englishman tells us that "there have been two days' debate in the Legislative Council on the proposed abolition of the ecclesiastical establishment. The Hindu, Singhalese, Eurasian, and mercantile members, with the Governor and Sir Charles Layard voting for, and eight officials and two European members against, the moral victory being thus for disestablishment. Sir Comara Swamy delivered a splendid speech of two hours' duration. The public feeling is strong. A memorial to the Queen follows. There will be a debate next Session in the House of Commons. It is expected that the question of the Indian ecclesiastical establishments will be discussed at the of the Indian ecclesiastical establishments will be discussed at the same time."

THE GOVERNOR OF MADRAS IN CEYLON.—The Tenasserim left Galle at 7 A.M. yesterday morning, and arrived at Colombo at one in the afternoon. Landing at half-past two, the ducal party proceeded to Government House, where they were received by Sir William Gregory. His Grace was received at the jetty by a guard of honour of H.M.'s 57th regiment—the band playing the March of the Duke of Buckingham's Volunteers. This morning H.E. the Governor, accompanied by the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos and party, will proceed by special train to Mahara for the purpose of inspecting the quarry; in the afternoon it is expected that the of inspecting the quarry; in the afternoon it is expected that the breakwater works will be visited, but beyond this nothing has been as yet decided, except that the Tenasserim is under orders to leave for Paumben on Saturday evening or Sunday morning. The Duke of Buckingham visits our island for the purpose, amongst others, of considering the feasibility of connecting Madras with the port of Colombo by means of railway communication.—Ceylon Times, Oct. 27. On Friday, Oct. 27, His Grace the Duke of Buckingham proceeded to the Mahara Quarry in company with his Excellency the Governor and Captain Thackwell, for the purpose of witnessing the work being carried on accounts. purpose of witnessing the work being carried on ease on account of the breakwater. Slave Island and Welikadde; and in the afternoon his Grace paid a visit to the breakwater works, accompanied by Colonel Shaw-Stewart, Consulting Engineer of the Madras Government, and together they examined every detail connected with the works in progress. On Saturday his Excellency drove the Governor of Madras to see the Cathedral and Wolfendhal Church. After dining at Queen's House, his Grace and party embarked on board the Tenasserim about ten o'clock, and the vessel was under way and out of sight before day break yesterday morning.

STAFF SALARIES.

The following order, issued by the Government of India in the Military Dept., is republished in the Calcutia Gazeite of Oct. 18:—

In continuation of G.G.O. No. 138 of 1876, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to rule as follows:

I. That when an officer is allowed to draw the full staff salary of an officg. appointment he can draw no portion of the salary of his substantive appointment, which will be available for his successor.

II. That when more than half (but not the full) staff salary of an appointment is available, the officiating officer will be allowed to draw it in addition to such portion, not exceeding half, of the staff salary of his substantive appointment as will not, in the aggregate, exceed the amount he would draw if he held the officiating appointment permanently. The officer or officers officiating in succession will draw whatever portion of the staff salary is available on the same principle.

III. That in the case of an officer who, while on furlough, may be transferred to another appointment and allowed, under G.G.O. of No. 559 of 1869, a continuance of the furlough pay he formerly drew, the amount of such furlough pay shall be considered as a charge against his new appointment, the allowances of the officer acting in the latter being regulated accordingly.

IV. That when an officer is transferred during furlough from a better to a worse-paid appointment, the officer acting for him in the latter w be allowed the half staff of the appointment, notwithstanding the additional charge involved thereby.

This order is applicable to the three Presidencies.

He obtained his first commission in 1825, and served with much distinction in Spain, the Crimea, and India.

Council of India.—Friday night's Gazette says the Queen has appointed Sir John Strachey, Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces in the East Indies, to be an Ordinary Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, in succession to Sir William Muir; and Major-General Sir Edwin Beaumont Johnson to be an Ordinary Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, in succession to Major-General Sir Henry Wylie Norman.

THE BOMBAY GAS COMPANY .- The half-yearly meeting of the Bombay Gas Company was held on Thursday, when the report was received, from which it appears that the net profit for the half-year was £11,753, the sum of £3,000 had been added to the reserve fund, and from it £2,873 had been written off for depreciation and loss on exchange, thus leaving it at £8,032, and out of the disposable balance the directors had declared an interim dividend of  $3\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. for the half-year, leaving £380 to be carried forward.

CARRIAGES FOR INDIA.—There have been recently on view in Long-acre, previous to their despatch to India, three State chariots destined to be used for the first time on the occasion of the forthcoming proclamation of the Queen's new title in Delhi. These have been built for the Begum of Bengal, the Maharajah Dhuleep Sing, and Sir Salar Jung. The carriage for the Begum eclipses in splendour the chariot recently built by the same firm—Morgan and Co. -for the Mikado of Japan, and is capable of carrying twelve persons.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—From the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company we have received the usual lengthy report, which is a comparatively satisfactory document. The absence of rain has caused the acreage irrigated to be increased from 14,571 acres in 1875-76 to a probable 40,000 acres in 1876-77, and the Indian Government have at last acceded to the company's request to establish a system of navigation on the main canal. A correspondence with the Secretary of State is circulated with the report.

BILLS ON INDIA.—India Council drafts to the usual amount of 35,00,000 rupees—say £350,000—were allotted by the Bank of England, on Wednesday, the 22nd inst., of which £193,800 were taken for Calcutta, £150,000 for Bombay, and £6,200 for Madras. advance of fully \( \frac{1}{4} \text{d.} \) per rupee was obtained as tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 8\( \frac{1}{4} \text{d.} \) for bills, and 1s. 8 15-16d. for telegrams received only 10 per cent. of applications, while those for bills on Bombay at 1s. 84d. per rupee obtained 30 per cent. After this announcement the silver market was firmer, and transactions took place at 54<sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub>d. per oz., a rise of <sup>1</sup>/<sub>4</sub>d.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY .- The report of the directors of the Eastern Bengal Railway for the half-year ended June 30 has been issued. The total receipts were £139,355, against £138,009, and the working expenditure was £78,927 as compared with £87,915. It will thus be seen that the net earnings were £60,428, against £50,094, or an increase of rather more than 20 per cent. on the corresponding six months of last year. In the total number of passengers of all classes carried there was an increase of 25,168, and the carriage of goods showed an augmentation of 3,477 tons. The aggregate expenditure on capital account to date was £3,084,709. There was an outlay on this account of £7,566 during the six months, and a balance of £399,599 remains in hand. The estimated further expenditure on capital account is stated to be £63,606, of which £16,425 will fail within the current half-year.

DEATH OF A NOTED ORNITHOLOGIST. - Dr. Walter Scott Duncan. of New Orleans, well known as an amateur ornithologist, died in Paris lately, at the age of fifty-five. Dr. Duncan possessed one of the finest bird collections in the world. In the Southern States of America he practised medicine very successfully, and in that capacity was particularly successful in the treatment of yellow fever. He made scientific explorations in the valley of the Amazon, in Siberia, the Himalayas, Borneo, and other quarters, and was a highly valued member of numerous European and American scientific societies. In appreciation of his services he received both Russian and Italian decorations. His death was sudden, resulting tific societies. In appreciation of his services he received both Russian and Italian decorations. His death was sudden, resulting from an attack of apoplexy. He leaves behind him considerable property.

A FAMOUS CHARGER.—Colonel Kent, commanding the 77th (Duke of Cambridge's Own) Regiment, has just sustained a severe loss in the death of his fine old chesnut Arab, which has died at Cork Barracks of a long-standing and painful disease. The history of this animal is a remarkable one; it was probably the oldest charger in the service, having gone through the Crimean War. After leaving the Crimea the horse went round the Cape to Australia, and has since been twice to India, twice to Ireland, and through every station of Bengal, from Calcutta to Peshawur and Peshawur to Bombay, finally closing its travels by passing through the Suez Canal. It was present at the Balaklava fête last year, and at the presentation of colours to the regiment at Woolwich, making its last appearance on parade at the inspection of the 77th in July last, when it carried the colonel as well as ever. The horse was a great favourite with the officers and men of the corps.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY .-- An exhaustive report has been issued by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company for the year ending Sept. 30. The passage money and freight in the twelve months realised £1,506,165. and the postal contracts £532,815, which with a balance of £8,801 brought over from the previous year made £2,047,781. From this the navigation expenses (including £150,998 for repairs) absorbed £1,168,761, insurance and depreciation £300,000, renewal account £100,000, transit through Egypt £176,141, general expenses and administration £156,153, and debenture interest £42,065, leaving £104,659, which has been applied to an interim dividend of 11 per cent., and a further payment on the 21st December of 2 per cent., making 3½ per cent., leaving £3,159 to be carried forward. No accidents have occurred during the year. It is not intended in future to pay dividends out of the insurance account, but to carry the surplus to the general reserve, from which £200,000 has this year been written off the value of the fleet, and debentures to that amount are being paid off. Altogether the report is much more satisfactory than could have been expected for a period of stagnation. The directors still complain of the way in which fines are imposed by the postal authorities.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM'S SILVER HOWDAH.—The Pioneer expresses a hope that the "Duke of Buckingham's silver howdah comes out of his own pocket." It is rumoured that this howdah comes out of his own pocket." It is rumoured that this howdah (for the Delhi Assemblage) will cost no less than two lakhs; but we have ascertained that Rs.7,000 will cover the cost of it. As it is being emblazoned with the Duke's numerous armorial bearings, and it is to be sent home after the tamasha, to swell the collection of his Grace's heirlooms, we presume the cost will come out of his pocket, for otherwise the structure should not leave India.

COLONEL MACDONALD .- Colonel John Macdonald of the Survey Department has been suspended for some months and reduced certain grades, as the affair is commonly described, for writing articles on the work of his department in the Calcutta papers. Some of his friends are naturally disposed to regard him as a martyr; but we believe the circumstances of the case to be peculiar. For the Government to punish an officer for public writing, which by the largest liberality could be construed as fair criticism of administrative work with which he might be familiar, would no doubt be weak and foolish, but a line must be drawn somewhere, and personal animosities may be expressed with an intemperance of language and a bitterness of feeling which ought to be checked. We have reason to believe that in the present case Colonel Macdonald's manifest antipathy to Colonel Thuillier is founded on a misconception of facts. It is against Lord Northbrook, if against anybody, that his wrath should be aimed, though we are far from asserting that Lord Northbrook was wrong in taking the step unfavour-able to Colonel Macdonald's interests in the service—which he seems, wrongly, to suppose was instituted by Colonel Thuillier. However, we need not explore the quarrel further, and we only refer to it to explain that the character of Colonel Macdonald's attacks on his official chief, not the broad fact of his having written articles on the Survey Department, has led to the suspension now announced.

Summary and Rebielv.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, November 13; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, November 11; Calcutta, November 10.

THE story of the great cyclone of October 31 is beginning to unfold itself in the Indian papers, in a slow and piecemeal fashion. When the storm-wave swept at midnight over the town of Daulatkhan in Dakin Shahbazpur, not one in ten of the inhabitants escaped destruction. Among the officials of the place the Deputy Magistrate, Babu Uma Kanta Banarji, alone is said to have survived. His wife was saved with him, but all their children and grandchildren, and the other members of their family, to the number of twelve, were overwhelmed by the waters. Of the remaining population, about six hundred in number, only forty or fifty appear to have escaped. Among those who have been lost are the Native Munsif; the Native Doctor in charge; a Native Sub-Inspector; the Native Inspector of Patuakhali; several Native Head Constables, and all the Constables of Taltolea. The loss of life in the entire sub-division is reckoned at not less than five thousand souls. All the public buildings have gone, and with them every record, public document, &c. The Courts at Patuakhali, another subdivision, were blown down, and, it was feared, that even Perozpur had fared likewise. In the town of Barisal more than three thousand houses had been blown down, and a large number of boats sunk. The injury to the paddy crop was estimated at onefourth of the whole. Little news had then come from Noakhali, on the east of the Meghna, but it seems that the storm-wave submerged a large portion of the district, and cholera, its inevitable successor, had broken out, to add to the miseries of the houseless and destitute people.

THE cyclone played sad havor in other districts of Eastern Bengal. In Maimansingh numbers of trees have been uprooted, many of the bungalows erected for the Baroni Fair have been blown down, and boats laden with salt sunk. Letters from Komillah state that three-fourths of the houses there have been blown down, and the remainder are much damaged. Several trees were uprooted, some of which fell into a house, and crushed two people to death. A private letter from Chittagong states that great damage to bungalows and huts had been caused by the late storm. The storm-wave stranded all the vessels but one in the harbour. Few human lives appear to have been lost there, but there was great destruction of cattle, and hundreds of poor people have escaped only to suffer the horrors of utter destitution. The storm-wave rose to a height of thirty feet. Among the missing officials was Mr. Benbow, sub-inspector of Daulatkhan, who afterwards, however, turned up. Mr. Jackson, sub-inspector of Golachipa, had to swim for his life, and has been subjected—writes the Collector of Bakarganj—"to such hardships that he will be unfit for duty for some months to come. He has been much injured, and I am afraid has been very seriously bruised on his chest." His wife and two boys appear to have been drowned.

MR. BARTON, the Collector aforesaid, having had some experience of like disasters in Jessore, lost no time in taking such measures for the relief of the survivors as the means at hand permitted. What he did at first was done almost singlehanded, but with the help of the Rev. G. Kerry, a Baptist missionary, Mr. Fennesy, the Executive Engineer, and a few other volunteers, six centres of relief were speedily established in Dakhin-Shahbazpur.

THE dearth in the Sholapur District was growing serious by the last mail accounts. On November 6 the Correspondent of the Times of India telegraphed from Sholapur that twenty-five persons had died of starvation and disease. "More than two lakes of people" (200,000) had deserted the villages in that district. Through the city above 25,000 persons had passed to the Nizam's Dominions, and 40,000 cattle also. "Thousands," adds the writer, "wander not knowing where, thinking the famine to be local. One thousand people were fed on the 6th with cooked rice, but money is wanted, not grain. Of that there is a perfect block at the station and town. Grain looting is becoming very common. The Bishop proposes to start an Orphanage at Puna, but on condition of the children being Christianised. Seven hundred cattle were wilfully deserted in the Sholapur Mills compound on the 5th, and 10,000 are expected at market, but there are no buyers." On the 8th the same informant tells of one encampment which he himself saw lying on the bare ground with nothing to eat, 167 souls in all. "From five villages only one lot knew of relief works, the others were pressing vaguely forward to the Nizam's territory; for the Nizam, they said, would give pasturage for their cattle and the English would not. This ignorance of what we are doing, accounts, I fear, for the wholesale flight into the Nizam's territory." These wanderers however were soon on their way back again. On the 10th there were 61,000 persons employed on relief works in that district. A milk kitchen had been opened for children, under Mrs. Grant's superintendence, by means of which 3,000 of the feeble were supported weekly. Fifty deaths had already occurred from the epidemic at the Ayarwadi works, the result of continued weakness and exhaustion acted on by bad grain. Asiatic cholera has since begun, but only in isolated cases. The Committees were feeding the cattle with prickly pear leaves.

THE latest mail reports from the Southern Maratha Country and from the threatened districts in Madras are very unfavourable. Relief works however were progressing steadily.

IT seems to be at last settled that the Governor of Bombay will be present at the Delhi Assemblage. His stay, however, will no doubt be but brief; after attending the proclamation of the Empress he will return immediately to Bombay. Owing to the scarcity prevailing in the districts, Sir Philip Wodehouse would gladly have been excused from going up to Delhi, but the Viceroy felt that the presence of the Governor of Bombay could not be dispensed with on such an occasion. The same rule will apply to the Governor of Madras. The two however will not have to appear at Delhi with any larger following than their respective Staffs. It is stated that the Viceroy has relieved all the administrative officers of Madras from the obligation of attending the Delhi gathering. The new order will have the twofold effect of averting any hitch in the management of relief measures, and of curtailing the cost of the Assembly without much diminishing its general effect. The probable cost of that ceremony to the State will not exceed £100,000. So at least we are told by the Pioneer.

A COMMISSION is to sit at Calcutta in order to consider the question of obtaining from India herself the materials hitherto procured from England for Government purposes. An officer from each of the three presidencies will be present at the commission. Madras will be represented by Captain McClaverty, of the Gunpowder Manufactory.

Mr. E. J. SINKINSON, C.S., Inspector-General of Prisons in British Burmah, is to represent Burmah at the Prison Conference to be held at Calcutta in January.

MR. C. T. METCALFE has been appointed to succeed Sir Stuart Hogg as Chairman of the Calcutta Municipality and Commissioner of Police.

It appears from the Lucknow Times that grievous complaints are made about the mismanagement of the encumbered estates in Oudh by Government officers. That journal is " credibly informed that some of the finest estates are involved more and more in debt; and in spite of the Oudh Relief Act and the strenuous exertions of Government officers they are drifting more and more towards ruin." One of the richest estates in Oudh is cited in proof. In 1868 the widow of the late Maharaja Man Singh made over the management of his estate to Government. "The estate was then indebted to the tune of nearly two lacs of rupees. The annual gross collections amount to upwards of eight lace, so that the debt incurred was nothing to speak of. The original debt instead of being diminished is increased year by year, and it now amounts to three lacs and Nor is this all, it seems. The revenue payments are not duly made, and the arrears of the Government demand amount to nearly a lac of rupees. "With proper management the whole debt could be easily paid off. Far from this being the case the rents due from tenants and under proprietors have fallen into large arrears. We are told these come to nearly nine lacs of rupees. If these arrears could be realised by We are told these come to nearly judicious management, the estate would at once be free from debt, and leave a large surplus behind. Not only are these arrears not collected, but a large portion of them are unwittingly allowed to be debarred from being collected by the statute of limitation." If there is any truth in these statements, the Chief Commissioner should lose no time in putting things to rights.

The writer of a letter to a Madras contemporary points out that those who have raised a clamour against Mr. Weld in the matter of the Sanyasi of Negapatam

Overlook the fact that permission to enclose the place where the deceased Sanyasi was buried was obtained by his son from the Negapatam Municipality for the purpose of erecting a bathing place for Brahmans, and they also ignore the fact that the interment would, at once, unfit the place to be so used, for though they seem to think little of the fact that, under the statute of limitations, twenty (or twenty-one) years is enough to bar a claim, and call a place (unused for thirty years) a usual burial place, surely they cannot look over the fact that a Brahman's bathing place is a most unusual place for interments, especially as Hindus consider it a defilement to pass within twenty yards of burial places. The way in which the ground was obtained for a perfectly harmless use, and then put to one which, in the opinion of the Medical Officer at Negapatam, was quite the reverse, shows an amount of double-dealing on the part of those who so acted, which ought to have made Government very careful how they credited other statements of the same person or persons. The ground is still called in the "Peimash" a Brahman's bathing place, and the use to which the son of the deceased put it would unfit it to be used as such. The order for removal was issued on purely sanitary grounds, and would have been the same had the body buried been that of a cow or other animal. The making of the question into a religious one shows the unwisdom of the course pursued in punishing Mr. Weld so severely, in the face of the medical officer's opinion. No one can accuse Mr. Weld of acting hastily, inasmuch as he duly consulted his superior before acting. The way in which the son of the deceased obtained the ground, and then used it for a purpose for which it was not granted, shows that any rate he had his doubts as to the course he was pursuing. The appeal made by some of the native press to the feelings of Christians, had they been similarly treated, falls rather flat, for they never object to remove their long buried dead in obedience to the orders of authority when based upon sanitary grounds, nor would their objections avail in the least, nor would their prayers be listened to, nor their feelings regarded, when once that order had gone forth.

FROM some official correspondence just published about the exportation of wheat from the North-West Provinces to England, it seems that Mr. Buck, Director of Commerce and Agriculture in those provinces, recommended the sending of information from England in September as to the probable prices of wheat here in March and April, with a view to imparting the same information to the Indian cultivators before they had sown their wheat. A more reasonable proposal, in view of the growing demand here for Indian wheat, could hardly have been made. But how has it been met by the Lieutenant Governor of the North-West Provinces? Instead of empowering Mr. Buck to send a Hindi circular to each kanungo, who in turn would make his patwaris copy and explain it to the cultivators, the Lieutenant-Governor would content himself with publishing the required statistics. To such a course there would be no objection, if the information thus supplied were sure to reach the people whom it specially concerns. But, as the Pioneer remarks, there seems to be "every reason why Mr. Buck's suggestion should be carried out as well, and at first. It will be a great pity if his valuable suggestions should bring forth nothing but a few more statistics. The information, if prepared for the Gazette, will be statistical, indigestible, and possibly inaccurate, therefore of no use to the people for whom it is intended; prepared and spread abroad as Mr. Buck would advise, it would answer its purpose thoroughly.

In connection with the exports of Indian wheat, Sir G. Couper has officially suggested "for consideration" the propriety of endeavouring to induce the G.I.P. Railway Company to lower their rates of freight. These, remarks his Honour, "add greatly at present to the cost of carriage of grain sent by Bombay," and a very small difference in the freight charges might make all the difference to those who pay them. But the G.I.P. Railway Company fails to see the propriety of lowering its rates. After a great deal of correspondence between the Secretary to the Government of the North-Western Provinces, the Public Works Department, and the Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, a small table was laid before Mr. Le Mesurier, the Company's Agent, showing that whereas on the G.I.P. Railway the special grain rate for distances from 400 to 600 miles was 6.5 pies per ton per mile, the E.I. Railway rate for distances above 500 miles was 5.45 pies, along with other details of a like nature. Mr. LeMesurier on the other hand holds to his belief that the Company can hardly be called upon to lower rates which are quite moderate enough already. His opinion to this effect is based on two grounds; first, because he is informed "that merchants have repeatedly stated that they are enabled to export wheat at a profit;" secondly, that the large increase in the exports of grain, &c., is as good a test as any that can be obtained. Such pleas might pass muster if the present rates were low enough to meet all the requirements of a new traffic, whose growth depends on many nice calculations of ultimate loss and gain. The one question for the Company to consider is not whether merchants can afford to pay the present rates, but how far, in view of the growing traffic, it would pay the Company to lower those rates. It is obvious for one thing that the growth of an export trade in a staple like wheat depends largely on low charges for railway carriage over long distances; and seeing how even a small reduction in railway charges tends to stimulate trade, we are strongly inclined to assume with the Pioneer and the Bombay Gazette that if the G.I.P.

Railway Company would but try the experiment of lowering their rates, they would not only confer a great benefit on the cultivators of the North-Western Provinces but on their own shareholders.

That the freight charges on the Western line might bear some reduction without much fear of ultimate loss to the Company is shown by the following extract from the last report of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce:—

In consequence of representations made to the Chamber by merchants largely interested in the cotton trade regarding the very high rates which the G. I. P. Railway Company were charging for the carriage of cotton to Bombay, your Committee, in March last, when Fair Dhollerah in Liverpool had a declining tendency at 43-16d. per lb., addressed the Agent of the G. I. P. Railway Company on the subject. When cotton stood at 8d. or 10d. per lb., high rates of carriage had perhaps no material effect on the trade but, although prices had for some years been gradually falling, not only had the G. I. P. Railway Company made no reduction in their rates for carriage but their rates for fullpressed cotton (and it might almost be said that the G. I. P. Railway Company carried only full-pressed cotton now) were actually higher than the rates charged in 1869. It was self-evident that a charge of nearly a-half-penny per lb. (at Rs. 1-10-11 per maund the exact cost per lb. was 3 97-100 pies) for the carriage from Oomrawuttee to Bombay of cotton which was worth little more than 4d. per lb. would help materially to check the cultivation of cotton in the Berars. That it was possible for a railway company to carry cotton a distance of 438 m<sup>-1</sup>es for considerably less than Rs. 46 per ton was proved by the fact that the B. B. and C. I. Railway Company now carried cotton from Wudwan to Bombay, a distance of 3894 miles, for Rs. 17 per ton, and yet managed to show very fair net receipts—while the E. I. R. Company carries cotton from Delhi to Howrah, a distance of 1,068 miles, for Rs. 48 per ton, or very little more than the G. I. P. Railway Company charged for carrying it from Comrawuttee to Bombay, a distance of only 438 miles.

It appears from the reply of the Company's Agent that he was then carrying out "certain modifications in the goods rates generally which would materially benefit traders at very considerable sacrifice of the Company's revenue," and that he would prefer to "watch the result of the experiment the Company were about to make before again considering any further reductions in their charges." This refers to the abolition from the 1st of May last of the extra ghat mileage upon cotton and other goods,—a measure which, in the Chamber's opinion, still leaves the G. I. P. Railway Company's charges for the carriage of cotton to Bombay very much higher than they ought to be, or than the article can, with the low price which it now fetches, bear."

FROM the following story, as published in an Indian Contemporary, it seems that respect for native prejudices ought, at least in native opinion, to include the utmost forbearance towards sacred animals even of the most carnivorous habits, when they happen to be roaming at large to the imminent danger of human lives:—

A few days since Captain ——, Assistant Commissioner in Rajputana, was staying in the dak bungalow at the sacred lake of Poshkar or Pokar, the annual fair at which place is now in progress. The bungalow is built at the edge of the lake, which swarms with alligators, much venerated by the inhabitants, among whom are numerous Brahmins. In the course of the night one of the holy reptiles (alligators, we mean), about ten feet in length, found his way up a narrow and steep flight of steps leading from the water to the courtyard of the bungalow. A police sentry seeing it gave the alarm, and the animal terrified, at the noise, and unable to find the aperture by which it had made its entry, took refuge in a room occupied by sleeping servants, among whose bed clothes their visitor attempted to conceal himself. This, as may readily be supposed, he was unable to effect without disturbing their slumbers; and he was speedily left in sole possession of various rezais, among which he was shot by Captain ——. So far the story has only interest as a curious fact in natural history; but the sequel has political bearings. The disturbance of the Assistant Commissioner's slumbers naturally formed the leading topic of conversation in the town next morning, and speedily reached the ears of the reverend guardians of the sacred waters. But instead of being shocked at the bad manners and intrusive habi s of their scaly protégé, they are furious at his destruction, and are loudly clamouring for vengeance on the unfortunate Captain ——. It is even rumoured that if the offended god or goddess is not appeased by the immediate dismissal and degradation of the Assistant Commissioner, the holy men, regardless of political geography, will petition the highest authority that Ajmir may be placed at once under the Government of Madras.

In a letter to the Times Dr. Cornish, Sanitary Commissioner for Madras, seems to hit upon one likely means of guarding the people of Bakarganj from some, at least, of the calamities involved in a storm-wave like that which lately swept over their fields and houses. While despairing of any great result to be gained from embankments in such 2 country, Dr. Cornish would teach the natives a lesson in house-building, derived from their neighbours in British Burmah. While the houses in a Bakarganj village are mostly built of mud or sun-dried bricks, which at the first touch of a sea wave collapse like a "card" house, drowning all the unfortunate inmates, in the deltas and valleys of British Burmah they manage things very differently.

In these swamps and marshy tracts every man, however humble in condition, builds his residence on wooden piles, raising, in many localities, the floor of the building from 10 ft. to 15 ft. above the ground level. For many months he may be living over a broad and deep river (such as would drown nine-tenths of the population of the islands at the mouths of the Ganges), but with his family warmly and securely housed.

Some of these houses, we believe, consist merely of a teak framework filled in with strong matting. So general is the practice of building on piles, that even in Rangoon and Maulmain, where floods are very rare, the barracks and officers' bungalows are built in that fashion, which has the further advantage of raising the inmates above the noxious exhalations from the damp ground below. It would certainly be a great boon to the Bengalis of the coast districts if this method of building could be naturalised among them. There is no want of suitable timber, we believe, in the rich alluvial soil of the Gangetic Delta. Besides the Sundari wood which gave its name to the Sundarbans, there are two or three other kinds of timber-trees which grow there freely, and are commonly used for posts and boat-building. The Sundari wood is particularly tough and heavy, and is said to be the only wood in those parts which can resist the saltness of the water. It must be allowed that the mud huts of Bakarganj are cheaper to build than the pile-built dwellings of the Burmese; but the cost might be lessened by walls of matting, the reeds for making which abound in the islands and marshes of Eastern Bengal.

THE Times' weekly telegram, of yesterday's date, announces that the Viceroy's visit to Peshawar has passed off well. He reviewed 4,000 troops and held a darbar of all the chiefs of the British districts on the Peshawar frontier, and met various chiefs of the Afridi and Momand tribes. While at Peshawar the Viceroy commenced his inquiries into the measures necessary for the reorganisation of the frontier in a personal conference with the Lieutenant-Governor, the Commander in-Chief, and the superior local officials. Nothing will be actually settled till the whole frontier has been inspected and the sanction of the Home Government obtained. The Viceroy arrived at Rawal Pindi on Monday, at Lahor on Tuesday, and left Lahor on Friday for Multan, Bhawalpur, and Jacobadad. The blockade of the nostile Afridis is now restricted to only 1,100 men, of the Kohat Pass section. All the other tribes have separated from them, and express a wish to be taken into our service. All whom the Viceroy met at Peshawar exhibited a friendly spirit. The Amir of Kabul, who is recovering from a severe illness, and is still very weak, is leaving Kabul for Jellalabad, owing to the prevalence of cholera at his capital. He sent a friendly greeting to the Viceroy. The Khan of Khelat arrived at Godava on the 21st Oct., en route to meet the Viceroy at Jacobabad. The principal chiefs are also on their way to take part in the meeting. It is stated that the Khan is in high spirits at the thought of joining in the Delhi Assemblage. The general desire in Khelat is for peace. Travelling is now perfeetly safe. A portion of Major Sandeman's escort is stationed for the winter on the banks of the River Nari, and the remainder at Quetta. Thus both ends of the Bolan Pass are secured.

The preparations for the Delhi Assemblage are rapidly approaching completion. The visitors will begin arriving about the 20th inst. The Viceroy reaches the camp on the 23rd. The King of Siam sends an Envoy with a suite. The British vice-Consul at Bangkok accompanies it. The Governor-General of Goa will also attend. The Governor of Pondicherry is obliged to decline the invitation, as he cannot leave his Council, which is now in session. The cost of the Assemblage will probably be much less than was expected, and it is believed that the total military and volunteer charges will be within the annual estimate, and will not entail any special grant. As a mark of special honour to the Maharajah of Kashmir, his salute is to be increased from nineteen to twenty-one guns, thus placing him on a level with the Nizam, the Gaikwar, and the Maharajah of Mysor, who hitherto were the only Native Princes entitled to a Royal salute. In British India the Maharajah of Jaipur has asked to be allowed to light the Viceroy's camp at Delhi with gas. He has lately introduced gas at Jaipur, and his satisfaction at the result has induced him to make this proposal.

THE following items are from the same source:-

Holkar has established trial by jury in his dominions. The paper which mentions the fact says that the jury will consist of four persons, two chosen by each side, and the Judge will give a casting vote. Probably trial by Judge and Assessors would be a more correct description of the system.

Lieutenant Harris, Wing Subaltern and Quartermaster of the 21st Punjab Infantry, has been shot dead at rifle practice by a Pathan Sepoy, with whom he had found fault for bad shooting. The murderer, fixing his bayonet, ran away, firing at other officers and men till his ammunition was expended, when he surrendered.

It is stated that the Supreme Government is urging the Bombay Government to proceed at once with the Bombay and Aden fortifications.

A Mohammedan meeting of sympathy with the Turks was held on Friday in the Kolutalla Mosque, Calcutta. It is stated that 10,000 persons were present, and after prayers for the Queen and the Sultan, the memorial to the Queen, which had been prepared by the Committee, was read, adopted, and signed. I am told that the proceedings were most orderly, and marked by much earnestness.

The accounts from the Bombay and Madras distressed districts are far from cheering, although opinions still differ as to whether actual famine will ensue. It is probable that the worst feature is that in the Dakhan not only a failure of crops, but also extreme dearth of water and fodder may be expected. The last official report from Sholapur is contained in one gloomy sentence—"No rain, no crops; condition of people unchanged." The Bombay Government is sending large quantities of grain; but the collectors are directed not to distribute gratuitous alms except in cases of extreme necessity, and as far as possible to exact a fair day's labour on the Relief Works. It is possible that extensive irrigation works will be started for the employment of the people. Subscriptions for relief have been opened in Bombay.

In Madras there will be much distress in the districts of Karnul, Kadapah, and Bellary. Prospects are, however, better than in Bombay, though cholera has appeared, and is increasing. It is stated that the Madras officials are managing the relief measures admirably.

There is much destitution in Mysor, but the prospects are less gloomy than in the Dakhan.

Sir R. Temple will succeed Sir P. Wodehouse as Governor of Bombay in February. The Bombay papers express their satisfaction at the appointment.

The Eastern Bengal districts are reported to be rapidly recovering from the effects of the cyclone. The damage done to the crops is less than was expected. Sickness still prevails, but all fear of destitution is removed. It is believed, however, that the people have lost 90 per cent. of their plough cattle. The number already given as the estimated loss of human life is probably under the truth.

Another vacancy in the Indian Council has just been made by the appointment of Sir Bartle Frere to succeed Sir H. Barkly as Governor of the Cape.

THE present rise in the value of silver appears to justify the belief of those who ascribed the previous fall rather to panie than to any of the causes alleged by the Silver Committee. At the end of last month the price of silver in our markets had risen to 55d. an ounce, and the India-office were selling bills on India at more than 1s. 9d. the rupee. A few days earlier silver was actually going out of Europe for American uses, in spite of the boundless stores of that metal which the Nevada mines were to yield. The Times Correspondent estimates that the yield of silver in the United States during the present year will not be worth more than £5,600,000, which is 60 per cent. below the amount anticipated by Mr. Goschen's Committee. It is even doubtful whether the Comstock Lode will not prove an idle bugbear. The probable resumption of cash payments in the States will also tend to keep up the price of silver, especially if the Americans accept the principle of a double standard, as strongly advocated by the President of the Silver Commission now sitting in New York, and apparently supported by a powerful party in the States. If gold and silver should be placed on the same footing as legal tender beyond the Atlantic, France would be emboldened to resume her suspended coinage of silver, and in due time other European countries might be won over to the cause which M. Cernuschi has so long and vigorously upheld.

THE SUPREME GOVERNMENT is said to have relieved the administrative officials of Madras from attendance at the Imperial Assemblage.

INDIA'S MORAL AND MATERIAL PROGRESS IN 1874-75—IV.

In irrigation works a fair amount of progress is recorded for the year under review. The Midnapur and Orissa Canals irrigated nearly twice their former area. Unluckily the Midnapur Canal is liable at one time to fall short of water, at another to be flooded from the freshes of the Kossye river. A scheme for completing the Orissa system in order to save Cuttack from drought was laid before the Indian Council, which sanctioned a part of the proposed outlay. On the Bombay side the chief new work of the year was the Kasmor and Begari embankment in Sind, of which thirty-eight miles were completed. Steady progress was made with the Bari Doáb and Sirhind Canals in the Punjab. In the Firozpur district a good and cheap system of inundation canals, capable of watering 100,000 acres, was carried through by the people themselves, acting in concert with Captain Grey, whose achievements we noticed at length some months ago. A good deal of work was done in the North-Western Provinces, especially on the Lower Ganges Canal. The profits for the year on works already opened were computed at 6.5 per cent. on the capital outlay. With the progress made in railways during the year our readers have already become acquainted.

With regard to roads and bridges we learn that about 13 million was laid out in Bengal, chiefly on account of relief works. In Bombay much useful work of the same kind was got through. Several important roads in the Punjab were extended, metalled, or completed, including the Kangra Valley and the Hindustan and Tibet roads. Some good work was also accomplished in Rajputana and the Central Provinces.

The development of India's mineral wealth, especially in coal and iron, went forward with fair results. The coal mines of Bardwan produced a profitable yield. Good things were reported of the Talcher coal in Orissa, and considerable progress was made in working the Warora collieries, which are reckoned capable of yielding forty million tons of coal nearly as good as English. A large reserve of similar coal only awaits working in Berar. A company was started for the opening of ironworks at Raniganj, where plenty of iron and limestone is known to exist. The process of iron-smelting goes on at Narainpur in Murshidabad, with ore obtained from the Santhal country. Iron is believed to exist in South Bhagalpur, and very good iron is found and smelted in the Orissa Hills. In the North-West Provinces the Government undertook to work on certain terms the iron mines of the Kamaon Company. Iron was also worked with some success in Jabalpur and Mysor. Some attempts at gold-mining were begun in Wynad and the Kolar district of Mysor. Some fresh discoveries of tin were made by a Rangoon firm in the Tavoy district of British Burmah. The tale mines of Hazaribagh and the quarries of black marble near Balasor yielded good returns. Chota Nagpur abounds in mineral wealth, the opening of which is delayed only by the want of roads.

Under the head of manufactures cotton takes the lead, and Bombay manufactures it on the largest scale. Twenty-eight companies in the capital and twelve in the districts were employed in spinning and weaving the cheaper kinds of cotton goods by machinery, and the products of their mills are displacing not only the English imports but the native hand made goods. Some kinds of cloth, both coarse and fine, are still woven by hand in the Central Provinces; but the rivalry of machine-made cotton is driving many of the weavers into other fields of industry. For these provinces the silk manufactures now decaying in Bengal seem specially adapted, since they abound in the kind of trees on which the tassar-worm is known to thrive. Experiments for improving the cocoons have been begun, and it is hoped that the Chinese worm may be natural. ised in Sambalpur. The fine muslins of Dacca are now made only to order. Metal-work and cotton twist are the chief industries of Orissa. The weavers of Patua still manufacture a stout class of cotton cloths for which there is a large demand. In Bengal the chief manufactures are indigo, gunny-bags, sugar, brass vessels, and fine cotton cloths. The Punjab did an increasing business in gold lace, brass and copper vessels, woollen, cotton, and leather goods. In British Burmah silk and cotton goods are largely manufactured for home use, while the gold and silver work, which is improving in quality and finish, finds a ready market among English residents.

The value of India's foreign trade in 1874 amounted to £100,691,249, of which the exports, including treasure, claimed £57,904,967. Bombay alone exported over 24 millions against  $22\frac{3}{4}$  millions exported from Bengal, excluding Burmah. Bengal on the other hand imported five millions more than Bombay. The total imports were more than 5 millions and the exports more than a million in excess of the previous year, and the increase over 1872 was still greater. Of the whole foreign trade Europe engrossed more than  $70\frac{1}{2}$ , and Asia over 25 millions; America's share being only £2,370,924, and that of Africa still less, while Australia contributed only £369,170. Of the European trade six-sevenths concerned the British Islands. The trade with China amounted to  $14\frac{2}{3}$  millions.

The value of the Calcutta trade with Indian and foreign ports was about 463 millions, showing a gain of 31 millions on the year before, in spite of a decline in the exports. The improvement in the trade of Bombay Port was yet greater, and the total value for the year,  $47\frac{1}{3}$  millions, marked a return to the higher figures of 1871. The exports of manufactured jute increased by 17 per cent. on the previous year. The indigo exports were affected by a short crop in Tirhut. Tea, on the other hand, was exported to the value of nearly two millions. A large decrease in the exports of raw cotton from Calcutta was balanced by a large increase in similar exports from Bombay. The exports of raw silk fell off by a third. The export trade in wheat rose from £53,730 in 1872, to £317,126 in 1874. The tcbacco exported was nearly double the amount of the previous year. The port of Chittagong did an increasing trade in tea, but its mainstay, the rice-trade, still suffered from the derangement caused by the Bengal famine. The trade of Orissa has been advancing with rapid strides, in spite of the reaction expected after the famine. Its exports of rice rose to £311,208, or about £80,000 in excess of the famine year. The increase in Bombay imports was chiefly under the head of coffee, jute, metals, machinery, raw cotton, twist, yarns, and silk. Sind exported less wheat than usual. There was an increase of half a million in the trade of Aden. If there is no mistake in the figures, the trade of the Punjab rose in one year from 4½ millions to nearly 17 millions, besides the traffic of the Indus Steam Flotilla, which with a few smaller items would bring the total up to 20 millions. But it seems more probable that so wide a difference in two years is partly due to the greater accuracy of the returns made under the new system of registration.

The trade returns for the port of Madras showed a decline of about £300,000 from the total of the previous year. There was however a very large increase in the exports of cotton wool to Europe to set against the decline in the rice trade, indigo, and one or two other staples. There was some improvement in the trade of Oudh, which for some years past has imported more than it exports. In the trade of British Burmah there was a marked decline, in spite of a large increase in the exports of cotton, timber, india-rubber, and several other products. The rice trade was affected by the high prices of the former year, which tempted the producers to keep back their stock. The inland trade however showed a steady rise, especially in the produce of the Northern Arakan Hill Tracts.

DESPOTISM, DISCONTENT, DISOBEDIENCE—II. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

It appears by the reports received from the Punjab and the North-West Provinces that a system has latterly prevailed in the municipalities in that part of the country of taxing at a reduced rate the whole of such imports into a town as are subject to octroi duties, leaving the incidence of the tax to adjust itself by a natural commercial process. The tax is reduced in the same proportion to a full rate as the local consumption bears to the import. This method can only be adopted when the local retail trade and the wholesale export trade are in the same hands, and it is not sanctioned unless the Municipal Committee believe that such is the case. There can then, it is urged, be no injury to trade, for the octroi must either be passed on to the consumer or be borne by the trader himself as a deduction from the profits of trade. Assuming the former to be the case, so far as it falls as a transit duty, it cannot be passed on to the customers in the town where it is ultimately consumed, for the market rate there is dependent on competition from other quarters. It must, therefore, be borne by the consumer in the municipality; that is, the merchant must recover the whole octroi rate he has paid out of the local retail prices; or if he cannot do this he must bear it as a deduction from his profits, and as his share in local taxation.—Page 3 of the new Blue-book on India.

SIR,—If M. Emile de Laveleye should wish to avenge himself of Lord Lytton's recent attacks on him in the snug Simla Legislative parlour, he will have a good opportunity of doing so by holding up to ridicule the illogical statements contained in the imperial Blue-book quoted above. Who in this present century ever before heard that transit duties cannot be passed on to the customer in the town or village where the taxed goods are ultimately consumed, but must be borne by the inhabitants of the town through which the goods are transmitted? This new Blue-book proves one thing; it proves that the British governments in India are ignorant of the pressure of the taxes they impose; it proves that they have not learnt the first principles of free trade, or the A B C of political economy; it proves that the English in India have given up the task of attempting to find out how heavily municipal taxes fall upon all of her Majesty's subjects in India, how discouraging they are to agriculture, how crushing to manufactures, and injurious to trade in many various ways.

Is the House of Commons any longer to be beguiled by such sophisms as I have quoted above? May we not expect soon to be told that after Manchester goods have paid transit duties in a dozen towns through which they have been conveyed such onerous taxation will not fall on the consumer?

The simple question to be answered is, Why should Manchester goods have to pay transit duties in every town and octroied village through which they are conveyed? I leave this simple question to be argued between British statesmen and the gentlemen who are misgoverning India.

I am happy to write that one Indian newspaper, the Pioneer, has exposed the fallacious reasoning of the Government of the North-Western Provinces. How sad is the reflection that statesmanship in India should have so degenerated since the

October, 1833, when Sir Charles Trevelyan lucidly exposed mischievous operation of the town duties, which were abolished in consequence of his able Report, but which have now been re-imposed and extended by official covetousness.

Let us inquire by what means official covetousness has been excited in the North-West Provinces, which were formerly so ably governed by Lord Metcalfe, and by Robertson, Thomason and Colvin. It has been excited, I believe, by depriving chief magistrates (called district officers) of the Road and Ferry Funds, which legally belonged to their local committees. For a long course of years chief magistrates had been permitted to execute local improvements with money obtained from road and ferry funds, but since Lord Mayo's death the Department of Public Works has been permitted by a despotic Government to lay its hands on most of the income of these funds, and to waste large sums in extravagant and useless establishments.

Year after year chief magistrates have been deprived of power to do good; their zeal in the execution of their proper duties has been chilled, but the expression of their discontent has been checked by permitting them to screw choongee—octroi—out of towns and villages. This objectionable mode of finding employment for the energies of our best civil officers has been successfully employed by the Local Government in direct disobedience to the repeated instructions of successive Viceroys.

I recommend English statesmen to study the various reports on Indian municipalities if they wish to learn how an ignorant despotic Government can be played with by shrewd local governors, who veil the collection of an objectionable tax under a mass of smooth verbiage. If any of the readers of your Paper should imagine that municipalities in India in any way represent the taxpayers, let them read page 5 of the new Blue-book, in which is recorded that the Punjab Government has declared that the townspeople "prefer that the selection of their spokesman should be left to disinterested authority."

Woe to the municipal councillor who may differ in opinion from disinterested authority. What chief magistrate could be expected to endure the opposition of such a factious tax-maker?

In plain English, the local authorities are permitted, in defiance of the low soft complaints of the poor, to continue a system of official exaction in the teeth of the first principles of free trade which have been declared to be unassailable by the British Parliament, by the India Office, Tory as well as Whig, and by a succession of Viceroys. The fat merchants of an Indian town, who object to pay a house tax, who are always anxious to introduce or perpetuate practical monopolies, and who are especially rejoiced at the imposition of transit duties, are nominated to seats in so-called municipal councils by what the Blue-book calls disinterested authority, i.e., by officials anxious to get money anyhow. Large sums are realised from the poor in towns and from agriculturists in the surrounding country by choongee octroi with very little trouble, and are expended without any efficient control, and the Local Governments encourage the spirit of official covetousness and vainglory by delightful descriptions of proposed local improvements.

Two Indian newspapers have honorably distinguished themselves by exposing some of the fallacies of the octroi system. I have already noticed the Pioneer of Allahabad, and the Times of India at Bombay, has bravely denounced this convenient fiscal sin by branding it as about the most inequitable of all methods of raising a revenue.

Your readers have perhaps forgotten the proceedings of Mr. Fawcett's Committee of the House of Commons on Indian Finance. On the 18th March, 1873, an important witness, Mr. Harrison, confessed that the octroi was unsuitable for the North-Western Provinces.

In your paper of the 6th December, 1875, you alluded to the memorial presented to Lord Northbrook at Bombay by the Chamber of Commerce, protesting against the octroi. The Viceroy declared that "if an octroi duty becomes a transit duty—that is if it becomes a tax upon the trade that passes through the town, instead of upon articles consumed in the town—it becomes objectionable, and ought not to be allowed to remain."

Ought!! Are these the words of a despotic Viceroy? Has he no power? Ask the natives of India whether they would not prefer the honest despotism of Feroze Toghluk 500 years ago to the weak despotism of Viceroys who do not care to enforce those orders which prohibit oppression and wrong.

It is also hereby proclaimed that the small and vexatious taxes, under the denomination of Cotwally, &c., payable to the public servants of Go-vernment, is perquisites of offices, by small traders; licenses for the right of pasturage from shepherds, on waste lands belonging to the Crown; fees from flower sellers, fish sellers, cotton cleaners, silk sellers, and cooks and the precarious and fluctuating taxes on shopkeepers and vintners, shall henceforward cease throughout the realm; for it is better to relinquish this portion of the revenue than realise it at the expense of so much distress, occasioned by the discretionary power necessarily vested in tax-gatherers and officers of authority.—Page 463 of Vol. I. of Brigg's "Ferishtuh.

THE "TIMES" ON THE CONDITION OF INDIA. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The Times of the 20th inst. has an article on India, which is remarkable for the misleading character of some of the statements contained in it. The writer, after noticing the present famine in the Deccan, the poverty of the people of India and the "vast tracts in that country which are made barren by swamps, mountains, and thinness of soil," says: "European skill and implements or Chinese industry might doubtless fertilise much of that territory; but the Hindoo peasantry still employ the rude methods which they have practised for thousands of years. The Government is trying to teach them better ways by model farms.

It is not teaching that the ryot stands in need of; it is security against arbitrary demands, and the attempts hitherto made to instruct him by means of model farms, steam ploughs and other European implements, have resulted only in exposing our own ignorance of the very thing which we presume to teach, viz., practical agriculture suitable for India.

The poverty of the people is due to the pernicious practice which the Government follows throughout the greater part of India, of periodically revising the land-tax, and of maintaining it at tigures out of proportion with the productiveness of the land. Rarely is the ryot able to satisfy the demand of the taxgatherer, and heavy arrears stand against him, which, when added to the current year's tax, would, in the most favourable season, swallow up the whole net produce of his field, leaving him no better off than in ordinary years. In a similar condition of things there is no inducement for the ryot to make extraordinary efforts or to borrow money for the improvement of his farm; since the fruit of the labour and capital employed for such improvement would not be reaped by him, but be absorbed in the Government demand. Generally speaking, therefore, the ryots are in a state bordering upon destitution, having neither money nor stock of grain to fall back on, when a bad season occurs; and when such a calamity happens, starvation or crime is the only alternative, excepting for those who are relieved by the public. This state of things now prevails in parts of the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, and we may any day hear of a sudden outbreak of crime among the populations who are suffering from hunger.

The writer of the above-mentioned article in the Times does, moreover, great injustice to the Indian peasant when he describes him as a reckless spendthrift, "spending his money as fast as he can earn it, or flinging it away in wild bursts of hos-As a rule, the ryot is frugal and thrifty, hard working and enduring; and what the writer has been led to consider as "wild bursts of hospitality" are probably the public meals which a Hindoo is bound by his religion to offer on certain domestic occasions to a number of Brahmins and others. Bengal, where the land-tax being permanently fixed the landlords are generally considerate to their tenants, thousands of ryots have been able to save enough to buy the patni or perpetual lease of their fields, and have thus virtually become peasant proprietors, subject to a quit-rent. The number of these ryot proprietors is steadily increasing, and this will account for the wealth which has so rapidly accumulated in Bengal, while in the other provinces of the Empire, where the land-tax is periodically revised and enhanced, the peasantry has remained in a state approaching pauperism. This striking difference is illustrated in the Times of the 20th inst., in which the general condition of the people is described as "poor," and as "creatures absolutely without the power of self-help in the graver trials of life, and whom the Government must feed" in the present conjuncture; while a telegram, published in the same number, speaking of the terrible cyclone which recently devas-tated certain districts in Bengal, thus describes the peasantry of that province:-"The condition of the survivors is better than might have been expected. Backergunge is a great riceproducing district. Its peasantry are the most prosperous in Bengal. Their stores have of course been thoroughly soaked; but it is believed that they are not seriously damaged. Wherever Sir R. Temple went, he saw the people drying their grain in the

Give the ryots of the other provinces of India the chances which those of Bengal have enjoyed of saving the surplus produce of their farms and of ultimately acquiring the perpetual lease or fee simple of their lands, and the results will be the same; for everywhere self-interest is the most powerful motive to industry and economy. Arthur Young, in his "Travels in France in 1788," makes certain remarks which are applicable to India likewise. Speaking of the sandy tracts near Dunkirk, he says:-" There is a great number of neat little houses, built each with its little garden and one or two fields enclosed, of most wretched blowing dune sand, naturally as white as snow, but improved by industry. The magic of property turns sand to gold.

Of another part of the country he says:- " From Gange to the mountain of rough ground which I crossed the ride has been most interesting; the efforts of industry are the most vigorous, the animation the most lively. An activity has been here that has swept away all difficulties before it, and has clothed the very rocks with verdure. It would be a disgrace to common sense to ask the cause; the enjoyment of property must have done it. Give a man a secure possession of a bleak rock, and he will turn it into a garden; give him a nine years' lease of a garden, and he will convert it into a desert."

The late Mr. J. S. Mill in his "Principles of Political Economy" says:—"The idea of property does not necessarily imply that there should be no rent, any more than that there should be no taxes. It merely implies that the rent should be a fixed charge, not liable to be raised against the possessor by his own improvements, or by the will of a landlord. A tenant at quit rent is, to all intents and purposes, a proprietor. What is wanted is permanent possession on fixed terms. A practice diametrically opposed to the principles advocated by Mr. Mill, that of constantly harassing the ryots with a revision and an enhancement of their rents, has resulted in India in the abandonment of vast tracts of cultivated fields during the last ten years. In the very districts of Poonah and Sholapore, where the distress at present is the most severe, many thousand acres of land have been thrown out of cultivation since 1871 by the pressure of the land-tax, a circumstance which may in a great measure account for the unprovided and helpless condition in which we now find the people in those districts.

There are other errors into which the writer of the article in the Times of the 20th inst. seems to have fallen; but I must reserve my remarks upon them for a future opportunity, as I am unwilling to trespass further on your valuable space at present.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, Nov. 23, 1876.

The Poems of Beha-ed-din Zoheir of Egypt. With a Metrical English Translation, Notes, and Introduction. By E. H. Palmer, M.A. Edited for the Syndics of the University Press, Cambridge. Vol. I. Text, 4to. 1876.

A Concise Dictionary of the Persian Language. By E. H. Palmer, M.A. London: Trübner and Co. 1876.

Professor Palmer's activity in advancing Arabic scholarship has formerly shown itself in the production of his excellent Arabic Grammar, and his Descriptive Catalogue of Arabic MSS. in the Library of Trinity College, Cambridge. He has now produced an admirable text, which illustrates in a remarkable manner the flexibility and graces of the language he loves so well, and of which he seems to be perfect master. The volume before us contains the poetical effusions of Bant-ul-dîn Zuhair, a poet of Egyptian nationality, who has exercised his ingenuity to the utmost in displaying the wonderful resources of his native tongue. The characteristic feature of this volume of verse is the manner in which the poet has made his verses rime on the various letters of the alphabet, beginning with alif the first letter, and ending with yd, the last letter. It is interesting to notice the varying degrees of facility with which the letters seem to have lent themselves to this process. Thus the letter a yields four pages of rimes, the letter b is more pliable and produces twenty-four pages, d gives twenty-one pages, mtwenty-six pages, n thirty-seven pages, l thirty-eight pages, and r, the highest of all, gives forty-six pages of rimes. The rest of the letters are content with two, three, or four pages The character ghain seems to have proved a very stubborn letter, and yields only three lines of rime. But what is, perhaps, more interesting is the play upon letters which, as finals, are almost inappreciable in pronunciation; thus twelve pages of rimes are found for the pectoral h, and eight pages more for the weak h. These remarks are sufficient to show the skill which Bahâ-ud-dîn Zuhair has shown in the construction of his verses, and his command over language. The verses themselves are very varied in character, and are in many respects fine specimens of Arabic composition. Professor Palmer has edited the work with much care, and by so doing has gained fresh laurels. He promises a Translation, with Introduction and Notes; the last will be much needed on account of the difficulties with which the poems are beset; but we feel sure that the Almoner Professor will satisfactorily complete the work he has so well begun, and we shall await with interest the publication of the concluding volumes. The Syndicate of Cambridge University must not pass without the recognition of their liberality in bringing out, in a worthy form, so important an Arabic text. It is not the first time that Oriental scholarship has thus been wisely subsidised by Cambridge, and we trust that, in the future, they will continue to recognise the value of Eastern lore.

The second book which heads this article is also the production of Professor Palmer, and shows that he is not a mere scholar, but one who condescends to satisfy practical needs. It is a small Persian Dictionary intended for beginners and others, such as travellers and temporary residents in the East, who want to know the meaning of the words in continual use among the speakers of the Persian tongue. This information Professor Palmer gives in a concise and portable form. We have detected very few mistakes in our necessarily incomplete examination of such a book, and the mistakes we have seen are of an unimportant character. We do not like the occasional use of e to represent fathah in Roman type, as we think it more likely to vitiate than to assist the pronunciation of the learner. miss, also, the 'ajam's sounds of the vowels so familiar to the cars of residents in Persia. This is the more unfortunate as it has, apparently, led to the omission of many words which vary in meaning according to their pronunciation in the ma'ruf or 'ajam's fashion; as, for examples, ablah's and ablahe, ab's and abe, &c., &c. Another great defect in the book is the imperfect legibility of the Arabic types employed. As each word is followed by a transliteration this defect is minimised; but we certainly think that, without that help, no one would recognise the word nang, for example. In all books for beginners, also, the letters k and g should be distinguished from each other. Notwithstanding the blemishes we have pointed out, the book is, as far as we have tested it, accurate; and will, no doubt, be very useful to engineers, clerks, and assistants of various grades, and to others who would like to gain an elementary knowledge of Persian. The book contains 726 columns of matter, and allowing twenty-one words to a column, it will be found to contain more than 15,000 words, which is about five times as much as can be needed for all ordinary conversational purposes.

ORIENTAL GOVERNMENT.

The Madras Times holds that few natives however carefully selected, have the energy, the education, or the knowledge of the world, and of men and things, which is possessed by the very youngest competition-wallah or military officer who lands for the first time in India, and we should be politically foolish, sentimentally insane, if we deliberately sought out inferior men for the administration of India, while superior men are going a-begging at our own doors. It is not a question of colour or philanthropy, but of expediency. That excellent native paper, the Hindoo Patriot, fully recognises the absurdity of the proposal, and itself advises that no native should be appointed to the higher offices under Government until he has passed through all the lower grades of the Department in question. The Hindoo Patriot is undoubtedly right. To put Baboos into the judicial courts and the collectorates of Bengal will be simply to emasculate the vigour of Indian Government, and that without serving any useful purpose, unless it be to gratify the vanity of a few semi-Anglicised natives who are in no wise in sympathy with the bulk of their fellow-countrymen. Looking at the question from a broad and unphilanthropical point of view, it may be fairly indeed doubted if the natives of the present day are equal, physically or mentally, to a share in the task of the higher Indian administration. They are Orientals, not Englishmen, and this fatality almost decides the whole question. Any one may count on his fingers the number of native rulers, worthy of the name, there are now in India. Administration of our hardworking, vigorous pattern is not their forte, and it is questionable if it ever will be so long as the Hindu is a Hindu, and not an Anglo-Saxon. These are cannot afford to dispense with that labour, that vigour. the qualities which won us India, and by which we hold it. talise the Government, and we return to the old times of native in-dolence and misrule, of which we English took advantage to swallow up kingdom after kingdom. Some men of moderate views, we are aware, are of opinion that, although the natives are not now fitted for self-government according to English notions, the time is fast approaching when they must become so; but this supposition is really unwarranted by facts, and is simply supposition. If we desire to put it to the test, the Hindoo Patriot's plan, not that of our Engglish philanthropical visionaries, is the one to be adopted. native candidate for high office work his way through the subordinate grades of his department, or regiment, as Anglo-Indians now do, but let us not commit the exceeding folly of making him a fullblown judge or collector, simply because he is a native with a raceshare to whatever in the way of emolument or influence is going in the land.

THE STAFF CORPS AND ARMY REORGANISATION.

The Bombay Gazette thinks it is a very common impression that the officers of the old Indian Army were immensely benefited by the introduction of the Staff Corps and organisation novelties to their service, and this fallacy has been fostered and encouraged by a few Staff Corps officers holding influential or well-paid appoint-ments, and by the whole of the "local" officers who have benefited hugely at the expense of their Staff Corps comrades. But the truth is that for one man whom the new organisatian and Staff Corps has benefited there are perhaps a dozen for whom these things been as mockeries, delusions and snares; swamping men's ambitions, and relegating them to the drudgery of subaltern's work at a time of life when in other days they would be commanding regiments, perhaps brigades. Our meaning will be rendered clearer if we say that haps brigades. Our meaning will be rendered clearer it we say that it has been calculated that the average service of commandants in the Bombay Native Army is 33½ years; that of seconds in command 26½ years; wings 24¾ years. In Madras the same averages are respectively 33¾, 30 and 24¼ years, and in Bengal 32½, 26½, and 20¾ years; Bengal, as usual, being more fortunate in these things than the other Presidencies, though why she should be so, unless it is an interest of the same average are respectively. unjustly favoured Presidency, we are at a loss to discover. A considerable proportion of all these appointments are filled by what is styled "officiating" officers, a distinction which implies that the officers occupying them can enjoy only half the allowances of the appointments even when doing all their work, and this distinction must not be overlooked in calculating the gains of Indian officers from the two institutions here spoken of. The average of ages, as here shown, are convincing. It was nothing unusual in the old days for a major of two-and-twenty years service to fall into the command of his regiment; but here we have majors of twenty-six years' service "officiating" on half allowances as wing officers, and as likely ever to obtain command of their regiments as they are to ascend to the moon. However, command is what every officer worthy of the name naturally aspires to, and we may fancy what must be the disappointments of these twenty-six years' service officers on seeing the object of their ambition nearly as far from them to-day as when twenty-six years ago they landed as cadets in India. The men who hold fine appointments by favour of "interest," and the Staff Corps pooh-pooh anything like ambition in the military branch of the service, and their usual argument is, that the new organisation offers regimental officers better pay than they could have obtained under the old one; but this is not true, in fact for the Major of the old organisation would have enjoyed as much pay as the officiating wing officer of the new one, with the chance of commanding his regiment as well. The new organisation and Staff Corps really only benefits the Colonels of long service, who would, under the former system, have been obliged to take their pensions, in most instances before attaining this length of service; for all other regimental officers the two institutions have had simply the effect of blocking regimental promotion completely. The "locals," indeed, have gained immensely by both, but only because they would have nothing to do with the Staff Corps—a precaution which has enabled them to supersede every Staff Corps Officer in the service of their own rank and standing.

THE LATE FINANCIAL MEMBER OF COUNCIL.

The Allahabad Pioneer remarks that, viewed as a career, Sir William Muir's story has been uneventful. As Settlement Officer, as Secretary to the Board of Revenue, as Secretary to Government, and as Member of the Board of Revenue, he has passed most of his life in these North-Western Provinces. the events of 1857-58 took him no less than others by surprise, they left him at least as full of charity for the natives as before; as unshaken in the conviction that all things work for good in the cause of human enlightenment. So far from the hurricane shaking cause of human enlightenment. So far from the hurricane shaking him in his views, he but clung the closer to the policy of securing native confidence. Lord Lawrence, when in 1865 he called Sir William to the Foreign-office, raised him to a post more becoming his great abilities, and in which his advice on the vexed question of tenant-right in Oudh proved of signal use to the Viceroy. Subsequently he sat as a Member of Lord Lawrence's Council, and his administration as Lieutenant-Governor of these provinces is fresh in all our memories. It is not within our object to criticise further that administration, or to comment on his tenure of office as Financial Member. We have never concealed our opinion that he centralised too much; and that in his time the jealousy and activity of head-quarters discouraged and disabled his sub-ordinates. Of the drapery and grace of government, too, he knew little; perhaps cared less. There was more of the artisan than the artist in him. But from first to last Sir William has been distinguished by the same unflagging industry, by the same unswerving faithfulness to native interests, by the same unsparing devotion of his abilities in all quarters where they were needed, and by the same loyalty to his masters. As Lieutenant-Governor, he communicated to his subordinates his own high standard of official zeal, and wrung from his enemies an unwilling approval by the careful exercise of his patronage. course, like other public men, he has had his enemies; but we venture to predict that his name will blossom long after the tongue of detraction is dust. Cautious to a fault, by constitution as by race, and too sensitive, for a public man, to the infliction of disappointment, he seemed at times to hesitate and to stammer a decision where prompter action, or a more certain sound, would have better pleased his friends. It has been said of him, again, that on the question of a permanent settlement he set his sails to the prevailing wind, and changed his views with changing circumstances. The charge is scarcely worth the noticing. Who but a fool has not charge is scarcely worth the noticing. Who but a fool has not changed many of his views since 1857? Are mountains to be removed, and views to remain unaltered? Of course he changed his views; and so of course did every one else who had a view to change; and so among the violent forces which are driving India now-a-days forward must every man be prepared to change or modify his opinions. No one could have intelligently clung in 1864 to an opinion, merely on the ground that he had formed it in 1854. No one assuredly could have stated the grounds on which he had reconsidered his opinion with a tithe of Sir William's ability, have supported them by the same careful and exhaustive reasoning, or strengthened them by such wide and acute observation. That he had courage, if in the interests of the people he thought it needful, to put aside his habit of discipline, and to oppose a firm front to all comers, was admirably proved in the stand which he made against Lord Mayo's Government on the question of Land Revenue Asses ments and the Income-tax. The effect was the more telling that as a subordinate he had always thought it his duty to defer his own views to the conclusions of those whom he served. But entrusted with the government on behalf of the natives of these provinces —their sole representative and their responsible guardian—it was no longer a question with him merely between his own opinions and the opinions of his masters, but between his duty on behalf of the people and his duty to the Viceroy in Council. There was no hesitation then; no dubious utterance. The powerful and emhesitation then; no dubious utterance. The powerful and emphatic, though respectful, remonstrance which he uttered at the Council table in this place in 1871 stands recorded on the Legislative proceedings of Government, an answer to all time against the charge of timidity, and a final rebuke to those who are not ashamed to revive the odious insinuation of time-serving. Of the eminent Arabic scholar; the religionist sincere but unassuming in his creed; the kind-hearted friend; or the hospitable host, this is not the place to write. Some day (let us hope it is yet far distant) these reminiscences will perhaps be confided to the pages of a personal memoir. Pleasant memoires linger of those past days, when here and at Naini Tal he kept his simple state.

THE DEARTH OF OFFICERS.

The Englishman points out that in 1857, when the native troops of the East India Company mutinied, amongst other causes brought forward by the sapient men of that day as to the reason of the outbreak was the paucity of officers with regiments, the withdrawal of officers for Civil employ, Staff employ, &c. It was considered that the officers did not know their men. Now-a-days, there are in some regiments no officers for the men to know. If we first take the British Regiments in India, the 10th Hussars have fourteen officers in England, and one on probation with a native regiment; this does not include general and privilege leave in India. The 11th Hussars, taking all kinds of leave into consideration, as also Regimental depot, have fourteen officers absent. The 13th and 15th Hussars, hardly any absentees. If we take the British Infantry, and note those officers at the Regimental depot, and on leave and sick leave in England, on Staff employ, at garrison instruction, on probation with Native Infantry regiments, and on leave on private affairs, we find as follows:—The Royal Scots have 20 officers absent; the 3rd Buffs, 21 officers absent; the 5th Fusiliers, 22; the 6th Foot, 18; the 8th Foot, 15; the 11th Foot, 20; the 14th Foot, 22; the 39th Foot, 16; the 54th Foot, 23; the 59th Foot, 21. When these deductions are made from the total of officers, 30, with British regiments in India, it is easily seen how many remain for duty with 820 rank and file. The absentees undoubtedly are very great; and yet the discipline and efficiency of British regiments is beyond comment. It is the system, the internal economy sustained in corps, which keeps up the regiments to their renowned efficacy. But there is a serious aspect of the case, which merits some consideration. There are regimental and garrison duties to be performed. officers in British regiments have their early mornings fully occupied, and in the cold seasons boards usually assemble after break-Thus, most days, the time of many officers is well occupied between Boards and Courts Martial. But in garrisons in India there are Native, as well as British, regiments. We will note the assistance which Native regiments can give in providing officers assistance which Native regiments can give in providing of oncers for garrison duties. Let us take Benares, with its force, consisting of a battery of Artillery, a wing of British Infantry, a wing of Native Infantry, and a detachment of Native Cavalry. The battery of Artillery during the hot season has, probably, two officers; the wing of British Infantry, probably, six, and no more, the detachment of Native Cavalry, at most one. The regiment of Native Inment of Native Cavalry, at most one. The regiment of Native Infantry we will separately discuss. At this station there is the 13th Native Infantry. The second in command is commanding another regiment; the wing officer, is in England; the adjutant is doing his own work, and also officiating as wing officer; the first wing subaltern is officiating as second in command; the second wing subaltern is with another regiment; an officiating wing subaltern is studying the native languages in Calcutta; and an officer of the Artillery is with the regiment on probation, and, therefore, unknown to the men, and learning the duties with a native regiment. Taking into consideration the work now thrown on officers with native regiments, their garrison duties, musketry, &c., might we ask who does the work in this corps, where, out of seven officers, the allotted number to a native regiment, there are four absentees? We laboured under the idea that the Government had issued a strict order that there should be seven officers with regiments of native infantry. Take the 6th Native Infantry; the commandant, the officiating secondin-command and wing officer are in England; another wing officer, and a wing subaltern are also in England; they have thus four officers in England. The regiment is quartered at Fort William, and the few remaining, who are mostly officiating in other positions than their own, are left to perform all regimental duties, as also to take their share of garrison work. In the 25th Native Infantry the second in command is in England, as also the adjutant; the second wing subaltern is in civil employ, and they have two wing subalterns. on probation, which simply means ineffective, and learning their duties. If we turn to the 26th Native Infantry, the commandant, the adjutant, and the quartermaster are in England-three of the most responsible officers in the regiment; the second wing subaltern is officiating adjutant and quartermaster, and they have two subalterns on probation. In the 34th Native Infantry they have three officers in England, and one absent, preforming the duties of Superintendent of native army schools, making four absentees. In the 2nd Bengal Cavalry there are three officers in England, as also in the 5th Bengal Cavalry. In the 9th Bengal Cavalry the second squadron officer is on staff employ, and the third squadron officer and the ad-In the 9th Bengal Cavalry the second squadron jutant are in England, and there are only seven officers absolutely posted to the regiment. three officers in England. In the 18th Bengal Cavalry they have

RAILWAY EXTENSION .- There is some probability that the Western and Eastern Rajputana Railways, the former from Ahmadabad to Ajmir, and the latter from Nimach to Nasirabad, may be commenced without very much further delay. The works were sanctioned in April last by the Secretary of State, who expressed an optnion that "both lines, and the western more especially, will be of very great public utility," and the Government of India, having been recently stirred up by a reminder on the subject from Bombay, state that consideration has been given to the questions of the gauge to be adopted, the agency to be employed for carrying out the work, &c., and "orders on maturity will be issued, and in due course communicated, to the Government of Bombay." It is to be hoped the long expected "maturity" will be soon arrived at, and the works set in progress. The Western line, 298 miles in length, is estimated to cost Rs. 1,84,06,260, and the Eastern line, which is 133 miles long, Rs. 82,48,660. This railway, therefore, from Ahmadabad to Ajmir will soon be begun. It does not run through any part of the districts threatened with famine, and will not, therefore, benefit them; indeed, if the Bombay Government, whose letter to the Government of India is dated in August last, had waited a month or two later, when plarm began to be felt for the southern portion of the Presidency, it is doubtful if the making of the Rajputana Railway would have been so strenuously urged on the Government of India. -Bombay Gazette.

PREPARATIONS AT DELHI.

One of the busiest scenes about Delhi just now is the main street of the Viceregal camp. The road from the foot of the ridge below the flagstaff tower on the cantonment side as far as the old military cemetery is all to be levelled for forty yards on either side and laid down with turf; all trees that encroach within the limits are being cut down, and a vista will be opened out towards the ridge. levelling is no easy or inexpensive task on account of the roughness and unevenness of the ground. Thousands of coolies find employment there. The great difficulty will be to keep the grass green. Tanks have been built at convenient distances apart, and the portions that have already been turfed are kept constantly watered and rolled. The effect from the top of the ridge looking down on the broad expanse of green lawn, with a red road running down the centre and flanked by the white tents, will strike the eye at once as a fair scene to look upon. The camps of the different heads of provinces have now all been marked out, but no tents have been pitched as yet. Great will be the rivalry between the officers in charge of the different provincial camps to make their respective camps more beautiful than that of their neighbours. The demand for flowers and shrubs will be enormous. Delhi, though famed for its numerous and well-kept gardens, will not be able by a long way to supply what are required. Saharunpore, Agra, and Lucknow have all been indented upon; indeed, it is said, with what truth I know not, flowers are to be sent from Madras and Bombay. The first in the field to make preparations was Captain Gordon, the Duke of Buckingham's aide-de-camp; he has been here nearly a month purchasing camp necessaries. From all one sees in the papers we may expect his Grace of Buckingham's camp, &c., to be very gorgeous Captain Frith has arrived to make ready for Him of Bengal. Captain William of Sees. Paradag will be have before large and Captain tain Wodehouse from Bombay will be here before long, and Captain Hallett from the Central Provinces. Houses don't appear to be much fancied at present, from all I can hear. Only two or three have been taken. Nearly all the chiefs have determined to stick to their tents, as they are obliged to send their camps up anyhow. prices will have to come down if the owners of empty houses hope to find tenants. The tradespeople do not seem to be as anxious as they were before to secure houses at ruinous rates, for they found such a crowd here that the profits made did not cover the expenses they had to incur. The demand for carriages and horses is very great. Messrs. Wuli Mahomed ask the small sum of one thousand rupees for a barouche and pair for the fortnight, and the cheapest thing to be got is a Victoria phaeton and two rather measly galloways for thirty rupees a day, and of these even there are very few to be had. I would strongly advise any one coming to bring his own turn-out, or if he has not got one, to purchase, for he will find it very difficult to suit himself at Delhi with anything respectable. I don't suppose that the gentleman who through the medium of your advertisement columns offered one hundred and fifty rupees for a good carriage and pair for the Imperial Assemblage ever got any acceptance of his offer. Those who would be contented with one of those little tongas with a pair of ponies that run upon the Simla road might be able to fit themselves out cheaply, for a number are coming down on hire. They are not ornamental convey-ances, but would be found most useful means of locomotion.—Delhi Correspondent of the Pioneer.

THE BAKARGANJ FLOODS.

We give the following statement of Dina Nath Sarkar, Christian, Sub-Inspector of Station Daulatkhan, dated the 3rd November, 1876:—

I was present at the station on the night of the 31st October when the storm commenced. On the evening it commenced to blow from the east; at about 10 p.m. it began to blow with great force from the north-east. The station-house was then blown down. I took shelter behind the lock-up, where I gathered some of the prisoners who were there together before me, surrounded with a few constables. At about 11 p.m. a small house belonging to a mooktar caught fire. Our attention was directed in that quarter, when we suddenly found that water was gradually rising under our feet. Then suddenly we saw the water rushing towards us between the space of the lock-up and the thana guard-house. When we saw this we lost all hope. I told all the men to try and save themselves, for the water in this interval had risen up to our waist. I attempted to go on the top of the roof of the guard-house, but was unable to go there on account of the great rush of water, and I was drifted away by the stream inside the jail, from whence with great difficulty some of us scrambled up on top of the prisoners' work-shed. The space between the lock-up and guard-room was about three or four cubits, but such was the force of the water there that although three or four of us joined hands and attempted to force ourselves onwards to the guard-house, yet with all our strength we could not do so, but were drifted down. The water began even to rise up to the work-shed roof, where we had perched ourselves. It rose so rapidly that the roof was carried along by the stream. We were about six or seven of us, who held on to the roof, which was even carried over some trees. The storm-waves were which was even carried over some trees. It came with great force and took away parts something dreadful. of the roof into different directions, when we all were thrown into the water, and got separated. I began to swim, and was drifted away by the force of the rush of the water towards the south, when a half-drowned "Balam" boat came before me, and about two or three persons, amongst whom was a prisoner, who was also swimming, laid hold of it. Just as we had scrambled up the boat, a thatched roof belonging to some houses was drifted against the boat with great force by the storm-wave. It struck several of us. The boat in the meanwhile began to sink, and we all had to take to the water and were drifted away, each in different directions. I found a large "madar" tree floating before me, and laid hold of it. This was drifted into a garden, full of mango, cocoanut, and betelnut trees. I was, however, obliged to relinquish my hold, as the madar tree was full of thorns, and each time that it rose with the waves and brushed against my knees the thorns pricked my sides, hands, and feet. After I let go the madar tree I was drifted inside the garden, where I held the branch of a broken mango tree, and stuck on to it there, and retained my hold with the greatest difficulty till fair morning. I then sounded the depth of the water with a small bit of bamboo which I found floating near me; the depth was six cubits (nine feet). The water was then rapidly receding. I began to measure every now and then, when at about 8.30 A.M. the depth of the water was three cubits (four and a-half feet), then I got down from the tree. water was then almost up to my neck. I began the I began then to call aloud, to see if there were any other persons situated like me inside the garden. I then saw a Diswallee constable, a young lad, on another tree, and there was also another Hindoo on another tree, who began to come towards me and joined me. We heard another man calling out in another direction. Afterwards we found the man to be Govinda Das, head constable. We then saw a Mohammedan perched on the thatched roof of a house, and he pointed us the road towards the thana, for we had no idea as to what part of the island we had been drifted. We then came as to what part of the island we had been drifted. We then came on towards the thana. All of us were in a state of nulity, except the Diswallee, who had a small piece of cloth round him. I and Govinda Das found two pieces of cloth floating, and wrapped ourselves up with it. I came to the thana and found the aspects of the place completely changed. The public and private buildings of the place had been completely washed away, only a few parts were found standing here and there. I could not recognise the place. The only sign of the Deputy Magistrate's cutcherry was the flooring, with a few bricks lying here and there. I met the Deputy Magistrate, who told me that four of his sons and two granddaughters had not been heard of. He and his wife were only saved by being drifted into the jungles, where they held on to a thatched roof. The Court sub inspector, Mr. G. Benbow, the moonsif, the post-master, sub registrar, abkari darogah, and Mr. Gasper, a gentleman residing there, have not been heard of. The water rose about twenty cubits (thirty feet). Everything around has been washed away. I believe the calamity to have occurred more or less throughout the jurisdiction of this sub division. Gazeepura, Taltali, Tozumuddi, Barhanuddi must have suffered the same fate as Dowlutkhan. The people towards the east have suffered most. Towards the west it may have been somewhat less; men, women, and children, and cattle have been swept away. Under the circumstances in which I was placed, and from what I saw of those whom I met, I believe that few of the population could have saved themselves. No one expected such a catastrophe, and none were provided with any means of safety. We found a few bags of rice, wet, lying in the open bazaar space, and helped ourselves to a handful each to preserve ourselves from starvation. No one has been able to save anything, and those who are saved must be in an utter state of destitution. The Deputy Magistrate directed me to come on and report the whole of the calamity and the state to which the people were reduced. He will also come up here as soon as he can get a boat. I looked about and found a boat. It was a small boat, which had been sent by Mr. Barton, the Magistrate, with his tents some days before. The boat was very severely handled. I came along to Burrisal with the Magistrate's chuprassee on board and two constables, who had also saved themselves. I arrived here at 1 A.M. to-day.— E. J. BARTON, Officiating Magistrate.

STATION TALK.

Peshawar, Oct. 27.—Cholera, with one or two exceptions, seems to have left the cantonment, but in the district I am told it is raging, particularly in the Doaba. Sub-Lieutenant Harvey, who was one of the last attacked in cantonments, was buried on Wednesday last, after having been ill a fortnight. The Affridis have kept their kind promise to annoy us after the Eed, but have carried it out with very great caution, having selected an isolated hut occupied by the Bandmaster of the 70th Regiment at Cherat, far removed from the many sentries that guard the station. Evidently music hath charms to soothe our savage neighbours, and they are desirous of cultivating their musical talents. In attacking Mr. Uoffel's hut, they wished to carry him off with them, or possibly imagining that he would be considered worth a ransom, they had an eye to a deal in the matter.

Anyhow they treated him to a night attack, killing one of his servants and wounding others. The party is said to have numbered some twenty men. I believe some rumour is going about that the Pass men intend favouring Kohat with a visit, and also to give trouble on the Peshawar road; but judging from the late gallant exploit at Cherat, where they chose the only unguarded spot in the station, I do not think they are likely to do much on the plains. The Commissariat stores at Chupri, at the foot of the Cherat Hill. have been several times threatened during the hot weather with an attack, but in each instance the report has turned out a false all attack, but he can instance the report has stance out a large alarm. The place is well guarded by a detachment of the 27th N.I, so that if the Hussun Kheyls were to be up to any game in that direction they are likely to catch it pretty hot and strong. We are getting but a very dull communencement for our winter season, and I fear that as the troops will most probably remain in camp for another six weeks, it will be some time before the station regains its gay appearance. Both the bands of the European regiments are up at Cherat, and the only music we now have as a badminton accompaniment, is the excellent band of the 7th N. I. And now to close my letter with a story I heard a few days ago; although it may have been circulated before, yet it has such a claim on Exeter-Hall followers that I cannot refrain from giving it to you. An enthusiastic sportsman having for days wandered over a line of country famed for its without success, suddenly one morning beheld something yellow behind a bush. Immediately picturing to himself a royal tiger, he carefully aimed at a spot in the bush behind which he calculated the mighty beast's heart would be. After firing, not a movement of the animal occurred, and the excited sportsman rushing up to, as he thought, the slain tiger, to his dismay found that he had put an end to a wretched old woman with a yellow chuldur. Nearly beside himself with remove, he hastened to the nearest village, and finding out the old lady's relations, presented them with Rs. 400, and returned home to give in his report of the accident. Ever afterwards, it is said, that whenever any schib went out for shikar in that district old women were to be found behind every bush in the place.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

The Runaway Civilian.—The latest news about McMacleane, the young civil servant, who disappeared from Mussoorie a few months ago, and whose subsequent movements became the subject of so much speculation is, that he was seen in Rome on the 1st of October (by a gentleman who had just arrived in Bombay) in bouncing health and spirits, and apparently in affluent circumstances.

GOVERNMENT ECONOMY.—The measures of economy to be carried out in the Educational Department of the North-West include the abolition of Bareilly College—which educated thirty students at a cost of Rs. 30,000 a year—of the Meerut Normal School, and the Normal Schools for Mistresses at Bareilly and Benares. Expenditure on girls' and aided schools will be a good deal reduced.

THE LATE MR. LANGDEN.—We are glad to learn that the tiger which recently killed Mr. Langden, a young Civilian at Nowada, in the Gya district, Bengal, has been looked up and accounted for. The district superintendent of police and two officers of the Opium Department, whose names we have not learnt yet, went after it immediately on hearing of poor Mr. Langden's death, and happily succeeded in killing the brute without any further accident.

Official Changes.—Mr. G. H. M. Batten's return by the last mail will probably not lead to so much rearrangement of appointments as might have been expected. It is understood that Mr. Batten will relieve Mr. Hope from the Secretaryship to the Agricultural Department, in which he is now acting for Mr. Hume, whose leave is likely to be extended. In this way Mr. Halsey will remain in charge of the Salt Department, and Mr. Robertson be left undisturbed among the stamps.—Pioneer.

A New Asylum in Calcutta.—The citizens of Calcutta are

A New ASYLUM IN CALCUTTA.—The citizens of Calcutta are doing credit to themselves by the liberality of their subscriptions to Dr. Woodford's proposition to establish an asylum for the blind. The considerable sum of Rs. 8,000 was subscribed by the first ten names on the list, including, however, those of the Maharajah of Bardwan and Rai Rajendra Malik Bahadur, both ever foremost in promoting works of charity. The total sum required is estimated at a lakh and a half, but the Government, even in these penurious times, can hardly refuse to contribute handsomely to such a noble purpose.

FRONTIER AFFAIRS.—The Indian Public Opinion will have it that the frontier is in a disturbed state:—"May we venture to ask why the officers of the Punjab Frontier Force have been refused privilege leave during the past summer? We are further now able to state that the order for 'the Guides' to attend the 'Empress Darbar' at Delhi has been countermanded. It is not considered safe for them to leave Hoti Murdan during the present excited state of the frontier. Perhaps there is some diplomatic explanation of these facts; but in the absence of any, we are unable to avoid connecting them with the very unsettled condition of affairs on the fontier."

THE LATE CYCLONE.—Calcutta steamers have been rather heavy sufferers by the late cyclone. The Busheer, coming up from Rangoon, got caught in it. The s.s. Penang, bound for Chittagong, has had to return to Calcutta for repairs; her saloon was stove in, and the deck-house smashed by a heavy sea, three of her boats were swept away, the sails blown from the yards, the awnings, chronometers, charts, and books spoiled and lost, the cargo in her afterhold is damaged, though to what extent is not known; the forward collision compartment is full of water, and the head gear is all gone; several of the crew are severely injured. No intelligence has as yet been received of the s.s. Moulmein, overdue from Chittagong, and the s.s. Sind has been sent out in search of her

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.—Sir Frederick Haines is, says a military writer in the Times of India, winning golden opinions as Commander-in-Chief in India. A civilian who came out from England with Sir Frederick a few months ago told me that he was the most soldiery man he had ever seen, and that he was most quiet and unassuming in manner, being in fact one of the old school of military men, urbane and courteous. It is only the lesser lights of the army who give themselves those wonderful airs that amuse the beholder, and the old definition of a field-officer, as "a person with brass spurs, and a high opinion of himself," is only true of a minority. I am sure all who do me the honour to read these notes will allow that few men are more agreeable than officers who know that the world has other interests than those exclusively military.

KILLED BY A TIGER.—The Calcutta Englishman is sorry to hear of the death, from loss of blood from wounds caused by a tiger, of Mr. P. N. Langdon, C.S., Sub-divisional officer of Nawada. A tiger had for some time been committing much mischief in the villages near Nawada, and a number of villagers went to Mr. Langdon's kutcherry, and, telling him that the tiger was not far off, asked for his help. He at once closed his office, and went to the village, accompanied by some native police officers and about a hundred ryots. The tiger was soon found, and, on being fired at, at once sprang upon Mr. Langdon, and wounded him severely. He was able to fire some shots from a pistol, but this only infuriated the beast more, and, by the time the tiger was driven off by the policemen and people, Mr. Langdon was dead. He had only been about two years in the country, and was a very promising young officer.

The Bullion Trade.—Indian exports and imports of gold and silver for the first nine months of the current year are quoted in the Government Gazette. Thirty-three and a half lakhs of gold was the net export; two crores and twelve lakhs the net import of silver. No comparison of these amounts with the corresponding figures for other years is given; but, referring to the miscellaneous statistics compiled by the Revenue Department, it seems that for the year 1874-75 the net import of gold was over £1,800,000, and the net import of silver over £4,600,000. Taking three-quarters of these amounts, and reckoning millions of pounds as crores of rupees, the comparison would come out thus:—Gold, nine months of last year, 1 crore 35 lakhs imported; this year 33½ lakhs exported instead—a very unsatisfactory reversal of the usual operation. Silver, nine months of last year, 3 crores 45 lakhs imported; this year, 2 crores 12 lakhs imported.

LADAKH AND YARKHAND.—The roads and bridges in Durgu and the Shayok Valley have been so severely injured by the late rains that it is expected that some time will elapse ere they will be in a condition suitable for the purposes of travelling. The inconvenience will be felt, but considering the scarcity of labour in this remote country, it is not surprising if some considerable delay do take place in their repairs. An exploration of the Zanskar route is to be undertaken by the Engineer very shortly, but before he finishes his task snow will have fallen, and thus his progress will be rendered difficult. Mr. Dalgleish, the Agent of the Central Asian Trading Company at Yarkhand, reports that he is doing a good business and is being treated very kindly. Several caravans of goods belonging to his company are on the road to Leh, where Mr. Russell is waiting to receive charge of them, with the view of forwarding them on to India. The terrible scourge, scarcity of food, is now prevailing in Ladakh, and even the few shopkeepers have found themselves unable to meet the demands of the people. During the past year the harvest was altogether a poor one. It is expected that the coming harvest will prove very plentiful.—Public Opinion.

The Coming Assemblage.—The Calcutta Statesman says:—The minutest details of the ceremonies to be observed at the Imperial assemblage of Delhi engross, we are told, the attention of the Viceroy. The Empress is to be proclaimed to the peoples, the nations, and the languages, if not with the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer and all kinds of music, at least with very big trumpets. The chief herald has been selected. We believe Major Barnes of Umballa is the officer; he is understood to be a gentleman of the stature of Goliath. A month ago his friends declared that he stood but six feet three in his boots, but during the last month he has visibly enlarged, and he is now credibly asserted to be little less than seven feet in height. His costume has been settled, after anxious consultation between the Government of India and Sir Bernard Burke. The precise length of this officer's trumpet is still a matter of careful deliberation. Major Barnes will be accompanied by a staff of heralds,—officers in native cavalry regi-

They will all be mounted on coal-black steeds. These details are of such absorbing interest that we feel we have given our readers as much as they can expect all at once. They must wait a little longer for more.

THE SUPPLIES OF GRAIN.-We learn from Kurnool that large supplies of grain come daily into Kurnool for native merchants, but only a quarter of it goes into the market. The present high prices are not due to present deficiency; but are due to the anxiety of merchants to have a reserve in case of a sudden block on the railway, or sudden want of carts.— Madras Mail, Nov. 8.

A LIBERAL RAJAH.—The Rajah of Vencatagherry, who is just now in Madras, and who has already established a Choultry at Royapooram, in which a large number of poor are supported, has, we learn, with his accustomed liberality, made over a piece of land adjoining the Leper Hospital to that institution, to be converted into a park for the patients. When the park is completed it will be a great boon to the unfortunate inmates, as they will then have a suitable place for out-door amusements.

THE SCARCITY.—Whatever the head of the Madras Government may determine about the Delhi Assemblage, it is already settled that Messrs. Ellis and Robinson, its members of Council, must remain at their posts. To say nothing of Mysor, which has its special alministration, there will be grievous scarcity in Cuddapah and Kurnool, whilst absolute famine is spoken of in the large district of Bellary by a man who knows the difference of meaning between famine and want. The extent of failure of the rains in Bellary may be judged by the fact that its average fall is not in excess of twelve inches.—Pioneer, Nov. 11.

THE FAMINE RELIEF AT BELLARY.-Mr. Thornhill, the first member of the Revenue Board, who has been arranging famine relief at Bellary, left on Monday night, with the collector, for a three weeks tour in the western taluqs of the district. The additional sub-collector is superintending relief works in and around the town of Bellary; 44,000 coolies are now employed. The relief works in the Eastern and Southern taluqs are in charge of the sub-collector, the head assistant, and the assistant collectors. The total number of people employed in the district is said to be nearly 70,000.—Madras Mail, Nov. 8.

A SHIP-MASTER DROWNED AT COCHIN.—A very sad accident Scott, of the barque Gift, and Mr. Park, son of the commander of the Olive Branch, were proceeding to the roads in the dubash's boat. In attempting to cross the bar the boat got amongst the breakers, and was capsized. All of them held on to the boat, when a heavy sea struck it, and poor Captain Scott lost his hold and was no more seen; the others were picked up by some fishing-boats, which were attracted by their cries. The body of Captain Scott has not yet been found. Just before he left the shore he had placed his vessel in the hands of Messrs. Peirce, Leslie and Co. to load for London. She is now in command of the chief officer. The Master London. She is now in command of the chief officer. Attendant held an inquiry into the accident.—Cochin Argus.

FAREWELL TO MR. COCKERELL.—Yesterday a large concourse of natives was assembled on the public grounds in front of the Pavilion, to do honour to, and take farewell of, Mr. J. R. Cockerell, the Commissioner, who leaves this in about a week on two years' leave. The grounds were gaily decorated with flags, and all the tribes of the hills were represented, a number of Koters appearing in their fancy dancing costumes, and carrying their instruments of music. Mr. Cockerell arrived at about half-past four o'clock, and he was met and attended to a seat near the Pavilion by crowds of he was met and attended to a seat near the Pavilion by crowds of natives. Arrived there, he was addressed by Mr. Gool Mohamud, Manockjee Row, and others, who thanked him for the interest he had always shown in the welfare of the natives of the district, expressed their regret at his approaching departure, and their good wishes for his future welfare. They then hung round his neck garlands of flowers, sprinkled him with rose water, and offered him sweets and fruits. Mr. Cockerell thanked them and made a short speech in reply, in the course of which he assured them of his pleasure at seeing that all classes of the community had come there and of the continuance of his interest in the future, and saying that and of the continuance of his interest in the future, and saying that the good wishes expressed towards himself gave him great satisfac-tion. He also said that it was gratifying to him to know that during the four years of his residence on the Hills the district had been prosperous. He mentioned the fact that Government having made this their head-quarters for a great portion of the year, considerable advantages had accrued to the trading community, and also to the other residents on the Hills. Mr. Cockerell conversed for some time with the leading native residents, questioning them as to their estates, crops, &c. Then came a series of Koter and Toda dances, the first accompanied by a full orchestra of native instruments. This was kept up for about half an-hour, when Mr. Cockerell took his departure and the crowd dispersed. The whole thing was very creditable indeed to the prime movers in the demonstration. The arrangements were kindly undertaken, at the request of the natives, by Mr. Arathoon, who was assisted by Mr. Gool Mohamed.—Neilgherry Courier, Oct. 30.

DISTRESS IN KARNUL.—The aspect of affairs is daily growing worse. About 20,000 people are engaged on relief works, of whom 10,000 are employed near Karnul town. The supply of grain is not equal to the demand; rice sells at 3½ measures, choloum 5, horse grain not to be had at any price, fodder for cattle sells at sixteen times more than its ordinary value, and is difficult to be procured even at that rate. The coolies employed on the relief works refuse money payments, saying that coin is useless when grain is not available in the bazaars. The Collector has endeavoured to pay them in grain up to yesterday, when the supply fell short of the requirements. Many had consequently to remain supperless, buoyed with the hope of partaking of a full meal on the morrow. I am unable to say how far these expectations will be fulfilled. Surely there is a remedy to prevent such a state of things. There is no denying the fact that starvation is already at the doors of many. The authori-The authorities believe in huge stores of grain being still in the district, but I feel positive when I say that such is not the case, and if it were so, it does not warrant the state of inactivity on the part of the Go vernment in allowing matters to assume anything like the dearth of grain, which is now at starvation point. If the authorities are confident that there are still well-filled granaries, why does not Government supply the Collector with grain, so as to offer the necessary competition to induce the grasping grainmongers of our bazaars to bring forward their stores for sale? Dislike to interfere with free trade is, in my opinion, under existing circumstances, merely a pedantic reverence for doubtful principles of political economy. I tremble to think that at no distant date we are threatened with the scenes which provoked such just indignation against the Government of Bengal relative to its management of Orissa in 1864, if we be treated in a similar manner and left to our own resources. There is yet time for the Government to stretch out a helping hand by sending us grain, but if they delay in doing so I have no hesitation in saying that such inaction is tantamount to sounding the deathknell of thousands between the present date and Christmas-Day. A meeting was lately held here consisting of the principal European and native inhabitants relative to the opening of relief houses. Mr. Latham, Chief Engineer, M.I.C.Co., presided, and Rs. 12,000 were subscribed before the meeting separated. There is not the slightest appearance of rain; the cold weather has begun, and I am glad to be able to say that there is no prevalence of sickness.—Madras Times Correspondent.

THE SCARCITY.

We hear from Gandevi, near Surat, that on the 8th Nov. an event took place which brought the famine in the Deccan vividly before the minds of the inhabitants. The prices for grain of several kinds had already gone up high, but on the day referred to they were actually doubled by the vendors, who positively refused to lower the exorbitant rates they had fixed. The disappointed purchasers most of whom live from day to day on the bazaar purchases—carried their complaint before the Mamlutdar, but that official's interference in the matter only led to the grain dealers declining positively to sell any portion of their stock. This state of things has spread consternation among thousands of people, who flock to the grain market from morning to sundown eager to obtain their necessary supply of cereals for daily consumption, but the grain-dealing fraternity still continue obdurate, sticking to their rates.

SHOLAPUR, Nov. 12.—The Hon. Mr. Rogers came down yesterday to see if there was a famine. The Government have now settled to carry all cattle properly attended free by train to Puna, and give them a day's rest there, and then send them on under their owner's sole charge to graze on the Ghauts. I am authorised to state that Lady Staveley offers to obtain the aid of the Puna ladies towards a women's clothing fund and children's feeding fund. Mr. Rogers kindly subscribed. The little children are now fed under Mrs. Grant's care with milk and rice; the larger children are fed by committees with bread and rice. Strangers and the infirm receive bread every morning. To-day 2,000 received a weekly allowance bread every morning. To-day 2,000 received a weekly allowance of grain; and I have been round to-night with the gentlemen who search out for every urgent case. The man admitted into the Dispensary recovered, his child died. Cholera in the town is increasing; two deaths at the Mills. Passing migration almost stopped. Five new relief works opened, and the Tank clearance here to employ five thousand to be started Governmentally; all organisation working admirably. Mr. Morarjee Goculdass has telegraphed for 100 children for the Bombay mills. It is rumoured that the Nizam is sending back all who will not permanently settle and remain in the Nizam's territory.—Times of India Correspondent. Correspondent.

Hliscellaneous.

ARRIVAL OF H. M.'s TROOP-SHIP "MALABAR."—Her Majesty's Indian Troop-ship Malabar, 4,173 tons, 700 h.p., Captain Edward Kelly, arrived in harbour on Tuesday, Nov. 7, from Portsmouth, which she left on the 1st October, calling at Malta, Port Said and Suez, via the Suez Canal, with 49 officers, 13 ladies and 11 children, 990 men, 72 women, and 71 children. During the voyage there was one birth and one death. The Malabar experienced fine weather, except near Malta, where she encountered a heavy gale.

RELIEF FOR THE TURKISH WOUNDED .- A correspondent informs us that at a numerously attended meeting, held at Baroda on Sunday last, by the Mohammedan section of the community, wherein every sect was well represented, subscriptions to the amount of Rs. 5,000 were collected on the spot in aid of the Turkish sick and wounded, steps being simultaneously taken to memorialise Her Majesty in behalf of Turkey. The meeting was addressed by several influential gentlemen, among whom are mentioned the names of Cazee Shahbudin and Cazee Abdul Hussein.—Times of India, Nov. 13.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRES.—A correspondent, writing from Hyderabad, Deccan, under date the 5th Nov., says:—"A terrible fire broke out here last night about three A.M. near Succa Hoze, in the heart of the city. Twelve shops, owned by different tradesmen, three of whom were Marwarees, have been totally destroyed. The shops being partially constructed of wood, they soon caught fire, and were immediately in a blaze. The cause of this disaster is not known. No life was lost, but owners of property have suffered an enormous loss, which is estimated at between five and ten lacs. There seems to be no remedy for the scarcity now prevailing here. More than one attempt was made to loot the bazaars, but without success. fire resulting in the loss of property valued at Rs. 25,000 is reported by a correspondent to have taken place at the village of Lanowlee on the 8th inst. A sweetmeat man contrived, when engaged in the pursuit of his craft, to set fire to the grass hut which contained his shop, and this apparently trivial accident produced a conflagration which proved destructive to an adjoining range of about a dozen shops, stored with all sorts of merchandise, some of which was of a highly inflammable description. Grain in large quantities was consumed, while a soda-water machine, the property of a Parsee resident, shared the same fate, amidst the din and noise created by the explosion of soda-water bottles. Very great assistance was rendered in good time by Messrs. Swan and Watson, of the station, they have greated as lightly the source of the reliable to the station, they having succeeded in enlisting the services of the railway fire-engine for putting down the flames.—Times of India.

THE RAILWAY VOLUNTEERS.—The non-appearance of the G. I. P. Railway Volunteers at the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi will be due solely to the fact that, at the time fixed for the festivities on that occasion, the traffic on the railway is expected from the famine and other causes to be exceptionally heavy. The Government of India desired the attendance of a full company to represent the regiment, but under the circumstances Colonel LeMesurier very prudently declined the invitation. The Government of Bombay have accordingly informed the Government of India that the G. I. P. Railway Volunteers will not be able to send a company of 60 or 80 strong, as requested, to Delhi.

THE ELPHINSTONE ESTATE.—The Bombay Chamber of Commerce have sent a vigorously expressed memorial to the Secretary of State for India, in reference to the ruinous consequences to the trade of Bombay of the purchase by the Government of India in 1870, at a costof two millions sterling, of the Elphinstone estate, occupying a large part of the foreshore of Bombay harbour. The Port trustees have the management of this estate as well as the affairs of the harbour, and to maintain the annual cost have recourse to the imposition of bunder fees and other charges, which not only injure the trade of the port but interfere with the profits and business of the private wharves. The competition with the owners of these wharves is maintained by the Port trustees with public money, whilst the Port trust is really insolvent.

THE SCARCITY.—The lessons of the Bengal Famine have not been wasted in Bombay. There will be no colossal purchases of grain on Government account to paralyse the operations of private trade, inflate expenditure, and land the authorities in an ignominious necessity of getting rid of the surplus anyhow in the end. Whatever grain may be required by Government for direct distribution will be obtained from contractors in the usual way, and private merchants will find their own interest in keeping the affected districts properly stocked. The only difficulty which confronts this policy is that of living down the distrust which the action of the Bengal Government during the last famine will have planted in the trader's mind. But a very important principle is at stake, and the local Governments will no doubt do their best to prove their sincerity. Pioneer.

KARACHI HARBOUR.—The local paper publishes some "important information" about Karachi harbour, which is as follows:—"The Government of India has decided to take up the Karachi harbour improvements from the Bombay and local Governments. It is intended to place a special working staff who are to blast out all the obstruction to anchorage known as Morris Rock and dredge the west side, then to dredge a channel, fit for twenty-eight feet draught vessels from the Kiamari to the west or Manora anchorage; to open a bridge near Kiamari, to allow the Chinni Creek water to pass out more readily and thus scour the anchorage way better, which at Kiamari is slowly silting up; to extend present groyne some 700 feet further seaward; and finally to form some proper and suitable landing-piers, with train and carriage way running at once into deep water. The works are to be under the superintendence of the superintending engineer, Indus Valley Railway, with whom the plans now taken over from Mr. Price are, having been shown to Mr. Rayne, chief engineer; on his late inspection he ordered suitable plans to be drawn up for submission to Government, including the continuation of the line of tramway down to the steamer sides.

THE SANDHURST REGULATIONS.

The new Royal Warrant, which has altered the system of making first appointments to the army, authorised the Secretary of State for War to issue such regulations as might be necessary for arranging the course of instruction for a Sandhurst cadet. These regulations have now been published, and the public will be able to see precisely what examinations must be passed by young men before they are commissioned as officers and become second lieutenants—the first rank under the new system. be seen from the new regulations issued by the Adjutant-General under a covering General Order that the Royal Military College is maintained for the purpose of affording a special military education to candidates for commissions in the cavalry and infantry, and that every one must go through the Sandhurst course as cadets, with the exception of militial lieutenants and non-commissioned officers recommended for promotion. Sandhurst cadets will censist of (a) successful candidates at the com-Service examinations held twice a year in December and July by the Civil Service Commissioners; (b) graduates in arts at the various universities, and students at the said universities who have passed certain "interim" examinations, who are subject to a competitive examination amongst themselves in the event of there being more candidates than vacancies; (c) cadets styled "Queen's cadets," "honorary Queen's cadets," "Indian cadets," and "Pages of Honour," who do not compete, but morely qualify for Sandhurst. The age of the cadets is the next important point. The competition candidates, and the Queen's cadets, Indian cadets, and Pages competition candidates, and the Queen's cadets, Indian cadets, and Pages of Honour will be taken for Sandhurst between seventeen and twenty, and such candidates must be within the prescribed limits of age on the 1st of January next following the winter examination, and on July 1 for the Midsummer examination. An extension of age is granted to University candidates. Graduates who have taken their B.A. or M.A. will be taken from seventeen to twenty-two, but University students who have only passed the interim examination, such as moderations at Oxford and the previous examination at Cambridge, will not be taken after twenty-one. There is one special extension in favour of those who wish to be commissioned in West India regiments. They will be taken up to the age of twenty-four. The general competitive examinations of the Civil Service Commissioners appear to be conducted on the old plan, and consist of a test as well as a further examination. The candidates are weeded at the test, and the real competition and marking commences with the further The Royal Warrant which authorised the issue of these examination. regulations declares what contributions are to be made for the support of cadets at Sandhurst. Private gentlemen will be required to pay £125 for the year's course, and the others sums for sons of officers in the army and navy vary, according to the rank of the parents, from £80 to £20. Indian cadets pay £20, but Queen's cadets are allowed their education at Sandhurst free of cost. The cadet will receive pay at 3s. a day, but all other nurst free of cost. The caset will receive pay at 3s, a day, but all other necessary expenses, in addition to messing, washing, &c., which cannot be covered by his pay, will be defrayed by parents or guardians. At the end of the Sandhurst course the cadets will be required to pass an examination in the field and on paper, and will, having satisfied, receive commissions, and be gazetted in the order in which they pass out of Sandhurst. The general arrangements for discipline and interior economy are made very much on the plan which has for some time past been in force at the Royal Military Academy at Woulvich in the case of candidates for the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich in the case of candidates for the Royal Artillery and Royal Engineers; but the Academy course of instruction lasts for two years and a half, and candidates for competition are not taken after the age of eighteen.

The new regulations came into force on Friday last.

Consecration of the Bishop of Calcutta. - On Thursday morning the Bishop-designate of Calcutta, Archdeacon Johnson, of Chester, was consecrated in St. Paul's Cathedral previous to his departure for his diocese. The Archbishop of Canterbury presided, and was assisted by the Bishop of London and the Bishops of Winchester Carlisle, Chester, and Rochester, Bishop Claughton, and many of the clergy. The sermon was preached by Dr. Espin, of Chester, from the words "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Referring to the advance in civilisation made in India he pointed to the fact that at the present time there were forty newspapers published in Calcutta, while progress in education was newspapers published in Calcutta, while progress in education was increasing. The superstructure of idolatry was encumbered on every side and any day might collapse. Was is not their duty, then, to see that the only religion substituted was a Christian religion, after the model of the Church Catholic. To such a mission did the finger of God's Providence beckon the new Bishop of Calcutta. He was the second bishop that Chester had given to Calcutta, for Heber, too, was a Chester man.

INDIAN APPEALS BEFORE THE JUDICIAL COMMIT-TEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

ABIDUNNISSA KHATOON V. AMIRUNNISSA KHATOON.—This was an appeal from a decree of the High Court of Judicature in Bengal, affirming a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Dacca. The litigation was a sequel to, and wholly arose out of, a previous suit in which the parties were interested, and which was finally disposed of by the judgment of their Lordships in January, 1865. The question now arising was whether the respondent should have been allowed to maintain the present action while prosecuting the former appeal, or whether she had not by her success in that appeal deprived herself of all locus standi to put in issue the illegitimacy of Wajed Ali, the son of the appellant. Both Courts below had decided against the legitimacy of Wajed Ali, and against their decision and on the points alluded to the appellant now sought the intervention of the Queen in Council. Their Lordships, in the end, affirmed the decisions of the Indian Courts, and dismissed the appeal, with costs.

RAJAH JUGMOHUN SINGH V. DABEE DOLUM AND OTHERS.—This was an appeal from an order and decree of the Officiating Chief Commissioner of Oude, of December 20, 1872. Mr. Doyne and Mr. C. W. Arathoon were counsel for the appellant. The suit was instituted by the respondents against the appellant, who is the Talookdar of Bunsingpur, to obtain a sub-settlement of a certain mouzah or village, according to the provisions of the Oude Settlement Act. The appellant contended that neither the respondents nor their ancestors had even a lease of the village in suit in subordination to either himself or his predecessors, and that they were mere cultivators, and were not otherwise entitled to the sub-settlement. The local tribunal, and afterwards the settlement officer, held that the respondents had failed to satisfy the requirements of the Act, and dismissed their suit, but subsequently the Chief Commissioner, on appeal, found that the respondents had proved all that was necessary, and decreed the sub-settlement of the village to them. Against that decision the present appeal to the Queen in Council was instituted. Their Lordships affirmed the decision of the Chief Commissioner, and dismissed the appeal with costs.

RAM COOMAR COONDOO AND ANOTHER v. CHUNDER CANTO MOOK-ERJEE.—This was an important appeal from a decision of the High Court of Judicature at Calcutta of May 28, 1874, reversing a decree of one of the judges of that Court, sitting in the exercise of original civil jurisdiction. Mr. Doyne was counsel for the appellants; Mr. F. H. Bowring for the respondent. The object of the original suit was to have the respondent made liable for all the losses and damage to which the appellants had been put in an action brought by John M'Queen and his wife against them to recover possession of a piece of land and a house at Howrah, near Calcutta, on the ground that the suit had been instigated and maintained by the respondent and carried on wholly at his expense and with a view to his own benefit. Sir Montague Smith, in giving judgment, and after reviewing the circumstances under which the suit was instituted, said the principle involved in the case was clearly stated by Mr. Justice Williams in "Cotterill v. Jones," namely:—"That it was clear no action would lie for improperly putting the law in motion in the name of a third person unless it was alleged and proved that it was done maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause; but if there were malice and want of reasonable or probable cause, no doubt the action would lie, provided there was also legal damage." In the present case, however, both the Courts below had In the present case, however, both the Courts below had found that neither malice nor the absence of probable cause had been proved, and their Lordships entirely agreed with the Indian Courts on that point. They considered that the respondent was prompted in his course by forming a favourable and sanguine opinion of the title of the M'Queens, and by the hope of a profitable return for his advances. Nor could the suit be said to have been wanting in probable cause. The question whether the law of maintenance and champerty, or any rules analogous to that law as it existed in England, had been introduced into or formed part of the law of India had been for a long period in controversy in the Indian Courts; but the result of the authorities appeared to be that the English laws on that subject were not of force as specific laws in India. Contracts of such a character, however, ought, their lordships thought, in certain circumstances, to be held to be invalid, as against public policy. A fair agreement to supply funds to carry on a suit in consideration of having a share of the property if recovered, ought not to be rearded per se as opposed to public policy, but such agreements ought to be carefully watched, and when they were found to be extortionate or unconscionable, or to have been entered into for improper objects, such as gambling in litigation or injuring or oppressing others by encouraging unrighteous suits in a manuer contrary to public policy, effect ought not to be given to them. The appellants had failed to establish that an action arose to them against the respondent for the losses and costs of the litigation, and there was nothing which gave support to the contention that an independent action against the defendant as being an actor in the suit and having an interest in it would lie. Under all the circumstances, while their Lordships would humbly advise her Majesty to affirm the judgment appealed from, they would make no order as to costs.

Konwar Doorganath Roy v. Ram Chunder Senand others.—
This was an appeal from two decrees of the High Court at Calcutta, reversing a decree in the appellant's favour of the officiating subordinate Judge of Zillah. The original suit was instituted by the appellant, claiming as shebait, or custodian, of an idol to have possession of real property alleged to belong to the idol, and to set aside certain deeds conveying away that property. The first Court gave the appellant a decree for the relief he asked for. The High Court decided that the property was not "dewutter" land, and that the alienation of the property was valid, and that the plaintiff had no right to it. Their Lordships, after hearing the arguments, affirmed the decrees of the High Court, and dismissed the appeal, with costs.

RAJAH VALIN v. RAJAH MUTHA AND OTHERS.—Judgment was given in this case, which occupied nearly two days, on a question whether the right of management and the property of a pagoda in Malabar was alienable or not. The Trade Exchange Pagoda is one of great antiquity, described as "without beginning." It is different from all others, having only a raised floor in the midst of a jungle, upon which the idols stand unprotected, without walls or roof. There is only one festival, which lasts twenty-eight days, and for which temporary sheds are erected annually. The jewels used in the ceremonies are brought from a tower, and returned. Vast numbers of worshippers resort to the place, and the contributions are large. Some of the trustees sold the property to the appellant, but members of the Royal Family claimed the right of management. Two Courts in Madras decided against the alienation of a "religious office," as being contrary to all usage to effect such a sale, and the appellant brought his case before the Judicial Committee. Mr. John D. Mayne argued the case for the appellant, and the other side did not appear before their Lordships. Sir James Colvile gave a lengthened judgment. Their Lordships would advise her Majesty to affirm the decision of the two Courts, and to dismiss the appeal.

Miscellaneons.

Major W. H. Noble, R. A., late British Judge of Weapons and War Material at the Centennial Exhibition of Philadelphia, is under orders to proceed to India on special service.

THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—DOWNING-STREET, Nov. 29.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Theodore Thomas Ford, Esq., to be Senior Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements.—Gazette.

DEATH OF PROFESSOR WEIR.—The death is announced at the age of fifty-four years of the Rev. Duncan H. Weir, D.D., Professor of Oriental Languages in Glasgow University, to which post he was appointed in 1850, as successor to Dr. G. Grey. He was also a member of the Old Testament Revision Company.

Export of Bullion.—The Bokhara sailed on Thursday with £826,702 for the East, of which £23,830 is gold and £802,890 silver, the principal consignments being £320,140 to Bombay, £308,000 to Calcutta, £75,500 to Penang, £49,350 to Shanghai, and £28,350 to Hong Kong.

SIR BARTLE FRERE.—The Queen has been pleased to approve the appointment of the Right Hon. Sir H. Bartle E. Frere, Bart., G.C.S.I., K.C.B., to be Governor of the Cape of Good Hope on the retirement of Sir Henry Barkly, G.C.M.G., whose term of office expires in December. It is expected that Sir Bartle Frere will assume the government of the Cape of Good Hope about the end of February next.

DEATH OF COLONEL BURNSIDE.—The death is announced of Col. Burnside, c.b., at the comparatively early age of forty-nine years. He entered the service as ensign in 1842, served with the 61st Regiment during the Punjab war, was wounded at Delhi; and served with the Connaught Rangers until he was placed on halfpay. He for some time held the post of Chief Instructor of the School of Musketry at Hythe..

Indian Civil Service.—Mr. W. E. Forster, M.P., as Lord Rector of Aberdeen University, presided on the 25th ult. at a meeting of the University Court, at which the recent reduction of the age at which students may be examined for the Indian Civil Service was the principal subject discussed. It was urged that such reduction would prejudicially influence Scottish universities, inasmuch as youths of nineteen cannot get through the curriculum. The right hon, gentleman promised to make representations to the India Office and, if necessary, to raise the question in Parliament.

A CEYLON LOAN.—The Crown Agents for the Colonies, acting under authority of the Secretary of State, announce for subscription a loan for £100,000 Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Debentures for the Colony of Ceylon. The debentures are redeemable in about thirty-nine years from 1882, at which date their redemption begins, and the payment of interest is secured upon the general revenues of the colony, which last year came to over 14,000,000 rupees, or, say, £1,200,000. At present the net liability of the colony in respect of borrowed money, after deducting the value of the sinking fund, is about £330,000, nearly all of which is expected to be paid off by 1883. This money is wanted for the construction of the Colombo Breakwater.

Bills on India.—Athhe opening of the tenders for the India Council drafts at the Bank of England on Wednesday it was found that the whole amount of 35 lacs of rupees (say £350,000) had been taken at an advance of fully $\frac{1}{2}\d\dagger$, as compared with last week, making upwards of $\frac{1}{2}\d\dagger$, per rupee in the course of a fortnight. The amounts allotted were—To Calcutta, £193,000; to Madras, £7,000; and to Bombay, £150,000. Tenders for "bills,' on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 9$\frac{1}{2}\d\dagger$, per rupee receive about 14 per cent.; and on Bombay at that price about 20 per cent. This advance was more than had been expected in some quarters, and the [consequence was an immediate advance in the quotation for silver, though as there was little or none offering the prics was difficult to fix. The market, however, may be looked upon as firm at 54\frac{3}{4}$ to 55d. per oz.

BANKRUPTCY OF AN INDIAN OFFICER.—In the Bankruptcy Court, on Thursday, Dugard John Philip Campbell, who was described as a retired major in the Madras Staff Corps, presented a liquidation petition. He returned his debts at £6,210, with assets £5. At the meetings of creditors reference was made to the fact that the debtor held the office of City Marshal at a salary of £300 per year, and that he was also the recipient of a pension of £212 per year from the East India Company. The accounts did not contain any mention of either the salary or the pension. The creditors rejected one proposal made by the debtor, but a second offer was made, for the payment of a sum of 6d. in the pound to every creditor in January of each year for forty years, and a statutory majority assented. Mr. Registrar Keene said the proposal to pay 6d. in the pound for forty years was too monstrous to be entertained. Application refused.

THE EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY .- The half-yearly general meeting of the shareholders of the above company was held on Nov. 27, at the Guildhall Tavern, Mr. J. F. Leith, Q.C., M.P., presiding. The report was taken as read. The Chairman, in moving its adoption, said the gross earnings for the half-year had been £139,355, as compared with £138,009 in the corresponding period of 1875, showing an increase of £1,346, arising chiefly from the increase in the merchandise traffic. This increase, however, did not fairly represent the improvement which had occurred with regard to the development and attraction of traffic to the railway. There were certain causes operating against the amount being increased—there was the unproductive mileage run in consequence of the diminished traffic between Calcutta and the up-country stations. They had not had the same quantity of materials as in previous half-years to carry for the State Railway, and, therefore, there was a decrease from the up-The increase had been in the downward traffic, which would have shown better results had not the state of trade prevented their realising the same amount of freights as previously. The net earnings for the past half-year amounted to £60,428, as against £50,094 in the corresponding period of 1875, showing an increase of £101,334. So far, this was a most gratifying result compared with the gross earnings, because a good deal of the increase had been obtained by what was most important—a reduction in the working expenses. The increase in the net earnings was about 20 per cent. Mr. H. H. Berens, a director, seconded the adoption of the report, which was at once carried unanimously. The retiring directors, Mr. Leith and Colonel Sim, and the retiring auditor, Mr. Franklin, were next reelected, and the meeting then separated.

LECTURE ON PERSIA.—Mr. Arthur Arnold delivered a lecture on "Persia" on Monday evening to the members of the Birmingham and Midland Institute before a large and influential audience. After some preliminary remarks, he said it was noteworthy that the conquests of Russia in Central Asia have, so far from adding to the wealth of the empire, become burdensome to the revenue. Arnold gave some interesting particulars of his recent travels from the Caspian Sea to Tehran and Ispahan, and then proceeded to speak of British interests in Persia. From Ispahan, the central city of Persia, it is, he said, far less difficult to ride northwards to the Caspian than southwards to the Persian Gulf. And as it is with travellers so it is with goods. Owing to the easier access from the north, and to the proximity of Russia, her imports are pressing southwards to the exclusion of English manufactures from the markets of Persia. Persia is subject to Russian influence in the north, and to British influence in the south; but English trade is in danger of being beaten back to the coasts of the Persian Gulf by Russia unless some better road is opened for the conveyance of goods to Ispahan. Russia has a great advantage over England in this respect. The north gate of Persia is entirely in her keeping, and the proposal to carry her commerce to the chief towns of Persia by a railway to be constructed with English gold, implied (the lecturer said) either great ignorance of the nature and consequences of the work, or astounding confidence in the unselfish disposition of Englishmen. For English interests it was very desirable to improve the means of communication in the north, and Mr. Arnold, believing that railways would not be profitable in any part of Persia, thought the best scheme was that which proposed to utilise the Karun river.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soit bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss [which cannot fail to fit] forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal discases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhose, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION .- BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. Collis Browns was, undoubtedly, the Inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1\d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accom-

Summary and Revielo.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, November 20; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, November 18; Calcutta, November 17.

FAMINE relief meetings were being held in all the suffering districts of Western India, in order to collect subscriptions for the purchase of grain. The Gaikwar of Baroda, through his Minister, Sir T. Madava Rao, has given Rs. 10,000 towards the relief of those who are suffering from want in Puna and On the 16th November about five thousand of other places. the Puna people waited upon the Governor of Bombay to bring their grievances, on account of the famine, to his notice. Sir P. Wodehouse received their written petition and dismissed them with a promise to consider their hard case. The chief direction of the relief works in the suffering districts has been entrusted to General Kennedy. In Sholapur, where the distress seemed greatest, grain had risen to five seers the rupee, or more than thrice the normal rates. By the last accounts it was beginning to fall. The grain bazaar, writes one correspondent, "literally teems with grain. The shops are banked up to the ceiling with sacks; . . . . and there are rich piles of grain in front. Still the hungry-eyed people pass wistfully by; for the necessary pice are wanting. Ask a dealer, and he will tell you that there are two lakes of grain dealer, and he will tell you that there are two lakes of grain dealer, and he will tell you that there are two lakes of grain dealer, and he will tell you that there are two lakes of grain dealers. sacks in the town—I doubt the figures—but he will add that they are for sale." According to the same writer about 65,000 people were employed on the relief works, and about 6,000 were fed daily.

There are at present writing some 12,000 vagrants in the township. They have, poor wretches, in their dazed state of misery a crass ignorance beyond conception. They have to be searched out, made to work if can be, in any case made to eat. But they have not a pie on them, and not a pound of food; they have fled from their homes as far as they can fly, and if you were to explain to them carefully that this is not a famine but a scarcity I don't believe they have vigour or go enough left in them to express astonishment. For three days last week the burnt-up country side swarmed, as an ant-hill with ants, with people and cattle going aimlessly about, looking only for some heaven-sent grass land or grain pit. Now that has all stopped. The bulk of them have gone elsewhere; the straggers have been detained and made to work or made to eat. The Government are now doing every thing that lies in their power; they are working the life and heart.

ENGLISH men and women, as usual, were foremost in the work of mercy. We read, for instance, of Mrs. Grant and three other ladies, at the door of the Dhud-Khana, or Milk-House, at Sholapur, "battling almost hopelessly against three hundred hungry mothers and hungry children. It was almost impossible to keep order, or to tell off those who were fed until Mr. Grant, who had been showing Mr. Rogers other pitiful sights, came up, and reorganised matters by closing the door on the hungry howling crowd, and after careful selection letting in some fifty at a time." Then the ladies went round, like true sisters of mercy, feeding the little ones with milk, the older ones with rice, and with fresh jowari cakes for some of the hungrier women. Lady Staveley, with the help of her Puna countrywomen, had started a Clothing Fund for the benefit of the ill-clad women and naked children, many of whom had to sleep out in the cold night air.

THE suffering people in Bombay seem to have hitherto resisted the natural temptation of starving and penniless men to rise against the grain-sellers, who appear to thrive upon their distress; but at Nagpur, in the Central Provinces, and in some parts of Southern India, the sufferers have been less patient, plundering the grain-bazaars and laying violent hands on baniyas and brokers.

WE learn from the Pioneer that the pacification of Khelat has been so successfully managed by Major Sandeman that signs of trust in its continuance are manifest on all sides. "It is quite refreshing, says a traveller recently returned from visiting the Khan's dominions, to notice how a general belief in the duration of the present peace is shown by the extensive cultivation going on, the rebuilding of villages, and so forth. The Viceroy's letters, of which Colonel Colley was the bearer, were delivered to the Khan by Major Sandeman, who will eventually come with him to Delhi. The most rebellious of his Sirdars are now on friendly terms with him, and will accompany him to the Assemblage—a happy family."

When the mail left Calcutta people there were only beginning to realise the full extent of havoc caused by the great cyclone of Oct. 31. The loss of life was gradually rising from 20,000 to 80,000, and at last to 120,000—still far below the estimate since reported by telegraph. Sir R. Temple, after visiting Noakhali, on the 7th Nov., proceeded to Hattia Island and Dakhin Shabazpur. From Daulat Khan, which he left on the 10th, he made for some villages down the rivers Hilsha and Jitulia, where great destruction of life and property had occurred from the cyclone, ran down to the sea face of the Jitulia river, returning to Barisal, the capital of Bakarganj. It was his Honour's intention to leave Barisal on the 13th and make his way by Khulna and the Gorai river to Kushtia.

THE Viceroy reached Palampur on the 7th November, the Rajahs and planters escorting him into the station, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. On the next day, after hearing a deputation of planters who asked for certain improved facilities for cashing currency notes, Lord Lytton promised to do his best for a body of men who had done so much for India, and deserved exceptional treatment in return. There was a Darbar afterwards for the reception of the Hill Rajahs.

THE Akhund of Swat is said to be dying fast. His eldest son had tried to see him, but failed, the Akhund having a marked preference for his younger son. A fight for the succession is expected to follow the old man's death.

A COMMITTEE, of which the Hon. C. A. Turner is President, and Messrs. Bazett Colvin, Crosthwaite and Rawlins, Members, is appointed to make a further examination of certain schemes for the benefit of junior civilians.

In seeming answer to the challenge of Anglo-Indian opinion touching their treatment of Colonel John Macdonald, the Indian Government have published in the Gazette their reasons for the sentence passed on him, in the form of a letter from the acting Secretary for Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce to the Surveyor General. Mr. Hope begins with "a brief review of the facts" in this "painful case." It appears that a notice in the Pioneer of a work partly written by Colonel Thuillier was shortly followed by a letter in the same newspaper, signed "J. M.," the initials of Lieutenant-Colonel Macdonald, which condemned the Manual in question as "utterly useless as regards the professional work of the present day." The critic added that the work "ought to be revised and corrected by a competent professional officer in order to render it worthy of the Government with whose sanction it has appeared," and that "with much valuable matter it also contains much which we flatter when we call it only useless and rejected rubbish." Such language, if uncomplimentary, could hardly be deemed worthy of official rebuke. Soon afterwards two articles appeared in the Friend of India. The first of these ended with "a sneer at the professional qualifications of the Head" of the Survey Department. This, too, it seems, would not have called for remark, had it not been closely followed by a second article, in which the Head of the Survey Department is accused of "abominable carelessness," of a "cynical indifference to truthful work," of "cowardly sin and robbery of the dead," and of "dishonesty of purpose," for which it is intimated that "castigation will be inflicted at regular intervals as it is on habitual criminals until the cause is removed." More might be quoted of an equally offensive nature, and the article concludes with another covert sneer at the Head of the Department.

An inquiry into the authorship of this very personal and offensive tirade brought out from the offender an acknow-ledgment of the fact. At the same time he pleaded that the articles in question were a literary critique upon a work "publicly sold," and that he "consulted no official record in writing them." He added that if the Government of India thought he had made an unjustifiable attack on Colonel Thuillier, or his book, "which he treated as public property," he could only express his unqualified regret. His sole anxiety was that his "knowledge of the practical working of the Department should be brought plainly into view;" and he begged that "in the interests of the Department," quite as much as in his "own support," he might be called upon "to make distinct and categorical statements on the subject-matter in the article aforesaid." "In other words"—says the Government scribe -"instead of confining himself to an expression of regret, he prays the Government to allow him to come forward as the official accuser of the Head of his own Department in regard to certain alleged inaccuracies in the work of the Department, the nature of which is most obscurely specified, and which he has already made the text of a violent attack upon his official superior in the public Press.'

From this it would seem that a public servant who seeks permission to specify the grounds of his complaint against his departmental chief merely aggravates his original offence. To this view, at any rate, the Viceroy in Council explicitly commits himself in the following paragraph:—

The Governor-General in Council views Lieut. Col. Macdonald's conduct in this matter with grave displeasure. In making use of the press as a secret engine to criticise a work published by his official superior on a subject immediately connected with his official duties, and to attack in the language of virulent abuse the acts of that superior, besides disparaging his general fitness for the administration of the department, Lieut.-Col. Macdonald has violated every principle of official duty and loyalty, and has transgressed the express orders of the Government regarding the connection of public officers with the press. His offence is aggravated by the course which he took when called up to state whether he had had any connection with the articles referred to, in attempting to conceal the truth until it was forced from him by a question which it was impossible for him to leave unanswered, and is in no way mitigated, but on the contrary is enhanced, by his offer to substantiate accusations, which, if made at all, ought to have been made before, instead of after, his appeal to the public. His assertion that he has only written a fair literary critique on a published work is, to say nothing of the language of that critique, not reconcilable with the fact that he kept the authorship of it secret as long as he could do so. The Governor-General in Council cannot pass over, without very severe notice, conduct on the part of a public officer so disloyal, so inconsistent with efficial decorum, and so utterly subversive of departmental discipline.

These remarks are altogether unfair to Colonel Macdonald. In the first place, he had as much right as any one else to make use of the press as a channel for criticising a work written unofficially for general use. That he exceeded the bounds of fair criticism has nothing to do with the question of his official duty. In the second place, his "attempting to conceal the truth until it was forced from him" amounted simply to an observance of the usual forms in such cases. "The editor of the Friend of India"—he had said in reply to Colonel Thuillier—"is alone in a position to answer inquiries regarding the authorship of the article referred to." In the third place, it is unfair to accuse him of enhancing his offence by an offer to substantiate charges which "ought to have been made before, instead of after, his appeal to the public." The Indian Government overlook the fact of which it could hardly be unaware, that Colonel Macdonald only turned to the Press after the failure of his efforts to obtain an official hearing of the matters in dispute. Nor does the injustice stop even here, if it be true, as positively stated in the Indian papers, that Colonel Thuillier himself, when inquiring into the authorship of the obnoxious articles, had avowed his desire to give the author ample opportunity for justifying his statements. Why, then, should Colonel Macdonald, however blameworthy in some respects, have fresh blame heaped upon his head for demanding a fair inquiry into the truth of all that he had written? On the whole, we think the Government's reasons for punishing Colonel Macdonald with suspension from duty and loss of departmental rank had better been left untold.

THE development of India's industrial resources for the special benefit of the public services, and the ultimate gain of the country at large, is a work to which the Indian Government has fairly committed itself of late years. Some time ago it issued orders extending the use of Indian stationery, army clothing, tea, and hill beer—articles which are now pro-curable in India at less cost, and with greater despatch than from England. From a recent issue of the Gazette of India we learn that the system will be applied to materials required for the construction and maintenance of railways throughout the country. The Supreme Government have announced that 40 per cent. of the entire cost of constructing and fully stocking the State Railways consists of expenditure in the purchase of various stores not at present procurable in India. In the expectation that "much benefit will be derived from the exercise of intelligence and discrimination of officers in the P.W. Department in selecting the products of native industry," the use of such manufactures and materials is now strongly urged upon the Public Works authorities. Before many years elapse the production of iron will take its place among the thriving industries of the country, and the Government of India, in anticipation of this achievement, reckon that rails and such like iron work in general use will be readily procurable on the spot. As the superior products needed for the construction of iron bridges may not be so easily obtained there, the officials of the railway branch are to abstain from designing bridges of that material, wherever brick or stone structures may be made to answer the purpose equally well. In pursuance of this policy, the Public Works Secretary enjoins that "the designs of all structures should be decided upon with regard to the possible provision in India of the materials for their construction."

A NOTEWORTHY attempt to give native education a practical turn is reported in the new Administration Report of the Central Provinces. Industrial classes have been established at the normal schools, whence those instructed will afterwards proceed as teachers to village schools. There they will open industrial classes, where the children will be taught all improved modes of work that may be unknown in the villages though known in the towns. The necessity for this has been suggested by the discovery of a marked difference in the manual skill of artisans in the towns and in the villages. Twenty industrial scholarships have been established by way of a beginning.

THE Cotton Department in Bombay report good things of the progress made in the cotton industry during this year. The total area laid under cotton has increased by 178,639 acres, in spite of a decrease of some 40,000 acres in the Native The increased yield is, however, much less in proportion, being only 41,212 cwts of cleaned cotton, out of a total yield of 1,877,696 cwts. Exotic cotton, particularly the acclimatised Indian variety, would seem to be gaining ground at the expense of the indigenous plant, for the returns of the yield of the latter show a decrease of more than fifty thousand cwts. as compared with last year's results. This decrease the exotic plant has made good, leaving the surplus of forty thousand cwts. to which we have already alluded. The extent to which cotton is creeping over the length and breadth of the Bombay Presidency may be guessed at from the fact that it already occupies one-third of all ground fit for the production of cotton and one-tenth of all land capable of any cultivation whatever. The average yield of cleaned cotton would seem to have been 473 pounds for each acre, a result superior to that of the year preceding. This excess, however, of quantity is more than counterbalanced by its inferior quality. of the cotton was stained either by the rain which fell during picking time or from carelessness in gathering, so that leaves and dirt were mixed with the cotton itself. The American cotton was depreciated, when it came to market, by still further carelessness. Its fibre does not separate freely from the seed, and if the gins are not kept in proper order, the seed gets drawn in between the rollers and crushed. exudes stains and rots the thread, and makes it almost useless for spinning purposes. The most significant fact, however, for spinning purposes. in the whole report is that Bombay can use more cotton than she produces. Thus one million and ten thousand bales which she produces. were exported (of which the United Kingdom took little more than one-half), were more than replaced by seven hundred thousand bales imported by railway, and four hundred and thirty thousand by sea. As six new mills are rapidly approaching completion, in addition to the thirty-three already at work, and as cotton is not likely to have escaped unscathed from the present drought in Bombay, a large demand this year may certainly be expected.

Mr. J. Hector, Deputy Secretary of the Bank of Bengal, has resigned the bank's service, and will probably return to England. His retirement, remarks the Pioneer, is "a loss to the bank, as the pamphlets on some questions of haute finance which Mr. Hector has published marked him out as a man of exceptional ability in the treatment of such topics. Clear thinking powers and a strong grasp of principles are qualities not so common that an organisation like that of the Bengal Bank can lose an officer who possesses them without regret."

SIR R. TEMPLE'S review of the Administration of the Salt Department in Bengal during the past year points to the conclusion that the salt trade to other European ports than those of Great Britain is largely increasing. It appears also from last year's entries that the importations of salt into Calcutta were the largest ever made. The total of importations amount to 9,700,310 maunds, against 7,699,599 maunds in 1874-75. The whole of the Chittagong imports were derived from Great Britain, which country also supplied the 7,491,883 maunds received in Calcutta. The importations from France and Italy amounted severally to 151,971 and 432,269 maunds. Both in the duty on imported and on excise or manufactured salt there has been a decrease, amounting in the one case to  $10\frac{1}{2}$  lacs, and in the other to 11 lacs of rupees. Sir Richard Temple, after remarking on this reduced consumption, adds: - "An unusually large supply of salt-411 lacs of maunds, sufficient for more than six months' consumption for the whole of Bengal, remained in stock at the close of the year." In excise salt, or salt manufactured under a licence, the results are unfavourable, showing a great decrease in Puri, which district is represented as suffering from the competition of Ganjam salt, the import of which has been stimulated by the abolition of the frontier customs duty between Orissa and Madras. The influx of Ganjam salt thus threatens to extinguish in time the local manufacture -an event which must tend to injure the manufacturers in the Puri district. The population of Bengal within the salt-law limits is 10,548,039; these at the rate of 10 lbs. per head would consume in a year 1,318,504 maunds. As the total sales ! for consumption in these limits amounted to 1,393,618 maunds, it is inferred that illicit manufacture, if it does exist, is confined within very narrow bounds.

THE concession of furlough pay at the old rate of two shillings for the rupee to those officers who elected the old rules before 1871, has naturally awakened the hopes of those who would have elected the same rules had they been free to do so at the time of their coming home. The following form of petition sufficiently explains their case:—

To the Most Hon. the Marquis of Salisbury, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India.

The Memorial of humbly showeth

1. That your Memorialist entered the and joined the Staff Corps on the 2. That in para. 5 of the order by the Government of India, No. 1,064, 10th November, 1861, published under the authority of the Secretary of State for India, it is laid down that furlough pay shall be "converted at the exchange of two shillings for the rupee."

3. That in Rule 34 of the same order it is laid down that "officers of the Indian Military services will be required generally to notify their intention to accept these rules, or to adhere to those now existing, on the first occasion of their taking furlough or general leave after the publication of this order."

4. That it was ever the intention of your Memorialist to elect these Furlough Rules, as being the most advantageous, but he understood that he could not record his election until he was proceeding on furlough or general leave.

5. That in the despatch from his Grace the Duke of Argyll, republished by the Government of India in G. O. G. I. No. 588, 1st July, 1871, the promise held out in the order of November 1868 was cancelled, and it was laid down that furlough pay should in future be issued at the rate of exchange fixed for the year.

change fixed for the year.

6. That in the order by the Government of India, No. 991, 22nd September, 1876, it is laid down that the Furlough pay of officers who elected the Furlough Rules of 1868 before the 1st July, 1871, will be issued at the rate of two shillings to the runce.

rate of two shillings to the rupee.

7. That had your Memorialist been compelled by ill-health to proceed on furlough before the 1st July, 1871, or had he so proceeded for his own convenience, he would now be entitled to draw pay when on furlough at the rate of two shillings to the rupee.

8. That your Memorialist, therefore, humbly submits that the fact of his remaining in India in the performance of his duty for the last years should not now militate against him, and he prays that he may be allowed the same rate of furlough pay when next proceeding on furlough as will be granted to those officers who for private convenience or from ill-health may have taken furlough between the 1st July, 1868, and the 1st July, 1871.

And your Memorialist as in duty bound will ever pray, &c.

The honour of a seat in the Queen's Privy Council has just been conferred on Sir Henry Montgomery, whose retirement from the Indian Council we lately announced. Such a distinction has been fairly earned by more than fifty years of good service, thirty-three of which were passed in the duties of a Madras Civilian, and the remainder at the India Office. Sir Henry was the last of that band of old Indians who entered the Home Council of India in 1858, on the transfer of India from the Company to the Crown, and he is nearly if not quite the first who has been appointed to the Privy Council in acknowledgment of his purely Indian services. That the honour in this case has been well deserved we readily admit; but we should like to see room made beside the new Councillor for the no less deserving Sir G. Clerk.

A GENERAL meeting of officers interested in the Kirwee Prize Claims was held on Thursday, November 30, at the Charing Cross Hotel, at the instance of the President of the Select Committee. The chair was taken by Colonel Burge. After the half-yearly report of the Select Prize Committee had been read and adopted for circulation among the Prizeclaimants, the following resolutions were all but unanimously passed:—

That this meeting, having heard the statement of the Select Committee, is of opinion that Colonel G. Holmes and Lieutenant-Colonel T. Horan should no longer claim to act as prize agents for the Kirwee booty. That the Select Committee be empowered to adopt legal measures, if necessary, to restrain the India-office, in conjunction with Colonels Holmes and Horan, from winding up the prize accounts until the Select Committee and others have inspected them. That the synopsis submitted to the meeting (exhibiting alleged losses through the laches of the nominal agents of about £200,000, in addition to the loan funds in suspense) be referred to the late paymaster of Sir G. Whitlock's division for examination and report.

After the usual vote of thanks to the Chairman, the meeting adjourned till Tuesday, December 12, at 1 P.M.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, December 9, 1876.

THE DELHI DARBAR.

THE Pioneer states "with confidence" that the outside estimate of the cost of the Delhi Gathering shows it to come within £100,000. "Ten lakhs will see us through it, and not only provide for the ceremonial itself, but meet collateral expenses, which have been incurred in England also. In point of fact, the policy which we have already described as the right one, that of grudging no outlay which may really contribute to the general splendour of the result, while keeping wanton extravagance within bounds, seems to be precisely that which the Government has been following."

From the Times itself we learn that the "Imperial Assemblage" at Delhi will not cost the Indian Government "much more than an ordinary Viceregal Darbar, and will cost the Native Princes and Chiefs who may be present even less." The statement that the Princes and Chiefs are dissatisfied on account of the expense to which they will be put is declared by the same authority to be "entirely untrue, the fact being that the Government has had to represent to them the wisdom of strictly limiting their expenditure on the occasion. The Government has, indeed, been most careful to avoid putting the Princes and Chiefs to unnecessary cost and trouble." So much we can well believe; but it would be contrary to all experience to predict that the Native Princes will not vie with each other in all kinds of extravagance prompted by such an occasion. It may be true that the Darbar which will be held at Delhi on New Year's Day has been ruled not to be a Darbar, but an "Assemblage," expressly to save the Native Princes and Chiefs the cost of presenting the usual tributary "Nazars" to the British Viceroy. But the Nazar is not the costliest part of such a pageant, and we are told of elephant processions, each of which will probably cost as much as all the arrangements of the last Lord Mayor's Show. No doubt the Princes will begrudge no expense to do honour to the Empress whom they have always acknowledged as such. It is easy to be generous with other people's money, and if the Princes should prove to be out of pocket through the loyalty which cloaks or stimulates their love of display, they will know how to recoup themselves by screwing more money out of their patient subjects. "Quicquid delirant reges, plectuntur Achivi." It is the people of the Native States who have to smart for the extravagance of their rulers. There is a fine Machiavellian flavour about these pageants, which ill-wishers to the Government are sure to detect.

One great difficulty in the arrangements of a grand Darbar Lord Lytton will have dealt with in a manner worthy of a skilled diplomatist. Squabbles about precedence among native Princes have always marred the completeness of such displays. In 1871 Jodhpur sulked in his tent rather than take the place assigned him among his brother Chiefs. Three years later the Rajput Princes refused to sit beside their lower-bred rivals of the Punjab in the Delhi Darbar, and last year Udaipur remained standing before the Prince of Wales rather than sit below Baroda. This time however "the Imperial Assemblage" will be held in the open plain outside Delhi. The Viceroy's throne—says the Times—" will be placed on a dais, and the Feudatory Princes will all face him, in groups, on separate platforms, according to the provinces to which they belong." The reason alleged for this arrangement is that Indian Princes belonging to the same province never fight for precedence among themselves. But one of the very examples above quoted proves the contrary. Jodhpur refused to sit below his brother Rajput, Jaipur. Let us hope however that the chances of disagreement will be reduced to the fewest by Lord Lytton's well-meant device for pleasing everybody. Another source of dissension and bad blood will remain open in the salutes allotted to the different Chiefs. Why should Kashmir, for instance, have his salute raised to twenty-one guns, while Sindia and Holkar will have nineteen as before, and Udaipur, the oldest of Indian Princes, must be content with seventeen? Here at the very outset of the Darbar is a new incentive to princely grumbling and outbursts of wounded pride. It will be strange if none of the invited Chiefs should fail to fire up at the favour granted to some more fortunate but probably not more deserving rival.

The programme of the Darbar itself is thus outlined by the

Each chief will proceed from his camp to the platform assigned to him, in a separate elephant procession. There will, in this way, be 100 elephant processions; and when all have been assembled the Viceroy and Governors and Lieutenant-Governors of India, and all the other high officials entitled to accompany him, will proceed in a similar manner to take their places on the central dais. Behind the viceroy will be the array of the assembled troops. When all have taken their places, the Proclamation will be read, and the Royal Standard of England unfurled, to an Imperial salute of 101 guns, the whole body of troops presenting arms, and the bands playing "God Save the Queen." At the same time the Queen will be proclaimed Empress in every civil station and camp, and an Imperial salute will be fired from every fort and battery in India. The Viceroy will next deliver to each of the Chiefs at Delhi the special presents which have been sent to them from the Queen. It is anticipated that there will also be a general distribution of the Star of India on the occasion, to Europeans as well as Natives, to those absent as well as present, and not only to distinguished civil and military and political officers, but to selected representatives of all classes, who have served by their labours and their influence to build up and consolidate the fabric and extend the authority of the British Government in India.

After the "Assemblage" we come to the proposed memorials of that great solemnity. The Indian Civil Service has subscribed for a picture of the pageant, to be painted by Mr. Val. Prinsep. A general subscription is also advertised for a statue of the Queen to be set up on the plain of the Assembly, on a column of marble dug from the quarries of Rajputana. The sculptures on the pedestal are to represent the gradual regeneration of India under English rule; the suppression of Thuggee and dacoity, of infanticide, widow burning, human sacrifices, and slavery; the introduction of railways, the electric telegraph, and the printing press; and the spread of education, learning, and science—the first-fruits of a rule which, from small beginnings, now overshadows the whole Peninsula. Around this statue, on the spot where each group of princes will sit before the Viceroy on New Year's Day, they will probably desire to erect some lasting memorial of the position occupied by each of them, and thus-to quote from the Times-"a sort of forum, with its basilicas and column, will be added to the architectural glories of Delhi, where, barely more than two hundred years ago, at the very height of the Moghal power, the magnificent buildings which shed a lustre over the reign of Shah Jahan were beheld in their foundations and daily up-building by a few adventurous Englishmen, the first of their race who penetrated India."

WOODLAND.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Nevertheless, the conflict with the river itself, and with the desert which, on the banks of the Euphrates, as on those of the Nile and the Indus, is ever threatening to invade the cultivated lands, the necessity of irrigation, the inconstancy of the seasons, keep forethought alive and give birth to the useful arts and to the sciences of observation.—Page 269 of Guyot's "The Earth and Man."

SIR,—The Blue-book on India would be a more satisfactory document if the compilers were a little more explicit in their statements. I ask any unprejudiced man to read pages 40 to 43 of the new Blue-book, and then to state whether he has any intelligible idea of the state of the forests in India. It would be much better to have an annual tabular statement giving some reliable information.

We have all been reading of the scarcity and terrible want of water in the district of Sholapoor, and we are informed by travellers that ten miles east of Poona the country appears to be bare of wood. There was some reason for this when constant wars between the Beejapoor and Ahmednuggur sovereigns wasted the country, when the succeeding Moghul Government showed an utter indifference to the preservation of woods, and afterwards when the Mahrattas caused devastation wherever they went. But after 58 years of British rule how is it that the country is bare of trees, notwithstanding that it has been for twenty years under the care of a grand forest department with nothing else to think of but planting and preserving? In spite of wars under the native government groves flourished around Barsee, 40 miles north of Sholapoor, and we know that the country south of Pundhurpoor was formerly well wooded and watered: the country though high is undulating, and plenty of sheltered spots can be found for plantations.

What is the Forest Department doing? Under its management woods are disappearing instead of increasing, springs are drying up all over the Dekhan, wells and tanks have silted up, and the soil is washed off the steep slopes of hills and mountains. (See your Paper of 27th ult.)

In the Sholapoor District great quantities of good cotton are successfully grown. The peasantry therefore have probably saved money and can tide over the present failure of the crops. But what are they to do for water? What are they to do for manure? What are they to do for firewood? If Government thinks that the expense of planting trees would be too great for its resources, why does it not encourage rich Brahmins and other Hindoos to undertake the duty? All Hindoos think it a pious act to plant trees; with proper encouragement the face of the country would speedily become changed.

The encouragement which is most attractive to Hindoos is to free wood-land from the land-tax to the extent of four acres out of every one hundred acres of area. But to free only two per cent in each village would be a great boon. owners of the land freed would undertake all the expenses of new plantations; they would find effectual means of getting rid of rats, with which our officers in the Hydrabad Assigned Districts appear to be unable to cope; and they would agree to keep down the undergrowth of brushwood, which our officers in Berar have neglected to do. The Forest Department in Berar appears to satisfy itself with writing; with reporting that the climate of the Berar reserves is getting more unhealthy every year, and that fever and dysentery are particularly rife at the end of the rains. What else could it expect? Every one who knows anything of Central India is aware that plantations must be kept clear of underwood; copses in India breed malaria.

I have been glad to read your articles of the 12th October and 27th ult., and to learn that the Bombay Gazette is publishing the necessity which exists for having some woodland in the Sholapoor District. Woods are also required in the Eastern part of the Nassick District, and in the country around Kaludgi, South of the Khrishna River. If Indian newspapers would specify those parts of India where trees are essential to prosperity, you and others in England would soon be able to force Government to exert itself to supply the want. Action is required; the writing of long reports, which repose in pigeou holes, and of unmeaning phrases which disfigure Blue books, only serves to delude the English public into the belief that something is being done.

I need not add to your quotation from the Bombay Gezette on the effect of woods in preserving a supply of water in springs, streams, and rivers, and in preventing a country from suffering from the extremes of heat and cold; but I would urge that the peasantry of India require some sort of fuel for the purpose of cooking their food; we have little idea how many thousands of deaths from dysentery are caused by the want of fuel to make the native's simple diet wholesome. Hundreds of thousands have no opportunity of obtaining wood with which to cook their food; they substitute dried cow dung; but when the price of cow dung rises, what are they to do? And it must be remembered that cow dung taken for fuel is loss to the land for the purpose of manure; woods not only furnish rich leaf manure, but also supply firewood, and thus enable the farmer to utilise cow dung for fertilising his fields.

On the 16th of October last year I pleaded the cause of the poor district of Bellary; the chief station is 270 miles North-West of Madras, and is situated on high table-land 1,600 feet above the sea. The climate is characterised by great aridity, and less rain falls in Bellary on an average than in any other place in Southern India. About 15 miles to the South-East of it, on the right bank of the Hugri river, the traveller can witness the encroachment which the sands are making upon the once fertile fields. Again I beg my countrymen to force the Government to encourage tree-planting in this neglected district.

Two years ago the Government lamented that so little had been done in the Madras Presidency for Forest conservancy (see pages 97 to 99 of the Blue-book). Last year it contented itself with a single sentence, announcing that it had made a working profit of £15,205. This year the Madras Presidency has been altogether dropped out of sight.

The illegalities practised by native subordinates in the Forest Department in Oudh have for many years past been brought to the notice of the Chief Commissioner. I am glad that the Pioneer of Allahabad has taken up the subject, and that in your Paper of the 12th of October last you have given the people of England an opportunity of discussing the causes of the mis-management of the Forest Department.—Your obedient servant, Dec. 4.

Spirit of the Indian

COLONEL MACDONALD'S SUSPENSION.

The Times of India cannot acquit Colonel Macdonald of a real breach of departmental etiquette. It is clear that personal and official jealousies and misunderstandings, of which we are very insufficiently informed, existed between the chief of the Survey Department and other members of the service.—The Statesman not only calls in question Colonel Thuillier's scientific fitness for his post, but insinuates that his personal bearing towards his official subordinates is marked by insincerity and ill-will. We should like to believe that these charges were untrue or exaggerated, but we can hardly be mistaken in seeing in them an indication that the feelings between Colonel Thuillier and his subordinates are not of the most cordial Under such circumstances we think that an individual officer who may see something to condemn in the official acts of his chief ought to be very sure of the complete purity of his own motives before giving expression in any shape to his opinions. If he has called attention to neglect and irregularity in the department without success, it will be held by some persons that he is fully justified in directing public attention to it in the newspapers. We cannot say that we wholly share this opinion. It seems to us that a clear line must be drawn between the general policy of a department, or Government, and the acts of individual officers. We should not, for example, condemn an officer of the Revenue Survey for writing against the policy of enhancements of the land-tax, and explaining at length the errors of such a policy, although he might be aware that his opinions were in complete opposition to the heads of his department. It is of immense importance that the Indian Government and all the local Governments should see every question that is brought before them in as many lights as possible; and the comments which appear in the newspapers, when founded on exact knowledge, have certainly been frequently of the greatest advantage to Government, in bringing before it important considerations, which purely official reports might have undervalued or passed over. But a direct and vehement attack on the capacity of the head of a department, or on particular acts of his, by one of his own subordinates is clearly incompatible with departmental efficiency and discipline. The only proper course for an officer to take, if he finds that the head of his department refuses to hear him, and simply puts aside all the evidence which is laid before him of disorders and abuses in the department, is to bring the whole case before the Government.

Digitized by GOGIC

some cases, when the matter is one of great public interest, an officer would speak with higher authority if he first resigned his place in the department, for he would thus give a pledge that in attacking the acts of his superiors he was influenced by no other than public motives, and was prepared to pay the penalty of forfeiting his position and prospects, if the truth of his charges was not established. The general orders of Government in relation to the connection of its servants with the Press seem to us in harmony with the distinction on which we have been insisting.

THE DELHI DARBAR.

The Englishman thinks that whatever may be the importance of any addition to the titles of the Crown as regards England and the English constitution there can be no doubt that, as regards India, the question is much simpler, and of much less significance. Whether, therefore, as regards its importance, or as a subject for rejoicing, the advocates of great display run the risk of creating a very unfavourable reaction—a feeling of contempt for the exag-gerated proportions which this commemoration is about to assume, and well-founded indignation at the immense expense about to be incurred. The Government of India is evidently bent on this folly to the "bitter end." Debt may increase, discontent arise, silver fall, and a famine threaten; but the Government of India, heedless of all these darkening signs, reckless as to the cost, goes on its way rejoicing. If we are to judge by the accounts received, just at the time that the Governor-General and his guests are in the full swing of the Delhi festivities, of this costly commemoration and rejoicing, regardless of expense, the gaunt hand of famine will be tightening its terrible grasp on a wide extent of country inhabited by millions of our poorest fellow-subjects. We do not wonder at the or our porest relow-subjects. We do not wonter at the irritation of our contemporary at the bad luck of the Government of India in being exposed to the annoyance of having its pleasures marred, and its rejoicing by order troubled by the sad accounts of suffering ryots. Throughout the whole tenour of this unscrupulous advocacy there is evidently an uneasy feeling that this is not a time for holiday-making, Even if the mances of India were in a much better state than they are, and if no famine threatened, we should still oppose the lavish expenditure contemplated, as unwise and unnecessary. Lord Lytton is a poet, and gifted with a poet's imagination; if he has that gift in its highest sense, and the warm sympathies which generally accompany it, he will realise the sad contrast between real distress and unreal rejoicing, the discreditable anomaly between reckless extravagance in one direction and petty economy in another. We must not allow ourselves to be blinded to the real aspect of this subject not allow ourselves to be binded to the real aspect of this subject by the bombastic phraseology of interested advocates. Before the Darbar is over, we expect to hear a great deal of such stuff as that the Darbar is a "great ceremonial fact," the "climax of a century." We shudder as we think of the amount of "tall talk" and Special Correspondent gush that will be written on this occasion. How often will "Imperial splendour," "superb effect," "magnificent" "imposing", and all the other gorgeous adjectives of the pennyahiner vocabulary be brought into requisition? We have been told hiner vocabulary be brought into requisition? We have been told again and again that this assumption of the Imperial title should be signalised in a manner worthy of the occasion. So say we. cannot, however, divorce the time selected from the surrounding circumstances. It may be bad luck that it is so; but it is bad taste, and something much worse, to endeavour to carry out the original programme now. It bodes ill for the commence-ment of the Imperial rule, which was meant to signify England's deep interest in India, and the warm affection of England's Queen, deep interest in India, and the warm affection of England's Queen, if it is to be inaugurated by an act of stupendous selfishness and heartless felly. This Imperial Darbar may please those who, shrinking from the real hard work involved in the Government of India, eagerly enter into the pleasures and pageantry of these great State ceremonials. To invest those with an importance which really does not belong to them, is meant to serve as an excuse for preferring the less important details of Government to the hard problems which task the powers of great administrators, and test the wisdom of statesmen. We have no doubt that Lord Lytton will play his part in the approaching pageant with all the tact, grace, and refinement for which he is distinguished, and will make a most favourable impression on the assembled chiefs. What kind of lesson, however, will they learn as regards the duties and obligations of Government from all these costly festivities, held in the midst of a famine crisis, and in the prospect of a wide-spread famine? A splendid opportunity has been lost of inaugurating the Imperial rule by the renunciation of a costly ceremonial, and the subordination of pomp and display to true economy and wise foresight, which would have served as a bright example to the princes of India, afforded a convincing proof of consideration for our Native fellow-subjects, and have had a stimulating influence on the over-worked and underpaid services of the country.

Grain Riots.—The following is an extract from a private letter from Nagpore, dated 13th Nov.:—"Last night and this morning a lot of people plundered the grain bazaars, and severely handled the grain-dealers and brokers, to whom the present scarcity is attributed. A number of people were arrested by the police for creating the disturbance."

THE MANUFACTURES OF DACCA.

The principal manufactures of the district are weaving, embroidery, gold and silver work, and shell work.

I. Weaving.—This district had once a very flourishing trade in muslins. The far-famed Dacca muslins were once the boast of the East, and were highly prised by English and Parisian dames. Ships loaded with this valuable texture visited almost all the famous marts of the then civilized world. But, unfortunately, this once flourishing trade has now been almost totally annihilated. The manufacture of Dacca muslin, if not totally extinct, is now almost a thing of the past. The following figures, which show the value of cotton goods that passed as exports through the Dacca Custom-house in the different years as noted will at once prove Custom-house in the different years, as noted, will at once, prove the rapid decline of the manufacture now under consideration. In 1817 when the English Commercial Residency was abolished, the value of these goods amounted to £152,467, in 1825 it fell to £62,918, in 1829 to £50,488, and in 1834 to £31,712. From these figures, it is manifest at a glance that during a period of only 17 ears, the so-highly famed muslin trade was reduced at once by a fourth. And since 1835 it has been dwindling almost to nothing, and accordingly the manufacture of muslin, has fallen off proportionately. The finer kinds are not now made save to express order. Dr. Taylor, in his Topography, says "that some 36 different kinds of cloth were manufactured in the district, the bulk of which was made of English twist, country thread being used for the very finest muslins only." The very names given to this texture proclaimed its quality. Muslins were styled "ab-ra-wan" (running water) and "shab-nam" (evening dew). They bore these names owing simply to the fact that they could not have been distinguished from liquid when wet-a test which proves the fine quality of a texture. It was reported some time back that "in the time of Jehangir, a piece of abrawan muslin could be manufactured, 15ft. by 3ft., and weigh only 5 sikkus or 900 grains, the price of which The finest that can be made in the present day (1840) of the above dimensions, weighs about 9 sikkas or 1,600 grains, and is sold for £10." During the close of last year, 3 pieces of muslin were made to the order of Nawab Abdool Gunny, C.S.I., for presentation to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. They measured 20 yds. by 1 yd., and were found to weigh 9\(\frac{1}{2}\) tolas. From this, it will be seen that muslin manufacture has not only declined, but the fine quality of the texture has also greatly deteriorated.

II. Embroidery.—This industry, we regret to observe, has also declined. The Mahomedans of this district chiefly practise this art and carry it to a very high pitch of excellence. They display a dexterity in handling the needle fully equal to that of the Hindoos at the spindle and loom. This trade is now also in the hands of a very few, the work being mostly done to order. Though the demand for fine flowered muslins has almost died away, there is yet a tolerably brisk business in a description of cloth called kasida or cloths flowered with muga or tasar silk. These are exported by cloths flowered with muga or tasar silk. These are exported by Arab merchants to Persia, Egypt, and Turkey, where they are chiefly used as turbans. A few years back, about 20,000 pieces of this cloth were annually worked in Dacca. Flower scrolls, most beautifully wrought, are generally used as patterns in the embroidery of table cloths. Dr. Taylor mentions the following with regard to other branches of embroidery, which are not now generally practised:—"The flowering of muslin dresses is performed by a set of embroidery called charandus, and the embroidering of muslin, scarfs and shawls with silk, by workmen called zardars. The scarfs The scarfs and shawls are imported from Calcutta, and are worked to order, chiefly for transmission to England. In 1839 about a thousand The principal embroiderers are Mussulman were manufactured. women of the lower classes and the wives of washermen, who are glad to devote what spare time they have to earning a little money this way."

III. Gold and Silver Work.—Dacca workmen are famous for their workmanship in gold and silver. They are very expert in all sorts of filigree work. Whether they are equal to those of Ceylon and Bankura remains an open question. If not superior, they are at least equal to them. Our workmen can imitate any pattern, but are not so clever in making a very plain polished surface.

IV. Shell Work.—This branch of industry is carried on to a very great extent in Dacca. About 600 shell-cutters who all reside in one locality, form a very industrious and hard-working community. Shell bracelets are the most beautiful. They are made of several rings beautifully joined together, neatly engraved with different devices, and brilliantly coloured. The shells are brought by vessels from the Maldives, Ceylon, and the Madras coast, where they are purchased by men sent from this town. About a lac of rupees are annually spent by Dacca merchants in the purchase of these shells. They are sold in large quantities in the city, and at all the great annual fairs, and form a favourite ornament of Hindu women.—The East.

SIR STUART HOGG has returned to Calcutta from Madras.

Miscellaneous.

SIR STUART Hogg. -Sir Stuart Hogg's retirement has reminded people that however overbearing he may have been, he has done a great deal for Calcutta; and even his enemies will admit that, in point of energy and efficiency we could hardly have had a better chairman. Englishman's Saturday Evening Journal, Nov. 11.

COLONEL RUNDALL.—Colonel Rundall, R. E., formerly Inspector-General of Irrigation in India, has, we understand, prepared an elaborate scheme of canals for Egypt-nothing being wanted but the money to carry it into effect. Should Colonel Rundall take service with the Khedive, he is, we are told, to receive Indian pay and allowances and a residence at Cairo, -a moderate stipulation enough.-Pioneer.

MEDICAL.—The following eight senior applicants have had pensions allotted to them from the Bengal Medical Retiring Fund from 1st January next:—Deputy Surgeon-General G. Banister, Deputy Surgeon-General J. N. Tresidder, Deputy Surgeon-General C. M. Smith, Surgeon-Major D. Young, Surgeon-Major Sir J. Fayrer, Kt., Retired, Surgeon-Major E. J. Vivian, Retired Surgeon-Major E. McKellar, and Surgeon-Major W. F. B. Dalzel, Retired.

PUNJAB UNIVERSITY.—Mr. Reynolds, barrister-at-law, has been elected Law Lecturer of the Punjab University to the exclusion of Dr. Leitner, the acting Law Lecturer. The former is eminent in his profession, but the latter is a gentleman of a versatile nature. The Indian Public Opinion warmly supports the latter as the most fitted for the post, owing to his linguistic proficiency, but the Indian Public Opinion's advocacy is, of course, accounted for, the paper being Dr. Leitner's.

TRADE WITH CENTRAL ASIA.—We are glad to hear, says the Lahor paper, that Mr. Russell, of the Centrall Asia Trading Company, is doing a good business here, and has succeeded in disposing of a fair amount of his stock at profitable rates. The raw Khotan silk seems to be of excellent quality, and to find a ready market, as well as the other goods brought down by Mr. Russell from Yarkand. We congratulate Mr. Russell and the Company on the success of his enterprise and judgment.

LEGISLATION.—The Bengal Council met on Saturday, Nov. 4, and after Sir R. Temple had made a long speech reviewing the past session, sketching out the proposed work for the present session, and explaining his views on the proposed rent laws, Mr. Bell obtained leave to introduce a Bill to amend the law relating to Ghagtwali tenures, and a Bill to amend the Bengal Act IV. of 1870. Mr. Reynolds obtained leave to introduce a Bill to amend the law relating to rent, a Bill to consolidate the law relating to the Abkari revenue in Bengal, and a Bill to consolidate the laws relating to the · land revenue.

THE SENIOR NATIVE CIVILIAN IN BENGAL. - We understand that Mr. Romesh Chandra Datta, the senior Native Civilian in Bengal, has been appointed to have charge of the Dakhin Shabazpur Subdivision of the Bakargang District. It is a compliment to this gentleman to appoint him at the present time to a position which demands the exercise of much energy and discretion, and we have no doubt that he will acquit himself with credit. Mr. Datta succeeds the unfortunate Deputy-Collector, Babu Umacharn Banerjea, who lost nine members of his family and three servants in the recent cyclone, and escaped himself with the greatest difficulty and much privation.—Englishman, Nov. 15.

THE COMING ASSEMBLAGE.—All the guaranteed Railway Companies, says a Calcutta paper, have consented to charge Government for the conveyance of Volunteers, to and from Delhi, the same rates as are charged for troops and baggage. The proclamation ceremony on New Year's Day will take place, says the Allahabad paper, on the open plain about a mile and a half from the Alipore road, close to the village of Dahirpore—the spot chosen being about four miles from Delhi itself, and half that distance from the Viceroy's camp. The official visitors from Burmah to the Delhi Assemblage will, a contemporary informs us, consist of the Chief and Judicial Commissioner, the three Commissioners, the Chief Engineer, and several Burman officials. But, with all the highest officials absent, who is to be left in charge of the local Government?

THE LATE CYCLONE.—The later news that has been received but too fully confirms the apprehension that had been the effect of the cyclone in Burrisaul and Noakhally. The loss of that at least one-sixth of the population of the Dukhin Shabazpore subdivision has been drowned; and if this estimate is accepted, the number of deaths would amount to nearly 40,900. The last reports, however, state that even this is an under-estimate, and that the total mortality can hardly be less than 70,000 or 80,000. The reports recently received in Calcutta show that the local officers are straining every nerve to meet the emergency, and alleviate the distress. The Commissioner, Mr. Peacock, proceeded to Backergunge as early as possible, and the Lieutenant-Governor was there on Saturday last. Forty-one relief centres have now been established. Additional officers have been deputed to the distressed tracts, steamers have been sent, and rice, salt, medicines, and extra native doctors have been sent from Calcutta. Additional police have also been appointed to repress lawlessness and depredation.—Pioneer, Nov. 18.

THE VICEROY AND THE COMING ASSEMBLAGE.—It is only fair

the public should know—what Lord Lytton would be the last man in India to wish published—that the great expenses of the Viceroy's camp and guests at Delhi will be defrayed out of his private purse. Our least credulous reader may be assisted by this statement to comprehend how it is that the Assemblage will cost the State so much less than has been supposed. Here is another little fact. Rumours, greedily swallowed by some of our contemporaries, declared that Mr. Prinsep had been commissioned to come out and paint a picture of the proclamation scene, and was to receive £10,000 for it out of poor India's money. The truth is that the picture is to be paid for entirely by private subscription, and is to cost £5,000, the sum named by Mr. Prinsep himself. The horse show at one time planned as part of the Delhi programme has been abandoned. We observe from the N.W.P. Gazette that no officer of these provinces will be allowed to have more than three tents in the Lieutenant-Governor's camp. In every direction, indeed, there are signs of watchfulness on the part of Government to prevent needless extravagance.

A NEW COTTON MILL AT INDOR.—(INDOR, Nov. 4.)—This morning his Highness Holkar's eldest son laid the foundation stone of a new cotton mill at Indor, the ceremony of pooja to the new building being performed personally by the young Highness without any fuss or ostentation. On his coming to the site of the new mill he was received by Mr. Broome, the manager, when he at once proceeded, under the tuition of an astrologer and chief priest, to the business for which he came, the ceremony merely consisting of his repeating a few shlokes after a Brahmin, and striking the ground a few times with a pick, over which some muntras had been repeated; after all this ceremony he left. Five lacs have been advanced as the first instalment for the construction of the new building, which is to be on a larger scale than the present one. His Highness Holkar has great contidence in the judgment of Mr. Broome, under whose able and conscientious management the present mill is paying handsomely; and the Rajah intends following Mr. Broome's advice with regard to the construction of the building to the very letter. The weather at Indor is now delightful. A friend of mine described the climate of Indor happily thus: We require no punkas in the hot weather, and no fires in the cold." -Times of India Correspondent.

POOR WHITES IN CALCUTTA.—Alluding to the distressed condition of the European population in Calcutta the Englishman writes:— Beyond all doubt, there ought to be a public meeting to decide on some measures to be taken to remove the scandal of this poor white difficulty from our midst. We hope that there will be such a meeting held shortly, and we would fain hope that it will be largely attended, and that the earnestness and thoroughness of those who are present, and an outcome of active practical helpfulness, may in some measure atone for years of disgraceful apathy. An immense amount of good might be done in this field by men and women with their hearts in the work. Nevertheless, experience only confirms us in our opinion that, owing mainly to the shifting nature of Calcutta society, nothing short of a recognition by Government of its obligations to poor Europeans can avail to meet the difficulty permanently or effectually. And we are more and more convinced that it is as foolish as it is disgraceful for the Government of the country to allow Englishmen, who are honest and industrious, to drift day by day deeper and deeper into ruin,—probably into crime—without making the slightest effort to relieve their distress. At the very time that our Government is indulging in this culpable apathy Australia is offering a premium for just such skilled labour as wholesale dismissals of their employes by the great railway companies have filled the ranks of the poor Whites with. Very little effort would be needed to send these men to Australia, and give them a new start in life, whilst the relief would be sensible. In Australia again, unskilled European labour may have a chance. Ploughmen and farm labourers are in demand, miners get very fairly paid, and industrious, sober men seem generally sure of employment. Besides helping poor Europeans to emigrate, there are, of course, many other ways on which Government might and ought to deal with the distress. We have referred to Australia only as an instance to show how easily the distress might be met if Government would but accept its responsibilities in the matter."

SILK IN MYSOR.

"A. W." writes from Coimbator to the Madras Times:-

Being interested in all native industries, I visited ten years ago the filature of Signor De Vecchi at Kingherry, near Bangalor, where admirable reeling machinery and spacious airy feeding sheds were erected. The quality of silk turned out, compared with the local native produce, was most marked. The enterprise, whether from failure of the worms, or other causes, did not succeed.

The native mode of rearing seems to be very defective. The worms are fed in ill-ventilated huts, and the debris of leaves is not sufficiently often removed. The wonder is that the breed survives, not that it is occasionally devastated by disease; just as cholera is produced, or at least fostered by want of sanitary arrangements.

The whole of one rearing died in April of this year, owing, as I think, to the excessive solar heat, but the native in charge attributed it to a change I made in giving the worms, when large, branches of mulberry to feed on, instead of chopped leaves, which they crawled over and defiled.

I understood from Signor de Vecchi that cool airy sheds, with little variation of temperature, were an essential. How a close native hut could fulfil these conditions may be imagined; but having provided well ventilated rooms, and some worms beginning to die after their fourth fever, the native proceeded to close up the ventilation which I allowed, in order to try his plan. As might be expected, it had no effect in checking, but rather increased, the mortality, which I considered due to the exhaustion of the worms, too long bred in the same locality.

too long bred in the same locality.

I am by no means certain that the climate here is the best suited for the worm; and from its success in climates such as Italy a longer hybernation may be essential to prevent exhaustion. By too frequent breeding the renewal of the seed, however, obtained from other places, prevents this degeneration, and the seed obtained from a distance of 100 miles has succeeded well.

Probably seed imported from Italy would be better than any Indian seed. What came to Coimbatore originally some years ago was obtained from Dharwar, but in course of time the yield grew less, and the worms died.

I do not consider there would be any advantage in sending seed from here to Kangra, as, possibly, better might be got nearer at hand, though I shall be happy to send some to "Mofussilite" on learning his address.

The part of this district where a silk industry has lasted for probably some centuries is the northern taluq of Colligal, which is searated from Mysor by the Cavery River, and once formed part on the Mysore dominions. The elevation is about 1,700 to 2,000 feet above the sea. For several months, March, April, and May, the heat is considerably over 90 degress, and there is not so large a production of silk at that season. Of course the stock has to be kept up, it being a 40 days' one—10 days in the egg, 20 days worm, and 10 days chrysalis or cocoon.

I learn that the mulberry used chiefly here is the common country, or Morus Indica. Another with a large leaf, like that of a plane or sycamore, is designated by the Madras Horticultural Society as Morus Nigra, while the indented one like a vine leaf is Multicultis. The growth is so rapid, that in order to prevent wood and secure leaves, the stems are cut down periodically within a foot of the goound. This secures an unfailing supply of fresh leaf, whereas if the tree grew up, all the under leaves would be excluded from the sun, turn yellow, and drop off. With two acres, watered once a week, I have more leaf than can be used.

Any information regarding the quality of silk to be produced is of great value, and I notice that your correspondent "X. Y. Z." adverts to the benefit of leaving the gum on the silk when reeling it for the home market. Here when spun, and woven for local manufacture, the gum is removed, and after being "thrown" by the silk weavers, the thread is reduced to one-third of the original bulk and weight. Althoughlin this town there are no silk weavers, the cotton weavers prepared a piece of cloth very fairly, which could hardly be distinguished from that sent to Salem and woven by professionals there.

Miscellaneous.

THE N.E. Monsoon.—The Madras Athenaum makes the welcome announcement that the long delayed-monsoon fairly broke on the night of Nov, 10. The rain fell in torrents for a considerable time, and the weather was rough and stormy.

DEATH OF AN OFFICER.—The Madras Times announces the death, at Vellor, of Captain H. White, who held the appointment of quarter-master in the 14th Regiment Native Infantry, which is located at that station.

MR. P. RUTNANELU CHETTY, Madras Civil Service, is expected to-arrive in Madras from England early next month. His departure from England was delayed in order that he might be called to the Bar. He has been absent from Madras three years.—Madras Mail, Nov. 10.

COLONEL DUNCAN.—The Mandalay correspondent of a contemporary thinks that the C.S.I., conferred on Colonel H. T. Duncan, the British Resident, is significant of the fact that the late Grosvenor Mission has been conducted to the satisfaction of the English Government. Everybody at Mandalay is glad that Colonel Duncan has received this honour, and the King, through one of his Ministers, has been most gracious in his congratulations.

Tobacco-Culture.—Good tobacco is being grown in Kunur During the past week we have had a cake of tobacco sent us, says the Neilgherry Courier, from one of the Kunur estates, grown, cured and manufactured on the spot. The sample is a good one, and although of course not quite up to the standard of the same kinds usually offered for sale from the old quarters, it is full of promise for the future.

THE GOVERNOR'S RETURN.— His Grace the Governor of Madras, accompanied by the Ladies Grenville and his Excellency Sir Neville Chamberlain, arrived at Madras on Wednesday, 8th Nov., by special train from Beypur. Many ladies and gentlemen assembled to meet the Ducal party, which proceeded to Government House. A guard of honour of the 67th Regiment and the Governor's body guard paraded at the railway station.

Grain Riots at Karnul.—We have news of serious riots at Karnul, in the Madras Presidency. The starving inhabitants rose and looted the grain bazaars and attacked the police when the latter turned out to protect the grain merchants. The magistrate was dangerously injured; the inspector, forty constables, and several villagers were wounded. A wing of the 21st Native Infantry, under the command of Colonel Douglas, and a strong police force were at once despatched from Bellary to quell the disturbance.

THE ADAM'S BRIDGE PROJECT.—A Colombo contemporary believes that the opinion of Colonel Shaw Stewart, the Consulting Railway Engineer, Madras, in regard to the Duke's project for connecting Ceylon with South India by means of railway is, that the scheme would entail such an enormous outlay as to render it prohibitory. The works, from land to across what is known as Adam's Bridge, would, it is said, involve an expenditure of two million pounds sterling, the total outlay being probably three millions.

DISTRESS IN BANGALOR.—We are told by the Bangalor Eximiner that people in a half-dving state are brought in dhoolies by villagers and are left at the principal gates of the Pettah to shift for themselves; they sometimes crawl into the neighbouring houses for a supply of food. The same paper says that Lieutenant Brindley, of the Commissariat Department, has been directed to select a suitable site, out of Bangalor, where sufficient water may be procured, for the temporary encampment of some of the troops in garrison during the present scarcity of water.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM.—His Grace the Governor may be interested to hear that the natives in town are associating the welcome fall of rain last night with his Grace's return to Madras yesterday. "The Governor brought rain," remarked a well-to-do yesterday. "The Governor brought rain," remarked a well-to-do Chetty to us this morning; who also informed us that the natives regarded it as a bad omen that the Prince of Wales's visit last year should have been followed by a season of drought and famine. If the Duke believes in these omens, as he does in Brahmin saints, he will regret that he did not return to the Presidency earlier. - Madras Mail. Nov. 10.

THE FAMINE.—We are informed by the local Times that the Madras Government ordered the following telegram to be sent to the Government of India with reference to a letter from the Madras Chamber of Commerce suggesting as a relief work the commencement of the earth-works for the proposed Bellary-Cudduck Railway :- "A fortnight's time must determine whether famine inevitable. In that case concentration of relief labour is most necessary; already upwards of 50,000 employed on scattered relief works in one district but of three. If famine contingency arises, we propose commencement of embankment work of Bellary-Gadduck Railway which traverses most part of suffering district as State work. Please telegraph reply."—Mactras Mail, Nov. 10.

Grain Riots.—A correspondent of the Times of India, writing from Kurnool on the 8th Nov., the day before the outbreak and the looting of the grain dealers there, says:—"The distress at present is very great. The scarcity is terrible, and I can assure you that thousands are suffering the pangs of sheer starvation. There are no thousands are sunering the pangs of sheef starvation. There are no less than 12,000 people now on relief works under Mr. H. M. Bond, the supervisor P. W. D., and I leave you to judge of his anxiety with such a large charge. There is every prospect that the number will be trebled in a few days. I hope I shall never see such distress again. No grain, no fodder; the cattle dying and the people on the verge of death—that is the situation. Cholum is three measures for a rupce; rice one and a half measures. No gram or any other grain, in fact there is no grain in the market at present. Prospects look very gloomy, and I really do not like to think of the future. No rain as yet. I trust God in his mercy will send us a few showers.

FAMINE RELIEF.—The Madras Government have issued an order on the report of Mr. Thornhill of his tour in the Bellary, Karnul, Kadapah and North Arkot districts. Among other things the Government says:—"The Accountant-General has been warned to be prepared for possibly very large expenditure in Bellary, Cuddapah, and Karnul, and the Board should endeavour to frame an estimate for him of the probable exceptional requirements. It will probably be convenient both for him and for the district officers to place considerable amounts there in small silver coin. The Government are glad to recognise the active sustained interest manifested in their charges by the district officers, and have, at the Board's recommendation, strengthened the Staff by appointing an Acting Additional Sub-Collector to Bellary and Acting Special Assistants to Kadapah and Karnul for the temporary emergency. For the present, there seems no reason to apprehend insufficient supplies of grain, and the efforts of Government may be mainly restricted to providing the means of carning wages for the large body of labourers and petty cultivators, where agricultural operations are at a stand still from the prevailing drought, and supplying where absolutely necessary, food for the aged, the infirm, and the children. Up to the present time the Government see no reason to doubt that this has been secured. The rates of wages must not be allowed to fall below what is requisite for maintaining health and strength, and the Government have authorised the Collectors concerned to pay, at their discretion, in rations of grain instead of money, which system, as involving wholesale purchases by Government, will tend to restore confidence to the grain merchants. It must be borne in mind that in a time of famine-prices the ordinary minimum rates of money wages will only provide the labourer with half rations, and leave him incapable of performing a fair day's work."

THE SCARCITY IN WESTERN INDIA.

CARRIAGE OF GRAIN.—The Bombay Government have passed the following resolution in reference to the transfer of grain to different "Circumstances which have lately been brought under the notice of Government, rendered it necessary, in the opinion of his Excellency the Governor in Council, to impress on all officers serving under Government in the distressed districts the obligation to discourage, to the best of their ability, all attempts to impede the free transfer of grain from one part of the country to another, whether it be from one collectorate to another, from one taluka to another or between a native State and some other territory. It is certain that large supplies of grain are now passing by rail and by sea into the distressed districts under the direction of private traders, and nothing could so injuriously affect these enterprises as the creation in the minds of the traders of an apprehension that they would not be at liberty to carry their property to the market likely to afford the largest profit. The Government trust that the Collectors will use their best endeavours to make these instructions generally known, and to take care to explain to their subordinates the real object of their issue. Government also desire that the Collectors will use their best efforts to contradict the rumours which appear to have been spread, to the effect that Government contemplate interfering with the ordinary grain trade, and attempting to regulate prices."

DISTRESS IN DHARWAR.—Mr. E. P. Robertson, Collector of Dharwar, in submitting the weekly weather report as required by Government Resolution, writes:—I regret much that the distress from the scarcity is very serious indeed, and I scarcely see any way to relieve the people adequately without starting the Carwar and Gadak Railway. I am sorry that, owing to all the available water being exhausted, the Assistant Engineer, Mr. Scott, has been compelled to stop the earth work of the Dharwar tank works; the masonry works will continue. By this unfortunate circumstance some 300 persons will be thrown out of employment. water lasted Mr. Scott, would have, now that the puddle wall is completed, been able to emply at least 500 to 600 people. stoppage of this work will cause further severe distress in Dharwar, with its large non-agricultural population. The distress in Rain bennur is very great, and I do trust Government will not delay in sanctioning the expenditure on metal asked for in my No. 711, dated 24th ultimo, to the address of the Revenue Commissioner, S.D.
Relief Works in Punah.—On the 28th October the Collector of Punah, as it was probable that additional works might shortly be required in Indapur and Bhimthari, in addition to those for which sanction has already been applied, requested that Government would be pleased to permit the following works to be commenced so soon as they might appear necessary:—Indupur—Road from Kalas to Lasurna, and thence to Tasi, on the Nira, about 134 miles, over a difficult country, Rs. 8,000; improvement of road from Indapur to Sansar, and on to Baramati, in Bhimthari taluka about 33 miles, Rs. 10,000. Bhimthari-Road from Baramati, through Malegaon and Wargaon, to Nira bridge, about 25 miles, at Rs. 500 a mile, Rs. 12,500. These works have now been sanctioned conditionally on their being required for relief.

THE FAMINE IN KHANDESH.—The accounts which we receive from our correspondent at Bhosawal describe the painful condition to which the people in the Khandesh districts are reduced. districts are well off compared with those in the Deccan and Southern Mahratta country, but their sufferings are materially increased by the rapid rise in prices which the remorseless grain-dealers are always ready to encourage. These men are very needful at all times, and cannot be sent away, but the poor people who buy grain of them do not readily understand why the prices should rise so Digitized by GÖOGLE rapidly; their means being always limited they feel at once the slightest pressure from this cause. The Government will have to use every available means for keeping down prices, not the least effectual of which would seem to be the application of the punchayat system as narrated by our correspondent. We hear that very great activity may be observed in the transport of grain along the whole line of railway as far even as Allahabad. The native merchants are all alive to the opportunities offered them, and no doubt large supplies of grain from distant parts in the N.W. Provinces will be forthcoming. We have heard of one large dealer in Cawnpore who offered to send 900 tons a day of bajree for six weeks if the railway could carry it; the offer was refused, as the railway could only carry 300 tons a day. So great is the business transacted in grain at the present moment that we hear on one day last week upwards of 300 telegrams were received at the Jubbulpore office, all relating to dealings in grain or its transit. If this activity continues the Government will be relieved from a great deal of anxiety on the score of supplies of food for the people in the famine-stricken districts.—Bombay Gazette, Nov. 13.

Letters received from Sattara and Nassik convey the reassuring intelligence that energetic measures are being adopted in both districts to cope with the severe scarcity. Government officials are everywhere on the alert in getting up subscriptions and stirring up the community in general to a sense of their duty towards the sufferers. In the Sattara letter we are informed that all the assistant collectors, subordinate judges and Mamlutdars are showing praiseworthy activity in convening relief meetings throughout the various talookas of the district. At Sattara, itself, the meeting held under the presidency of Mr. MacTier, the sessions judge, afforded an instance of the individual generosity as well as activity of Government officials in this season of terrible suffering. Of the Rs. 3,000 subscribed on the 9th instant, Messrs. MacTier, Moore and Rao Bahadoor Bapusahib Vinchur contributed Rs. 500 each. noteworthy feature of the gathering was that several grain merchants volunteered to forego all profit they might derive under the present pressure by exacting high rates, offering to sell their stock at the prime cost. At Nassik energetic steps have been taken by the Municipality, under the direction of Mr. Erskine, to procure subscriptions towards the purchase of large quantities of grain for sale at cost price, thus providing a check on the avarice of the graindealing cases, who are only too ready to make capital out of the necessities of the port. The Nassik fund amounted last week to some thirty or forty thousand rupees, so we are informed, and this move on the part of the Municipality has taught, we are glad to learn, a salutary lesson to the class whom it was meant to hold in check. A correspondent, writing from Aurungabad on Monday last, the 13th instant, says:—We had a very deficient rainfull this year, and when the fertilising showers came they used to fall only in miserable driblets of a few cents at a time. Our streams are nearly dry, and our wells are far from being in a flourishing condition." present year's crop may be designated as a twelve-anna one, but luckily the yield of the two previous years was very satisfactory. Thus there is abundance of grain stored up in the district, so there need be no fear of actual famine. But prices are very high, in consequence of the usual "free-trade" combination among those ghurreebs parwahs, the tender-hearted Bunniahs. Large quantities of grain are, as might be expected under present circumstances, being exported elsewhere—to Ahmednuggur and to other places where prices rule high, and immense profits are thus being realised. No disturbances nor any serious robberies have yet occurred either in the city or in the cantonment, but precautions have been taken, and no one is allowed to move about the cantonment after nine P.M. The police have orders to seize all persons found stirring abroad after that hour, and unable to give a satisfactory account of themselves. A Sowcar was looted of Rs. 3,000 a few days back, and great fear has fallen upon others of the fraternity lest a similar fate shall be theirs on another occasion. Prices have not yet ascended to the extraordinary figure at which they stand in certain other places, yet they are sufficiently high to make the poorer classes suffer severely. Bajree, which used to sell at thirty or thirty-five seers for the rupee (Halli Sicca), now sells at ten and eleven seers for that coin. Jowaree costs a rupee for four-teen seers, and gram sells at a similar rate—an advance to more than double the former prices in both cases. Rice is unaffected. The clouds gathered in a threatening manner towards the end of last week, but nothing came of it beyond some trifling showers in the vicinity. There were heavier showers, I believe, farther west.

STATION TALK.

RAJKOT, Nov. 6.—The chiefs of Joonaghur, Mowanugger, Bhownuggur, Dhrangadra, Morvee, and Gondul, are the only Kattywar chiefs who will attend the Delhi Darbar. It is indeed very gratifying to note that on the present occasion no sort of political pressure has been brought to bear upon the chiefs whose purses have had an unusual amount of strain of late, but that those only are invited who can well afford to bear the heavy expenses of the journey. For the gratification of the rest of the chiefs who will have to forego the pleasure of witnessing one of the most remarkable events in Indian history, simply because they are financially unhappy, though for that reason their loyalty is none the less sincere, I would suggest the propriety of holding a small Darbar at Rajkot simultaneously on the 1st of January, and there to announce the title in the same way as at the seat of the Mogul Empire. I hope my suggestion will be promptly taken up by the authorities. Mr. Peile returned from the districts this morning. After a week's stay here he will proceed to Bhownuggur, whence he will set out for Delhi with the young Thakore Takhut Singhjee; Major Watson will conduct the duties of the Political Agent during Mr. Peile's absence.

Nov. 7.—The 7th Regiment N.I., which left here on the morning of Wednesday last returned to this station this morning, the relief having been countermanded by telegram from Army Head-quarters. The news appears to have been received by the Sepoys in sullen silence, a disappointment easily accounted for, as previous to leaving the men had to dispose of certain otherwise useful household gods for a mere song, and which will now entail some cost for replacement. In all conscience these poor men should be compensated for losses sustained owing to want of official foresight at military Headquarters. Col. Battye, the popular commanding officer, should represent matters to the powers that be, and demand some bucksheesh for his men, the responsible Bootian of the department in fault being muleted in damages. The recent breach betwixt the Political Agent and H.H. the Jam, as to the dismissal and appointment of a kharbaree, has been cleverly tided over by a Government Resolution which reads like a compromise. In according to the Jam the sovereign right and prerogative to choose his premier, Government, in the person of its accredited agent, as the Paramount Power, also claim the right and privilege of a voice in the matter in order to guard against mercenary or incompetent go-betweens. It is also reported that Government refuse to recognise Canjee, the elect, owing to family connection with Bugwanjee. The reason appears paradoxical, unless based on the injunction "to visit the sins of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation," the latter period representing Canjee's genealogical descent! More of this in my next. The approaching departure of Lieutenant-Colonel Sturt, Staff-Officer, on sick certificate to Europe, is a matter of general regret. This gallant and deservedly popular officer only returned the other day from a two months' trip to Calcutta, and is now advised by his medical attendant that a change to his native country is absolute for a restoration to health. Under a seeming rough exterior a kindlier heart never beat. In the discharge of his staff duties, which brought him in contact with both Europeans and natives, the fortiter in re was pleasingly blended with the suavitur In the social circle in which he moved his void will be much felt, for he was truly the soul of mirth that keeps the body from the earth. The public heartily wish him God-speed!—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE THAKUR OF MORVI.—The young Thakur of Morvi has set out on his travels over India, under the superintendence of Captain Humphrey and Mr. Jamshedjee Unwala, head master of the Bhownuggur High School, and late tutor and companion to the deceased Raja of Kolapur. He arrived in Bombay, where he will stay a short time, on Thursday last, with eighty followers, and will proceed to Benares, Calcutta, arriving at the Field of the Cloth of Gold at the appointed time.

The Suez Cable.—The laying of the Eastern Telegraph Company's duplicate cable between Suez and Aden was successfully completed on Thursday, Nov 9. The Telegraph Construction Company's s.s. Seine is expected to arrive at Bombay about the 20th instant, to lay the heavy shore end, and about 100 miles of the intermediate type of the duplicate cable to be laid between Bombay and Aden. The ships with the main portion of the cable are expected to arrive in about two months.

ARRIVAL OF H.E. THE GOVERNOR.—His Excellency the Governor and staff, consisting of Dr. Case, Captains Jervoise and Anderson, Aides-de-Camp, arrived here from Poona on Friday, precisely at eight P.M. The whole party alighted at the Parell Station, and drove up to Government-house. There was no escort; indeed, no one at all to receive his Excellency and staff at the station. The Hon. Messrs. Gibbs and Rogers arrived in Bombay, the former on Thursday, and the latter on Friday.—Times of India, Nov. 20.

The Puna Rayats.—The Bombay branch of the East India Association have addressed a memorial to the Governor of Bombay for the purpose of obtaining some information about the labours of the Commission appointed in October 1875 to inquire into the condition of the rayats in the Puna Collectorate and some other districts of the Deccan. Neither report nor any information as to the utility of the inquiry has been published. At the present time this information would be very useful, but it has been withheld by the Government, but for what reason has not been stated.

DEPARTURE OF MR. JUSTICE WHITE FOR CALCUTTA.—On Sunday evening a number of native gentlemen assembled at the compound of the Byculla station to bid farewell to Mr. James Sewell White, late Advocate-General of Bombay who has been appointed a Judge of the High Court of Calcutta in place of Mr. Justice Phear resigned. During his stay in Bombay many old friends of Mr. White paid him a visit at the bungalow of Sir M. R. Westropp, the resigned. White paid him a visit at the bungalow of Sir M. R. Westropp, the Chief Justice, at Malabar Hill, where he had stayed during his sojourn in this city, and wished to mark their esteem by wishing him good-bye. Mr. Justice White will take charge of his new appointment at the opening of the High Court at Calcutta on Wednesday next.—Times of India, Nov. 20.

Nor A WILD RUMOUR.—We quoted a paragraph from the local Spectator on Monday last, in which a wild rumour of certain appointments of prominent native gentlemen was circulated; but the pointments of prominent native gentlemen was circulated; but the reference in that paragraph to Sir Cowasjee Jehangeer was certainly not a wild rumour, for, we believe, it is extremely probable that Sir Cowasjee will be created a Baronet at the time of the Imperial Assemblage at Delhi—a title to which he has abundant claim, and which his friends have been anticipating would be conferred upon him for several years past, and which he certainly deserves .- Bombay Gazette.

DEPARTURE OF THE 108TH REGIMENT.—The 108th Regiment marched out of Mhow on the morning of Tuesday, Nov. 14, played out by the band of the 3rd Hussars. Major-General Montgomery issued a complimentary order, in which he wishes the regiment a happy meeting with their friends at home, and says that he hopes happy meeting with their friends at home, and says that he hopes the corps will keep up its high character for discipline and good conduct that it has borne for the past four years in the Mhow division, and that Colonel Williams takes home a regiment that will compare in physique and good conduct with any regiment it may be garrisoned with in England. The 2nd Battalion 17th Regiment, under Colonel Brice, were played in by the Hussar band. It was remarked that the regiment seemed full of boys, and not to be compared in physique with the 108th Regiment—all old soldiers.

THE RIGHT MAN IN THE RIGHT PLACE.—It affords us very great pleasure to learn that Mr. C. H. Dewey has been appointed Goods Agent of the G. I. P. Railway at Bombay. Mr. Dewey has served the Company long and well, and has earned a reputation for hard work and good temper, which has made him very popular along the whole of this line, as well as the Nizam's State Railway, where he was specially appointed District Traffic Superintendant on the opening of that line, on account of his business-like qualities, as well as his acquaintance with the Oriental languages, which enables wen as his acquaintance with the Oriental languages, which enables him to deal with native merchants direct without the intervention of an interpreter, in any part of the country in which he is employed. We hear that Mr. John Johnson, who has served as station master for several years on the G. I. P. Railway, will take Mr. Dewey's place as Traffic Inspector between Jubbulpore and Khundwa.—Indian Railway Service Gazette.

DEATH OF MR. JOHNS, C.S.—It is with very deep regret that we record the death of the esteemed First Assistant Collector of Poona, who died at the house of Gerard Norman, Esq., C.S., District Magistrate and Collector of Puna, on Saturday last, between twelve and one o'clock. It seems that on Friday Mr. Norman sent for Mr. Johns on some emergent business which required immediate attention. As Mr. Johns rode into the company of Cyprose Lodge the home he wede get suddenly entervaled. pound of Cypress Lodge the horse he rode got suddenly entangled n a tree, and Mr. Johns was thrown forward with great force. In a tree, and Mr. Johns was thrown forward with great force. His arms were broken and he was hurt on the forehead and about the face. He was at once taken up in an insensible state and carried into Mr. Norman's house, where he received prompt attention and medical aid. He seemed recovering and getting on as well as could be hoped for, when all at once on Saturday he became worse, and died. An inquest was held to ascertain the cause of death, and the doctors present were satisfied that Mr. Johns died from the nervous shock he had received, for there was no other cause of death discoverable. In the present crippled state of Puna, with the Revenue Commissioner absent and the Assistant Collector and Magistrates employed in endless relief business, Mr. John's death is a very great loss. The news spread among the natives with great rapidity, and wherever it came it caused sincere sorrow for the loss of the departed. Mr. John's death was so sudden and unexpected that very few knew of it in time to attend the funeral. Mr. W. H. Newnham, C.S., Mr. Norman, C.S., Mr. Macpherson, C. S., and Major Wahab were the mourners. At the Bund Gardens on Saturday comping none homographs the great event until the dens on Saturday evening none knew of the sad event until they were informed of it by a friend of the deceased. Many have expressed their regret that they were not on this account able to attend the funeral.—Deccan Herald, Nov. 13.

FURLOUGH RULES.

No. 1,120 of 1876, dated Oct. 27, 1876.—The Hon. the President in Council is pleased to notify the following rulings and decisions which have received the approval of the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, on certain points in the furlough rules of 1875, published in G. G. O. No. 1,316 of Dec. 30, 1875 :

G. G. O. No. 1,516 of 1875. Rule 6.—"Upon certificate of a medical board, an officer not entitled to furlough, if he has served not less than two years in India, may receive it for any period not exceeding two years; but such furlough will be deducted from his next accruing furlough until it is paid off. An officer will not be allowed to anticipate furlough under this rule to an aggregate amount of more than two years.'

Ruling.—An officer of less than two years' service, from date of coming under the new rules, falling sick, will be sent to England on medical cer tificate, on English furlough pay, subject to the decision of H.M.'s Government as to his ultimate disposal; a special report on each case being submitted to H.M.'s Government by the Government of India, or in the case of officers of the Madras or Bombay army by the Governments of those presidencies.

Rule 8.—"Under very urgent circumstances special furlough may be granted for private affairs, which need not be paid back; but it will be in ail cases without any kind of pay, and will not count for pension.'

Ruling.—The amount of leave which may be granted under this rule will be restricted to such period as the Government granting it is satisfied is actually necessary with reference to the urgency of the case.

Rule 13.—"Officers now in the service placing themselves from a given date under these rules, shall count service for pension up to that date, under the rules to which they were then subject."

Ruling.—An officer takes with him so much service for pension as he had become entitled to under former rules. Under the rules of 1854 and had become entitled to under former rules. Under the rules of 1854 and 1868, two years' leave in twenty years' service counts for pension, but in periods of less than twenty years no leave counts. Therefore, if an officer now under the rules of 1854 or 1868, of twenty years service, with two years' leave, elects the present rules, his service for pension will be twenty years; if an officer of nineteen years' service, with the same amount of leave, elects these rules, his service for pension will be seventeen years only.

Schedule A., Clause 1.—"Officers entering the Staff Corps or Indian Medical Service, and warrant officers attaining that rank, after Dec. 31, 1875; and "_____

Ruling.—The date of entry into the Staff Corps is that of entry for choice of furlough rules, viz., the date on which the officer was originally appointed on probation. An officer therefore whose date of admission to the Staff Corps is not after Dec. 31, 1875, will have the choice of rules, but an officer whose date of admission is after that date will have no option.

Schedule A. Clause 2.—"Any other officers, commissioned or warrant, belonging to the Indian Army or Medical Service, or officers of the Staff Corps, who, after Dec. 31, 1875, shall, before asking for leave or furlough, apply in writing to their local Governments to be placed definitively upon this schedule; but their service four furlough under Rule 1 shall commence from the date of such entry or such application respectively."

Ruling.—An officer coming on this schedule having furlough to his credit under previous rules, forfeits such furlough absolutely, he being required to serve five years from date of applying to be placed on the schedule before he can take one year's furlough, unless it be sick furlough.

schedule before he can take one year's furlough, unless it be sick furlough under Rule 6. An officer similarly circumstanced, but having furlough to his debit, is equally, with the others, entitled to take one year's furlough five years after joining the new rules.

Nome.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.

The proprietors of the above company held their thirty-sixth annual meeting on Tuesday, in their offices, Leadenhall-street. There was a large attendance. Mr. W. Fane de Salis presided, and in moving the adoption of the report stated that the fleet of the company consisted of forty-eight steamships and seven subsidiary vessels, with an aggregate horse power of 21,850 tons, and an aggregate tonnage of 124,664, which was exactly double the tonnage of the navy of the United States at the commencement of the Federal war. The fleet had been considerably increased, and its machinery improved since the opening of the Suez Canal, because many of the ships which the company then possessed had become unequal to the great increase in the carrying trade which had followed that event, which was a memorable one to the company. The reorganisation which had taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved and taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved an outlay of £2,500,000, for which the board taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken place involved and taken had only called upon the proprietors for £200,000, the produce of two calls on the new shares. They were now able to convey cargo, passengers, and mails against all comers, and they possessed some of the finest steamships in the mercantile marine of England. Their fleet had been engaged in one of the most extensive mail services the world had ever seen, having travelled over 1,700,000 miles. The mails from India, China, Japan, and Australia had, by converging at Galle and Suez, been delivered with rare exceptions every Monday morning in London with trainlike punctuality. Apart from the mails, the ships had carried 300,000 tons of cargo, and upwards of 15,000 passengers were brought to their destinations without loss of life and without maritime catastrophe. Referring to the statement of accounts, he said the summarised results showed that £128,500 worth of debentures had been paid off, and since September 28 £34,000 more had been paid off, and he believed that before the close of the year a total of £200,000 would be paid off. £150,000 had been applied to repairs; £200,000 had been written off the value of the ships to cover depreciation, and £100,000 carried to renewal account, eaving a balance of £104,000, out of which an interim dividend of 1½ per cent. was paid last June, and it was now proposed to pay a dividend of 2 per cent. Speaking of the future proposed to pay a dividend of z per cent. Speaking of the future of the company, he said that there was no ground for apprehension. Those who knew India had said that but the skin of the trade of the country had been raised. If that were true as regarded India, how much more true was it as to the other great terminus of the company's trade? In estimating the future of the company they ought not to forget the great colonies which it was said would outrival the mother country, and would throw the United States into the shade. He deplored therecent death of the late chairman (Mr. P. D. Hadow), and said that the directors had unanimously elected to fill the vacancy the Hon. Charles Hanbury-Tracy, M.P.

Mr. E. Thornton seconded the adoption of the report. The Chairman stated that the board could accelerate the Australian mails by five days, and the Indian mails by two days, if a fresh arrangement were made.

The report having been carried, a dividend of 2 per cent. for the half-year was declared, and the meeting approved of the selection of Mr. Hanbury-Tracy, and passed a vote of condolence to be forwarded to Mrs. Hadow.

Miscellaneous.

ILLNESS OF MR. WATERFIELD.—We are sorry to hear that Mr. Waterfield, the Assistant Librarian of the India-office Library, is seriously ill. The Library is undergoing thorough repairs and renovation; and so, perhaps, the weight of the extra duties may have told on the strength of the able successor of the late Prof. Childers. Good hopes are entertained of Mr. Waterfield's speedy recovery.—Athenæum.

THE CASE OF THE "FRANCONIA."—Judgment was yesterday de-livered in the Court of Appeal in the case of the Franconia, the Court holding the Franconia solely to blame for the collision, the Strathclyde having broken no rule, either before the collision threatened or at the moment it became inevitable, whilst almost every rule had been broken by the Franconia. The appeal, therefore, was dismissed with costs.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN DICKINSON.—The death is announced of Mr. John Dickinson, well-known in the days of the Company for the interest he took in Indian affairs, and the number of pamphlets, articles, and letters he produced. His largest production, a work of 200 pages, called "The Government of India under a Bureaucracy," appeared in 1853, when the renewal of the Company's Charter was under the consideration of Parliament. Mr. Dickinson died quite suddenly on Wednesday, the 22nd ult.-Athenaum.

MILITARY.—Her Majesty has approved of the following changes in the military establishments of the army, consequent upon the embarkation of foreign reliefs. The 6th, 24th, and 14th Regiments of Foot will each have an establishment of 69 officers, 151 non-commissioned officers, and 1,740 men; the 73rd and 90th the same, with the addition of one officer; the Rifle Brigade will have 126 officers, 278 non-commissioned officers, and 3,260 men; 60th Rifles, 128 officers, 291 non-commissioned officers, and 3,180 men; 10th Foot, 65 officers, 143 non-commissioned officers, and 1,440 men.

The Russian Army.—Col. R. P. Anderson, Commanding 34th Regiment, Bengal N.I., writes:—"In the issue of the Daily Telegraph dated London, 4th Dec., 1876, I observe the following in a leader:—'We venture to doubt, therefore, whether Russia could put 200,000 men on the left Danube bank.' Allow me to say that for years past I have asserted that for 'external warfare' Russia could not place on a given spot, more than 200,000 men, i.e., when alluding to Russia's advance on India, i.e. separate from the Russian army. I have repeated this over and over again in the Pioneer newspaper (published at Allahabad, India), and always signed myself, BILLS ON INDIA.—At the opening of the tenders for the India Council drafts at the Bank of England on Wednesday, the 6th inst., it was found that the whole amount of 35 lakhs of rupees (say £350,000) had been taken at an advance of $\frac{3}{8}\ddot$d. to 7-16ths as compared with last week, making about 1d. per rupee in the last three weeks. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £197,000; to Bombay, £150,000; and to Madras, £3,000. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 9 9-16d. for telegrams, and at 1s. 9 \frac{1}{2}\ddot$d. for bills receive about 49 per cent., and those on Bombay at 1s. 9 \frac{1}{2}\ddot$d. for bills about 42 per cent. The consequence of this has been an immediate advance in the price of silver to 55 \frac{3}{4}\ddot$d. to 56d. per oz., and the tendency is still upward. When we consider that the rise has reached 2\frac{1}{2}\ddot$d. per oz. in the past month, and nearly 9d. an oz. in less than five months, we begin to realise how important the recovery has really been, and what an effect these fluctuations must have exercised upon international commerce and finance. The present quotation is within 1d. of that at the commencement of the year.

OUDH AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY .- The twenty-eighth report of the directors of the Oudh and Rohilkund Railway for the half-year ended the 30th of June gives the gross earnings at £183,363, and the working expenses, after deducting £11,294, carried to expenditure on account of covered waggons—at £106,862. This leaves a net profit of £76,501. Deducting that £11,294, the net revenue available for distribution is reduced to £65,205, which is short of the sum required to meet all interest charges on the capital of the company by £64,689, and therefore that sum has been made good by the Government and debited to the guaranteed interest account. The report states that the goods traffic has been good, notwithstanding the unfavourable condition of the crops and markets in Rohilkund. Some difficulties appear to be experienced in substituting coal for wood as fuel for the locomotives, and the working expenses have been increased during the half-year on that account, but by latest accounts matters have improved. There was less waste, and the drivers were gaining experience in the use of coal. An agreement entered into with the East Indian Railway Company to deliver coals at Benares at a rebate of 10 per cent. on the cost of freight will admit of coal being substituted for wood, and the use of the latter was to cease after the 1st of August. There was a considerable increase in both the upper and lower classes of passenger traffic. The general traffic appears to meet with difficulties in its development, however, through the incompleteness of the line and of its connection with other lines.

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA (LIMITED) .-- An extraordinary general meeting of the above bank was held on Dec. 7, at the City Terminus Hotel; Mr. J. R. Boyson, the Chairman, presided. The report was taken as read. The Chairman, in moving its adoption, said the further decrease in their debenture liability to so considerable an amount, now that they had resolved to grant no fresh loans on mortgage, was undoubtedly a subject for congratulation. He expressed a hope that the shareholders would feel satisfied that there had been some material improvement in their position during the past year, and that the board were justified in telling them that the year's results promised to be fairly satisfactory. Mr. R. P. Harrison, the deputy chairman, having seconded the adoption of the report, Mr. H. G. Bainbridge, a director, referred to the improvements which were being carried out on the company's tea estates, and said he was confidently able to tell the meeting that there had undoubtedly been an improvement in the value of those estates, althought the improvement would take time to develop, and longer than they hoped, from causes beyond their control, and almost—and entirely in many respects—beyond the control of the local management. Other shareholders having spoken, the Chairman in reply said, with regard to the purchase of their debentures in the market, members of the Stock Exchange were fully aware of the determina-tion of the board not to purchase surrenders of their debentures unless they could get them upon what they considered fair and reasonable terms. The amount now current upon real mortgage securities in India was £334,218, and he believed the securities were undoubtedly good. The report was adopted unanimously, and the meeting separated, after passing a vote of thanks to the chairman

TRAVELLERS' TALES .- I see it generally stated that the complaints of Anglo-India hauteur came originally from the Prince's companions; but this is a mistake—they came from the Prince himself. The Secretary of State and the Viceroy would have cared nothing for the opinions of Lord Alfred Paget, Lord Charles Beresford, and Lord Carington; but when the Prince speaks they deferentially incline the ear. Sir Bartle Frere was his Royal Highness's responsible adviser, and I cannot but blame him for letting the Prince form such erroneous ideas of Anglo-Indian society. I must add, by way of warning, that Anglo-Indians would do wisely to be more on their guard, and not to indulge so freely as they are wont to do their propensity for hoaxing British travellers with wild tales of Anglo-Indian brutality towards natives. These tales are eagerly swallowed by credulous tourists, who on their return home repeat the fables told them for the editication of their countrymen. The other day I heard a story told which I at once recognised as the invention of a friend of mine in Bombay. This gentleman had a tourist staying with him, who was full of indignation at the wrongs of the natives, so, to horrify him still more, my friend said after dinner: - "A provoking thing happened this morning; I told my syce to bring my horse round at five o'clock, and at ten minutes past the lazy brute had not made his appearance. I went down to the stable and found him asleep, so I gave him a good thrashing with my whip. About tiffin time my butler came down to the fort to tell me that the fellow had had the impudence to die. 'Well,' I said, if he's a Mussulman, bury him; if he's a Hindoo, burn him.' Now I shall be put to the bother of getting another servant." The guest drank in every word, and this story is now one of the accepted illustrations in England of the realities of Anglo-Indian life. The moral, for Anglo Indians who are jealous of their reputation for humanity and fair play, is, that when they see a tourist in the distance they should say to one another in the words of the old comedy, "Don't laugh; here's a fool coming."—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

The Condition of India.—The East India Association have just issued an address by Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji, ex-Prime Minister of Baroda, on the poverty of India. It points out that the total annual production of British India cannot be estimated at more than 40s. per head of the population, and that the masses are exceedingly poor, underfed, and imperfectly nourished. The difficulty of taking the first steps towards remedying this low condition of the people is felt most directly and palpably in the deficiency of capital in all agricultural districts; and this arises from the fact that a large portion of the revenues and resources of India are transferred to England, instead of, as in countries with home-government, where the taxes are chiefly expended amongst the community from which they are raised. Though some transfer of resources is unavoidable under foreign rule, the actual withdrawal, Mr. Dadabhai Naoroji contends, is much in excess of such necessity, and goes far to counteract the good which British rule is capable of conferring on India; and this excessive amount of drain is, in a great measure, cwing to the undue and increasing employment of Europeans, of late years, in all departments of the public service. It is further urged that India is unfairly treated in being saddled with the whole of the debt now debited to her, that debt having been mainly made up of the cost of the acquisition of India by the British nation, of payments, profits, and dividend through the late East India Company, and of the cost of the Afghan and other wars, which were either the work of the British Government or undertaken with objects in which the interests of India were not concerned. It is therefore urged that, while the people of India most gratefully acknowledge the value of peace and security under British rule, it is plainly the duty of every Anglo-Indian statesman and politician to lessen the amount of the annual transfer of capital, and to adopt any obviously suitable remedies for the undue pressure now laid on India and its scanty monetary resources. Some of these remedies the British Government's conceding an Imperial guarantee for the Indian debt; the Indian home charges to be reduced by England sustaining a portion of them; the curtailment of the employment of Europeans in India to the exclusion of natives; the encouragement of industrial enterprise in India; the provision of cheap means of communication between the different provinces of India; and especially from the interior to the coast; and the promotion of the storage of water and irrigation works wherever practicable. By these measures the development and material progress of the Empire would be secured, and the loyalty, gratitude, and attachment of India to the British rule would be afresh evoked and strengthened.

TEA IN SILHET.—Last year was not a very good one for Silhet tea cultivation. The total outturn shows a decrease of nearly six-The weather was bad for tea-planters. Heavy rains all through June and August damaged the gardens and retarded the crops; and afterwards leaving off too soon, cut the season inconveniently short. A good many gardens have been lately started, but no statistics will be taken from them till next year. The average outturn of the others is a couple of pounds under the cwt. per acre. With regard to labour, the older gardens are stocked chiefly by time-expired coolies from Cachar, and less by local coolies, while near the head-quarters station local labour has been unusually plentiful, though the villagers are sometimes engrossed at awkward times in work of their own. The importation of coolies from Western Bengal is increasing; and Ghazipur, N.W.P., wholly supplies the outlying planters. The imported coolies is the better article, for your local coolie will not work so hard or so neatly, and is mostly set to clear jungle, make roads, and other rough employments. The fuel difficulty is already causing anxiety, though for the present there is plenty of charcoal. Those planters, however, who have not a large surplus of jungle will soon be unpleasantly reminded of their want of forethought. They should have made arrangements for the reproduction of trees fit for charcoal; but neither they nor the other planters have done anything of the kind. There are some hopeful ones, it seems, who fancy that when charcoal fails some way will be discovered of drying tea without char-coal. At present there are only two machines in the district, and public opinion is pretty well divided as to whether machinery will ever to any great extent take the place of coolies. Finally, the Deputy Commissioner of Silhet, from whose report we gather the above information, writes that land is as yet plentiful, that feeder roads are wanted for planters to get their tea to the nearest ghat; and that although quarrels, and even violence, sometimes disturb the relations between the planters and the neighbouring landowners and holders, "the general feeling is good."—Pioneer.

Summary und Rebielo.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, November 27; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, November 25; Calcutta, November 24.

THE publication of Sir R. Temple's Minute of Nov. 21 on the effects of the great cyclone and storm-floods of Oct. 31 had fully confirmed the previous reports as to the greatness of the disaster thereby wrought. Besides the Noakhali seaboard and the country inland up to Noakhali itself, Sir Richard visited the islands of Hattia and Dakhin Shahbazpur, near the mouth of the Meghna, and the western coast of the great river within the district of Bakarganj. In each district he visited a number of villages, and ascertained on the spot "the precise mortality in each house," so as to prevent any possibility of deception. With him there was Mr. Reynolds (Secretary to Government) and Mr. Beverley, of great statistical repute, with Dr. Weir, and some of the local officers. An estimate of the probable number of lives lost (nearly all by drowning) was prepared by Mr. Beverley and Sir Richard himself, from their own data, compared with local reports, oral and written, and based on the returns of the last census. From these it would appear that in an area of some 3,000 square miles, out of 1,062,000 persons suddenly thrown into more or less danger, 215,000 must have perished. "This, of course," he adds, "is only an estimate; the exact number cannot be known yet a while, perhaps never will be known. We found in some villages 30 per cent of the inhabitants lost, in others 50 per cent, in some even 70 per cent. The total seems very high; I earnestly hope that it may be found to exceed the truth, and that the facts may not prove to be quite so dreadful. Still such is the estimate at present. At the least there must have been a most dreadful loss of human life.

It appears that the force of the great flood lasted in most places from about midnight to 2 A.M.; by daybreak the waters were much abated, and by noon next day the survivors had come down from the trees. After some hours they began to reassemble, "not indeed at the ruins of their homesteads, which had been carried away entirely, but at the sites and foundations." They took out their stores of grain buried in pits, dried in the sun those which were wet, and cooked such as were undamaged. At every homestead Sir Richard found the people engaged in drying their grain. They also made frameworks with broken branches, over which they threw sheets and cloths to serve as tents. Plaintain trees abounded, but the fruit was mostly destroyed. The cocoanuts, however, generally stood through the storm, and must have afforded some sustenance. There may have been much trouble about water at first, "but either the drinking tanks speedily recovered from the brackishness left by the salt wave, or else the storm-wave must have mainly consisted of fresh water; for the drinking tanks were not brackish when we tasted them a few days afterwards." Some tanks and swamps were full of human corpses and dead cattle and all manner of foetid matters, and the streamlets which carry off the accumulated water were "flowing black and thick with putrid substances." It was impossible to account for the number of cattle drowned. They are chiefly bullocks and cows, for the buffaloes being excellent swimmers were mostly saved.

It is a comfort to find that of those who escaped the first sweep of the storm-wave very few, if any, died afterwards from preventible causes. According to Sir Richard, they are Still sustained, or are sustaining themselves sufficiently well. The disaster, big though it be, has yet happened in the midst of plenty and of rural wealth. All around the fated and wasted area there are excellent crops and abundant stores. Those who have lost their agricultural wealth have still some left, and doubtless possess considerable credit. Soon, therefore, will boats come pouring in by the numerous channels from districts teeming with water-carriage; soon will fresh cattle be swum or ferried across the rivers from the overstocked districts of Eastern Bengal; soon will the grain bazaars be re-opened, and the rustic marts be filled with the surplus produce of neighbouring tracts.

From the Bombay papers we learn that the condition of the people in the famine districts is not worse than might be expected, all things considered. Owing to the prudent arrangements made by the Government of Bombay there is no fear of a short supply of grain. The N.W. Provinces are largely aiding in the transport of grain, and so anxious are traders to send their stores to the districts where large profits await them, that the entire line of railway from Delhi to Allahabad and Jabalpur, and from that place to Bombay, Puna and Sholapur, a distance of more than 1,500 miles, was blocked with waggons filled with grain.

This crush of the traffic on this long line of railway must continue—says the Bombay Gazette—for several months to come if the supply of food to the famine-stricken districts is to be kept up. This extraordinary transit of grain cannot be maintained without the expenditure of a large sum of money, which already shows signs of running short. The Government of Bombay has hithert found the money which eventually flows into the pockets of grain dealers and growers, the expenditure on public works being the means whereby the famished people purchase the food they require. The cash at the disposal of the Government at the end of September last in the Bank of Bombay amounted to one crore and fourteen lacs of rupees, and on the 18th of November this sum had been reduced to sixty-seven lacs, showing a reduction in seven weeks of forty-seven lacs of rupees. The Collector of Nasik, a district in which severe scarcity only prevails, has applied for further advances, the local funds for this year and next being exhausted. The Government have accordingly, as promised in the resolution of 17th October last, granted to the Collector Rs. 50,000 from imperial funds for works absolutely required to relieve persons suffering from distress.

It is stated that the escort which accompanied Major Sandeman to Khelat has at length been broken up. The cavalry are at Mitri in Kadchi, facing the Marri hills. The 4th Sikh

Infantry detachment, 300 in all, under Captain Scott, are at Quetta, covering the head of the Bolan Pass. Captain Wylie, with an escort of Jacobahad troops, 200 men and two mountain guns, accompanied the Khan, and were on their way, when last heard of, to Gandava and Jacobabad. Kafilas were going freely in great numbers through the Bolan Pass, of which Mr. Bruce, the assistant commissioner, had taken charge. The survey of the new road in Khelat will most likely follow the route from Shaikarpur and Jacobabad to the foot of the Bolan Pass, but the engineers have not yet begun work.

THE Viceroy reached Madhopur on the 16th November, exchanged visits with the Maharajah of Kashmir the next day, and started for Jhilam on the 19th. The Commissioner of Sind, and General Howard Vyse, left Kotri on the 18th with the state barge to meet the Viceroy at Sakkar. His Lordship reached Attok on the 21st, where he met the Commander-in-Chief and General Roberts. Thence he went on to Peshawar, which he reached on the 22nd. There was to be a levée next day and a review on the 25th.

Mr. Archibald Pollock is to act as Commissioner of Meerut from the time that Mr. Lind retires; Colonel J. Davidson taking the former gentleman's place as Commissioner of Jhansi. Colonel Cracroft has been appointed to the Quartermaster-General's Department for the period of the Delhi Camp. Sir Andrew Clarke reached Bombay on the 20th November after a tour in Sind. At Karachi he inspected the harbour, of which he formed a favourable opinion.

THE dispute with the Afridis bids fair to be settled without a campaign. With regard to its origin we must remember that the Afridis received an annual allowance for keeping up the road through the Kohat Pass, which leads directly from Kohat to Peshawar. Through neglect it had become almost impassable, and then the tribes in charge were requested to repair it, or allow it to be repaired, or to surrender a portion of the subsidy which they received for keeping it in good condition. This they refused to do. The persons sent by the Deputy Commissioner were insulted by one section of the tribe. As the others did not repudiate the action of the offenders, the whole tribe, forming a small branch of the great Afridi tribe, were blockaded. The bulk of the tribe however have not yet seen fit to join their brethren, and it may reasonably be hoped that they have no intention of so doing. A few days before the mail left, the council of Jawaki Afridis came in and made their submission, paying upwards of Rs. 2,000 fine for their share of the disturbances on the border. The Jawakis hold the eastern end of the Pass, while the centre is held by the Bangash tribe, and the west by the Sipahs. We may therefore hope for an early end to the dispute, as the blockade is seriously pressing on the tribe. Meanwhile it costs the Government nothing to maintain the blockade, which is merely one of the recognized punishments in force on the border, and, as such, involves no possible loss of prestige.

In a recent number of the Calcutta Gazette, Sir Richard Temple summarizes the results of chinchona cultivation as carried on in British Sikhim, under Dr. King's superintendence. Sir Richard, in the course of his review, records some valuable conclusions which have been reached in carrying out the experiment of manufacturing a cheap febrifuge for popular use in India. Dr. King's report, for the year ending March, 1876, gives fresh warrant to the belief that chinchona cultivation has passed beyond the stage of mere experiment, and has reached a point whence its ultimate success may fairly be predicted. From a statement of the quantities of bark collected yearly since the establishment of the plantation in 1869-70, it is inferred that the yield of 1875.76 is more than five times as great as that of the year before. The crop of red bark, the produce of chinchona succirubra thus gathered, amounts to 211,931 lbs. After deducting 16,640 lbs., destroyed by an accidental fire, there remain 195,291 lbs. to set against the working expenses of the year, which have amounted to 42,937 Rs. It has been calculated that the cost of producing each pound of dry bark is a trifle more than three annas and a half, or a fraction below four annas and nine pies, if interest on capital, at the rate of 4 per cent., be taken into account. Two thousand pounds of this quantity were supplied to the Presidency Medical Depot; the rest is stored at Manggu, and is made over to the Quinologist as required. In the attempt to manufacture chinchona febrifuge the success of the Government Quinologist has been poor, for although the quantity of bark employed by him amounted to 107,130 lbs., yet the yield was only 1,989 lbs., or rather less than 2 per cent. It should be added, however, in extenuation of this failure, that more than one-half of the bark was branch bark, which is always deficient in alkaloids. The actual working expenses of the Quinologist's Department were 30,355 Rs., and against this we have to set the value of the febrifuge at 16 Rs. per pound, making a total of 31,824 Rs.

DR. CUNNINGHAM'S Report on the cholera epidemic of 1875 shows that in that year the disease covered an unusally large area in the aggregate; but neither was this area continuous, nor did the tracts of prevalence and exemption correspond with the existence or the absence of great lines of communication respectively. "Over great part of the country in which cholera was most severe there are no railways, and the roads are often indifferent. Through part of the Central Provinces which escaped, one of the great trunk lines of railway, on which there is much and constant traffic, runs. In the Upper Provinces the extension of the disease was not along the high road, but over an area where the means of communication are compartively difficult and little used." Even within the epidemic area the proportion of villages affected was comparatively small, and the deaths were often spread over several months. In the Punjab especially about one village in every ten was attacked. Berar suffered more, perhaps, that any other province; but even in Akola, with its terrible mortality of 7,847 in five months 272 villages escaped out of 980. These facts of themselves would not be conclusive evidence against the contagion theory. Nor is it absolutely conclusive that, among sixty-seven outbreaks of the disease in cantonments and jails, there was not a single case in which there was sufficient proof to show that the outbreak was due to importation. Much stronger evidence of the noncontagious character of the disease is, however, furnished by the Report. In fifty-nine out of sixty-seven hospitals in which cholera cases were treated, we learn that not one of those who came in contact with the sick was attacked and in one of these cases no fewer than fifty-eight patients, were treated. This immunity is the more remarkable as the attendants "were often exposed to depressing influences, such as the want of rest and regular meals, anxiety and grief, all which predispose to disease; and in these days, when the dangers of personal contagion are so generally inculcated, they were no doubt in many instances also subject to the additional depression of fear, which has long been recognised as peculiarly favourable to the development of cholera."

THE wrath of a Calcutta contemporary seems to have been rather needlessly awakened by a recent order of the Indian Government touching memorials presented to Government by "officers in civil employ." By way of guarding against "the appearance of organised combination" on the part of applicants for redors of grievances, the Government has simply extended to "all officers in civil employ," which surely does not mean quite the same thing as civil officers, the rules already in force among military officers in general. Here at any rate are the new rules :-

I.—Every officer wishing to address a memorial to Government shall do so separately, and not in concert with others.

II.—No officer in the employment of Government may submit any memorial in respect to any matter connected with the official position which he occupies in which he is not personally interested, except as the agent of some person or persons unable to act in their own behalf.

III.—No officer in the employment of Government shall submit a printed memorial.

IV.—No memorial shall be submitted in a form set for general adoption, but shall be couched in the memorialist's own words, and in temperate and respectful language.

V.—Any memorial contravening these rules will not be taken into consideration by the authority to which it is submitted, and the officer or officers submitting such memorials will incur the serious displeasure of Government.

Every one knows that such rules can only tell against the show of combination, while all rules are practically futile against the reality. A body of officers with a common grievance will always know how to press their claims without a direct breach of the formalities prescribed by the ruling powers. Henceforth "officers in civil employ" will have to take a little more pains in the drawing up of their petitions, but the actual power of combining for a common end remains, and must remain intact. The Englishman, however, apparently confounding officers in civil employ with civil officers, launches out into a fierce invective against an order, the effect of which is "to subject H.M.'s Indian Civil Service to the severe rules of military discipline as far as the matter treated of in it is concerned." It accuses the Government of "a mere desire to close the months of men whose complaints are unpleasant because they are just; dangerous because they are convincing;" and declares that the circular in question will only exasperate the Civil Service, already discontented and well nigh desperate. If the circular were levelled at the Civil Service, there might be some reason for all this outcry. But if "officers on civil employ" mean merely Staff Corps officers discharging civil duties, our contemporary would seem to have wasted his breath.

THE objects of the National Indian Association, which has now been six years at work, have lately been furthered by the establishment of a Bengal Branch under the presidency of Sir R. Temple. From the Journal of the Association we learn that the first and most important work contemplated by the Bengal Branch will be to facilitate the visits to Great Britain of educated Indian gentlemen. All necessary information will be obtained for them, and they will be recommended to the care of the parent Association, who have already striven their best to make the visits of Indian gentlemen useful and agreeable. The improved education of Indian women has begun to excite attention, especially in connection with the training of female teachers. It is hoped that, when a female Normal School is established, the lady members of the Association will be able to co-operate in this useful work. The Bengal Government having already decided on the establishment of Juvenile Reformatories, the Committee hopes that some of the members of the Association will lend their aid in a movement which has been so fruitful of good at home. It will also be an object of the Committee to form a library and collect reports from England and other parts of Europe, as well as from India, relating to benevolent work and social progress. For this end, help is requested from friends in Bengal and at a distance.

THE Times Calcutta telegram of December 10, states that the Viceroy reached Jacobabad on the evening of the 7th, accompanied by Lady Lytton, Sir William Merewether, Commissioner of Sind, and others. He was received with much enthusiasm. At the interview with the Khan of Khelat on Friday, the Viceroy ratified all the measures initiated by Major Sandeman for the pacification and future good government of The subsidy formerly paid to the Khan, which has been withdrawn since 1873, has now been restored and increased to £10,000 per annum. Major Sandeman is appointed Political Agent at Khelat. His escort of troops remain in the Khelat territory, at the Khan's request, till further orders. All the principal Khelat Chiefs also met the Viceroy of Jacobabad. They expressed much pleasure at the final settlement of the difficulties. Lord Lytton addressed the Khan and Chiefs at great length on their solemn obligation to avoid a recurrence of disorders, and stated that trade by the Bolan Pass was being rapidly restored. A branch railway will be made from the Indus to Jacobabad, which is expected to add greatly to the traffic on the Indus Valley line. The Viceroy left Jacobabad on the 9th for Sakkar, proceeded thence down the Indus to Kotri, and was to arrive at Karachi on Tuesday, Dec. 12, and Bombay on Saturday, Dec. 16. The Khan of Khelat proceeds viá Lahor to Delhi.

According to the same telegram there is little fresh news regarding the Bombay and Madras famine prospects, but it is stated that grain is pouring into the Bombay distressed districts from Central India and the North-West, and as the means of communication are ample, there will probably be little difficulty in keeping up a supply. The danger of a water famine now appears to have diminished. The Bombay Government has refused to interfere with the sale of grain in Nassik and Khandesh, and has directed the rise in prices to be met by an increase of the wages of the labourers on the relief works. Regarding Sholapur, which is the worst district, the Times of India says, that, owing partly to the import of grain and partly to the starting of relief works, which will give employment to 66,000 persons, the destitute people are now able to buy food, and probably there will be no cases of actual want.

As in the first days of distress in Madras, the rain came too late to do much good, and prospects look very bad in three or four districts. It is stated that there is much cholera and that crime is rife. The Government is acting with great energy.

WITH regard to the Delhi Assemblage we learn that the Sultan of Oman sends a deputation thither by his brother. A deputation from Nepal will also attend. The President of the Council and high officials leave Calcutta on the 17th. Sir R. Temple and his guests start on the 19th. Owing to the anticipated famine, the Governor of Bombay will stay only two days at Delhi, and few Madras or Bombay Chiefs will attend. Mr. Talboys Wheeler, the historian of India, is directed by Government to write a history of the Assemblage. His book will commence with an epitome of Indian history, showing, inter alia, the connexion between the British Government and the various Chiefs attending the Assemblage; it will then give a full account of the ceremony. Mr. Wheeler is Under-Secretary in the Foreign Department.

THE following items were forwarded in the same telegram:—

The news that Mr. Ashley Eden will succeed Sir R. Temple as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, which was announced here last week, was received with general satisfaction. the High Court Judges on its own motion.

Some years ago the Government ceded to the Thakur of Bhaunagar certain villages in Bombay. The validity of the cession has been questioned in the Courts, and the case was carried to the Privy Council, which decided that the villages were not removed from the jurisdiction of the British Courts. Last week a Gazette Extraordinary was published, which, after reciting that the previous cession was inoperative from its defective wording, proceeds to declare that the villages are now ceded to the Bhaunagar State, reserving the rights of the British Government to them in the event of misgovernment.

"Who shall decide when doctors disagree ?" In his Handy-Book on the Eastern Question Sir George Campbell in downright language asserts that "the idea of any religious connection between the Sultan of Turkey and Indian Mohammedans -that he is or ever has been the religious head of any one of them—is absolutely and entirely untrue." Sir G. Campbell has had a good deal to do in his day with Indian Mohammedans, and might be expected to have gained as full an insight into their ways and feelings as any English official could hope to do. But on this question of religious sympathy between the Sultan of Turkey and his fellow-worshippers in India he is flatly contradicted by M. H. Hakim, an Indian Mohammedan, who, in a letter to the Times, maintains that the Indian Mussulmans feel towards their Khalíf, the Sultan, "a religious sympathy pure and simple." The bulk of those Mussulmans are Sunnis, who in their Friday prayers speak of the Sultan "with the utmost reverence," and invoke God's blessing upon his descendants. They have held meetings in India to collect money for the head of their religion, and if the Sultan should ever come to be as hard pressed for men as he now is for money, "the sons of the highest Moslem families are prepared to leave India for Turkey rather than see the Russian Eagle swoop over Constantinople." As for the Shiah Mussulmans, whose feuds with their Sunni rivals are matter of history, M. H. Hakim avers that they differ from Sunnis no more than one sect of English Dissenters differs from another, and that they too are prepared to help the Sultan in any emergency. Which of these two authorities are we to believe? And how are we to account for such very opposite assertions made by two gentlemen who ought to know something about the matter in dispute ? Perhaps Sir G. Campbell has drawn too sweeping a conclusion from the state of things which really existed when India was ruled by the Moghals. Perhaps too his opponent has erred in the opposite direction, through applying to all Mohammedan India the results of his acquaintance with the feelings of a particular class or province. His reference to the Shiahs at any rate justifies a strong misgiving as to the accuracy of his main argument. At the same time it would be foolish to deny that in certain conjunctures the influence of a common religious creed may override all ordinary differences of race, politics, and social tendencies. This, however, is clearly no argument for any attempt on our part to uphold Turkish barbarism in Eastern Europe, for the purpose of retaining the good-will of our Indian Mussulmans.

On another question of kindred interest Sir G. Campbell holds views which commend themselves to all cool-headed thinkers. Some days ago an evening contemporary made the following remarks:

Who has ever hinted that there will be a war in support of the integrity and independence of the Turkish Empire? That there would be war if Russia resolved to seize Constantinople, and so to block our way to India is quite true, for England will never consent, in a matter so vital to her interests, to be at the mercy of any Power. But that is a very different thing from fighting for the Porte.

The language of the Globe is not that of Sir G. Campbell, who argues, with perfect justice, that a Russian conquest of Constantinople would not greatly injure English interests, since at the worst our troops could be sent round the Cape as of old, and while Russia was engaged in absorbing and digesting Turkey, she would have to divert her energies from the southern frontiers of Turkistan. We have serious doubts of any real design by Russia against Constantinople, because, as the Czar himself put it the other day, such a movement on her part would be a ruinous mistake in her own interests. But it is well to be reminded that our road to India does not nor ever can lie through or near Constantinople. It would be nearly as true to say that our road to India lies through Timbuctoo. Even if the Euphrates Valley Railway were an accomplished fact, it would matter little to us who ruled in Constantinople, so long as England retained her old mastery in the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf. For the present however the Suez Canal and the Cape Routes are the two chains that bind us to India; and while English fleets continue strong enough to maintain our naval supremacy, neither of these chains can easily be broken, whatever Power may be seated on the Bosphorus.

LOOKING coolly at all the facts before him, Sir G. Campbell thinks that the Christians in Turkey are not so much maltreated as Christians as that they suffer from bad government, in common with the Mohammedans, and that, even where Mohammedans are the oppressors and Christians are the oppressed, it is rather a question of class against class, aggravated by difference of religion, than a difference originating in religion. At the same he admits that

Now perhaps more than at any previous period of Turkish history, the Christians are placed in a humiliating and enthrailed position, which has had no parallel in the world. Think of a system under which no Christian can bear arms in any capacity, not even the baton of a policeman, nor exercise any executive authority, even the pettiest; under which not only the whole army, but the whole executive administration, the whole police down to the village watchman, are all of the dominant Mahommedan minority, while the Christian majority are entirely and without exception a subject-people. Compare this state of things with the liberal government of the Mogul Emperors in India, where the Hindoos were employed in thousands and tens of thousands both in the army and the civil administration, where many of the chief ministers were Hindoos, and where one of the Emperors even went so far as to appoint a Hindoo general to be Governor of Mahomedan Cabul. Compare it with the everyday and uncoerced practice of native States in India at this day. There is hardly a Hindoo State which has not many Mahomedans in its higher offices, and hardly a Mahomedan State which has not many Hindoos in similar offices. can bear arms in any capacity, not even the baton of a policeman, nor

INDIA'S MORAL AND MATERIAL PROGRESS IN 1874-75.—V.

UNDER the head of Public Health and Sanitation the Indian Blue-book leads off with some brief details concerning the health of the Army. The average death-rate for the whole of our troops in India fell to 13:58 per 1,000, giving for each Presidency, especially Madras, a lower rate than that recorded for any previous year. The sick-rate was also comparatively low. Both results were mainly due to the general absence of cholera, whose ravages were chiefly confined to the Native Regiments in Malarial fevers swelled the sick-list in Bengal and Madras. Thanks to the careful enforcement of vaccination very few cases of small-pox occurred.

In spite of Sir G. Campbell's efforts, accurate returns of disease and death among the vast population of Bengal are still far to seek. In certain areas, however, an improved system of registration showed a general average of 24.72 deaths per 1,000 In Calcutta the death-rate was 28.26, but these figures must be taken with some allowance for the incomplete returns of the previous census. Cholera was less fatal and widespread than in 1873, but small-pox seems to have been very rife in the hot season, and bowel-complaints were unusually severe. Fevers on the whole were less fatal than usual, but they carried off about a third of a million people. In the City of Madras the deathrate averaged 36 per 1,000, as compared with 17:1 for the whole In Ganjam alone did cholera slay many persons, Presidency. but a quarter of a million died in all from fever, and over 48,000 from small-pox. The death-rate for Bombay city was 24.04, and for the Presidency 17.17 per 1,000. Only 37 deaths occurred from cholera, while fever slew 183,717, or 66 per cent. of the whole number of deaths. In the Funjab only 78 persons died of cholera, but the deaths from fever averaged 60 per cent. of the total death returns. In the North-West Provinces 67 per cent. of the deaths were caused by fever. Both there and in Oudh cholera carried off very few people. In Assam on the other hand 38 per cent. of all the deaths were ascribed to cholera, and only 37 per cent. to fever. The death-rate for the Central Provinces was 23:49, and for Berar 36 per 1,000. Fever and bowel-complaints were unusually rife in both provinces. In British Burmah more than half of all the deaths recorded arose from fever.

Vaccination made good progress in Bengal and Bombay, but it seems that the people of Madras are still slow to acknowledge the use of such a preventive. In the Punjab and the North-West it was making its way against popular prejudice or apathy; but the Natives of the latter province dislike the idea of vaccinating mere babies. In Assam and even in the Central Provinces vaccination was still backward. The public hospitals and dispensaries, to which Government contributes a share of their cost, did good work on the whole in relieving large numbers of indoor and outdoor patients. Nearly two millions were thus aided in Bengal alone, and the increase of patients in most of the provinces was the more satisfactory as the year on the whole was remarkably healthy. In the Punjab however there was a falling off in the subscriptions both from natives and Europeans. The Medical Schools in the different Provinces were working fairly, and training up an increasing number of native candidates for the public service. The year was remarkable for the admission of women students into the Madras Medical College.

Some progress was made in sanitary improvements. underground drainage scheme worked wonders for Calcutta, and several towns in Bengal and Madras reaped much benefit from the efforts made to purify them. Madras itself enjoys the advantages of good water from the Red Hill Lake, and the supply of good drinking-water in the Bombay towns was much improved. In Oudh and Berar the poverty of the municipalities impedes the carrying out of some desirable reforms, and in the Central Provinces the habits and prejudices of the people render progress slow in the same direction.

With regard to Education the Blue-book reports some pleasant things. The number of aided primary schools in Bengal increased by a thousand in one year. The Calcutta School of Art attracted some pupils, not in vain, let us hope, if it be true, as stated by Sir R. Temple, that art-culture, "once indigenous in the country, has for the most part died out in the course of ages, and nothing new has been substituted." It is in other fields however that the Bengali seems most ambitious to excel. A strong intellectual ferment is at work among the youth of Bengal, causing even the poorest among them to hunger after an English education, and impelling the wealthier in ever-increasing numbers to finish their schooling, or begin their professional studies in England. The same spirit shows itself in the rapid growth of societies for social and educative purposes. In Madras, Bombay, and the Punjab the increase in schools and scholars was likewise great. Out of nine candidates from the Delhi College eight passed into the Calcutta University. A decline in the number of schools in the Central Provinces was set off by a large increase in the number of scholars. The percentage of scholars to population is everywhere small enough, even now, and in Burmah falls as low as 1.2 per cent. But it must always be remembered that Burmah possesses a large number of indigenous schools, managed solely by Burmese monks, who still for the most part refuse to act under Government control.

Of the 2,254 candidates for admission into the Calcutta University, 43 per cent. were successful, which shows an increase of 10 per cent. on the previous year. Most of the failures were in English and mathematics. It is, however, to be regretted that barely 15 per cent. of those who matriculate ever proceed to take their degrees. The same thing occurs in Madras, where the proportion of passed candidates rose from 36.7 to 41 per cent. To this number the Free Church Mission and Doveton Colleges contributed a fair proportion. In Bombay the percentage of passed candidates fell from a third to a fourth. For the Punjab University a good half of the candidates were successful.

The proportion of Mohammedan pupils in the Government and aided schools of Bengal was still only a fifth of the whole number of scholars, but there was an increase of 24 per cent. in the number of those who learned English, and a marked increase in the number of college students, while those who attended the various Madrassas were twice as numerous as before. It is gratifying to learn that of 1,026 boys attending the Lahor District Schools and its branches 554 were Mohammedans. A decline in the number of Mohammedan pupils in one part of Bombay was balanced by an increased number of Urdu schools in another. As compared with Hindus of all castes the Mohammedans of Oudh show well in the returns of Government schools.

Female education was making slow but steady progress in Bengal, and in Madras also, where nearly 20,000 girls were at school. The same thing may be said of the Punjab and Burmah. The social freedom enjoyed by the Burmese women gives them a great advantage in this respect, but suitable teachers in Burmah seem hard to obtain.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—With reference to my letter published in your Paper of the 11th of July last, permit me to ask the Members of the Indian Council whether a great saving to Government would not have been effected if they had issued Exchequer Bills instead of giving to the exchange jobbers one rupee for every 1s. 6½d. received from them? In to-day's Times the Bombay rate is declared to be 1s. 10 3-16d.

The Council would not only have economised the resources of the Indian Government, but would have enabled all the Europeans in India, auxious to send home money for the support of their families, to have obtained from the banks much better terms than they could possibly hope for so long as Government was competing against them.

The financial review for the past eighteen months is a melancholy one. In August, 1875, Government insisted on borrowing 2½ millions sterling in India, instead of in England. In the early part of this year Government refused to grant bills on Calcutta and Bombay, though they were urgently needed, not only for Government purposes, but by all of the merchants engaged in the Indian export trade. Last July Government insisted on issuing bills which were negotiated on ruinous terms to the tax payers of India and to all of the Europeans who required to remit money home. Never before have the financial affairs of British India been so mismanaged.

But for the future. During the ensuing three months let Government freely grant bills on Calcutta, Bombay, Karachi, Madras, and Akyab; and during next summer, if the rate of exchange should fall below 1s. 8d., let it issue Exchequer bills in London, and repay principal and interest during the Indian export season, which extends from November to March.

-Your obedient servant,

Notices of Books.

A Grammar of the Hindi Language. By the Rev. S. H. Kellogg, M.A., &c. Calcutta: Thacker, Spink, and Co. London: Trübner and Co. 1876.

At last, a long wished-for book has made its appearance—a thoroughly sound Hindî Grammar. The only attempt yet made to produce such a book was that of Mr. Etherington, who confined his attention to one form of Hindî, and had evidently not read very deeply even in that. Mr. Kellogg, a missionary of great talent and learning, has now come forward to fill the void; and most excellently has he performed the task he undertook. In the work we now introduce to our readers Mr. Kellogg shows that he has studied with much success the congeries of dialects which together make up the great Hindî language, spoken by at least one-fourth of the entire inhabitants of India.

The dialects which Mr. Kellogg has taken to illustrate Hindî are, the Hindî of literature (Benares and Agra), the Kanaujî, the Braj, the Mârwârî, the Mewârî the Garhwâlî, the Kumâonî, the old Pùrbî (the language of the Râmâyan), the Avadhî, the Riwâî, and the Bhojpûrî. These dialects cover a surface extending from the Punjab to Bengal, and from the Himalayas to Rajputana. The declensional and conjugational peculiarities of these dialects are fully set forth by Mr. Kellogg; and the paradigms he gives show the intimate relationahip subsisting among them all. These, and other minor dialects, constitute the great Hindi language, spoken by the flower of India's peasantry; and though differing somewhat in grammatical terminology, they are yet sufficiently allied, in idiom and vocabulary, to warrant the prediction that, as education proceeds, all will coalesce in one homogeneous language, which, as Mr. Beames points out in his Comparative Grammar, is destined, from its native force and graces, to supersede the dialects we are now accustomed to study. For it must not be forgotten that Panjabi, Gujarati, and Bangali are only, so to speak, dialects of Hindi. Mahratti and Sindhi differ from the same stock mainly by the retention of crudities which the Hindi has long since discarded; and it is, therefore, quite possible that intellectual cultivation will gradually bring these dialects also into accord with their great, but neglected, parent.

A grammar that is so good as this one does not admit of a specification of excellences; but we must notice that Mr. Kellogg rightly insists that the use of Arabic and Persian words in Hindî is not to be deprecated, when they form part, as many do, of the daily life of the people. The names for the tenses of the verb proposed by Mr. Kellogg are singularly happy, and the methodical manner in which they fit into each other, and throw light upon their syntactical use, indicates that they are based on fact. The genitive of possession in ke is helped forward towards solution by Mr. Kellogg, who adduces an analogous form from the Márwárí dialect (p. 293). We cannot see, however, how the genitive can express the object of a verb (p. 292);—in all the instances cited the genitive is used attributively with respect to the real object, either expressed or understood. That ko, when used with the object of transitive past tenses, makes the verb impersonal (p. 171), has long been our opinion, and we are glad to find so good an authority on our side.

We have not much to find fault with Mr. Kellogg's book. The use of the words "followed by" (pp. 280, 284, &c.), as applied to that which invariably precedes, is peculiar; and the misnomer "statistical" is given to a class of verbs on p. 187, though we detect a little wavering at p. 313, where they are called "statistical or statical." In p. 185 Mr. Kellogg says that dend can intensify only transitive verbs, forgetting the compound chal dená, although he actually uses this verb himself on p. 335. The examples under (3 and 4) of the indefinite imperfect really belong to the present tense, as is shown by the negative nahin. Native grammarians prefer to omit the auxiliary verb when this form of the negative is used, thus causing the verb to assume the same form as that of the indefinite inperfect; and their practice in this respect agrees with Mr. Kellogg's theory of the origin of nahin, given on p. 198. The form sun raha hai is not a past tense, as Mr. Kellogg seems to think (p. 335), but a kind of imperfect present, called by Pandits tatkalik varttman, the present of a former time. It has a complimentary form sun rahâ thâ, called tâtkâlik apûrn bhût kâl. These two tenses might, properly, find their places in the paradigm of every verb. In continuation of our criticism, we remark that the ki of jab ki can scarcely be called pleonastic (p. 342), as both together are required to express the English word "since";—at p. 306, line 8, the words "by killing her" should be added to the translation;—and yoddha is from yudh, not yu, as stated on p. 51. The phrase marke tu nikala gaya (p. 316) is not peculiar to the story of Dharma Singha. A similar phrase will be found on p. 70 of the Bahya Prapancha Darpana, a work which should be read by every student of Hindi. In these cases it may be that the bases of verbs are used as abstract nouns, and that ke is a substitute for karke. Again, the omission of the postposition is not "peculiar" to the phrase musik manga dhan (p. 294), as the common phrase hath lagi vasts proves; neither is the use of the aorist as a present tense confined to the Prem Sagar (p. 206); several instances will be found in Dr. Hall's Hindi Reader taken from current Hindi books. It is, doubtless, a survival of a more prevalent habit, and is an idiom still in common use among women and the unsophisticated generally.

Among faults of omission we notice that the list, on p. 188, containing all the intensifying verbs, omits baithna, as found in such compounds as kar baithna, charh baithna, chhor baithna, &c.; and that although itne men is explained on p. 308 nothing is said about the analogous aise men. Jan, as a plural affix, is unnoticed, though it occurs on p. 232 of the Prem Sdgar,—a book which Mr. Kellogg has, undeservedly, treated with much consideration. The emphatic form of the future is not even mentioned, though it is found several times in so favourite a book as the 'Sakuntala (Pincott's ed., pp. 9 71, &c.). We are, also, disappointed at finding the important subject of nominal verbs dismissed in a single paragraph on p. 196.

The great philological interest attaching to, and the social and political importance of, the Hindî language, have induced us to treat at some length the scholarly work of Mr. Kellogg. We are sure that so painstaking a scholar will receive in good part and utilise our criticisms, which are dictated by a spirit similar to his own—the desire of helping forward the study of the finest vernacular of India. The Civil Service Commissioners will now have a worthy book with which to replace the short pamphlet of Dr. Ballantyne, and it is to be hoped that it will speedily find a place in their list of text-books.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

A REASON FOR THE DELHI ASSEMBLAGE.

The Bombay Gazette replies to the objection that the mere formal intimation of the Imperial Title to certain Chiefs will have little effect upon the people in the country at large, as these will still remain in ignorance of the existence of the Assemblage. This, however, it believes to be a mistake. No Prince can leave his territory without the event being known in every part of his dominions, and his subjects generally take good care to learn the cause of his departure. We have little doubt, therefore, that the attendance at Delhi of the principal Chiefs of India will secure for the promulgation of the title a very wide and effective field. But even though the Assemblage at Delhi were to have cost twice as much as it was estimated to cost, we should still have supported it, because of our conviction of the political value which will depend upon the Chiefs and people of India being property impressed with a sense of the importance of the relations of the Queen of England to these dominions. It must not be forgotten that of late years some people have so loosely respected the power of England over India that they have not hesitated to affirm that the Princes of India are independent, and ought to be treated as equals of Queen Victoria, instead of as subordinates to her. Five lakhs of rupees does not appear to us an extravagant sum for destroying such a mischievous illusion; and we say that the chief value of the Imperial Assemblage will lie in its practical declaration that her Majesty is, in every sense of the term Empress of India, that in this Empire, there is no one equal to her, and that moreover, all the petty rulers it contains are distinctly subordinate to her authority.

A PLEA FOR CHARITY.

The Bombay Gazette holds that the famine stricken have a claim upon the attention of the charitable throughout all India. Such a calamity ought not to be looked upon as a merely local event, to be dealt with only by the local authorities. Famine should be treated as a common enemy, which may appear this year in Bombay and Madras, next year in Bengal, and in the following year in Raj-pootana and the Punjab; and for this reason, every person in the country should resolve to combat it with what means lie in his power. We trust that our contemporaries will advocate this with all their might. By doing so, they will be doing a really charitable action, besides fostering that community of good feeling between the different parts of India which we should like to see a great deal more of. If a public meeting is held here, one of its duties should be to appoint a committee to collect subscriptions throughout India. We are sure that the subject of a famine has only to be brought prominently before those people whose country is not suffering from a famine blight in its heart, and a great deal of much-needed charity will reward the labours of the committee. It must not be forgotten that Bombay herself has never been backward in helping people who have been suddenly stricken with misfortune. The splendid gift of money which she sent to help to relieve the sufferings of the distressed operatives in Lancashire during the American war is a noble memorial of her charity. Many other instances of her open-handedness in sharing her abundance with those who needed it could be given; but we think it is scarcely necessary to multiply instances of a fact which is so well known. We may, however, cite one more case, because it happens to be very much to the point, and if we call attention to it our friends in Bengal need take no offence, because we are convinced that they have not hitherto offered to give this Presidency any help, simply because the matter had not been brought prominently to their notice. In 1873 the news went all over India that there was a dire famine in Bengal, and in our Presidency subscription lists were opened, and large sums came pouring in from all sides. One might have thought that the good people on the other side of India would at least have returned the compliment, and would have done their best to relieve the Bombay ryots, but we have not yet heard, as we have said, of a single subscription being forthcoming from Bengal, and we do not believe that the idea of starting lists has been mooted. It may be that the people of Bengal do not believe in famines, and perhaps it is natural they should suspect there is not, when they see the almost criminally sensational telegrams which have recently been published for the editication of people who love to sup full of horrors. But we can assure our Bengal friends that the famine here is only too real. We ask for help, and we earnestly hope that we may get it. Money is wanted at once, and it is not fair to let Government solely bear the burden of supplying it. Bis dat qui cito dat is as true as it is trite, and we hope that it will be now borne in mind. Give! give! give! we say to all, and we urge our contemporaries to help to urge on the good work as much as lies in their power.

COLONEL MACDONALD'S CASE.

The Friend of India holds that as regards the language, which is the great subject of complaint against Colonel Macdonald, he has, and could have, no responsibility whatever for it. editor may, as we have seen, accept information in full reliance on his contributor, but no editor accepts the propriety of the contributor's phraseology on trust. He reserves and exercises, the right of modifying the language according to his own judgment. Is Lord Lytton, or any member of the Government ignorant of the fact? Certainly not. Now the orders of Government, which Colonel Macdonald is said to have transgressed, expressly state that Government does not prohibit its servants from contributing to the Press. If they do so under their own name, then they are bound to use temperate language, but the language of anonymous editorials is the editor's language, and he alone is responsible for it. As a matter of fact, the articles in question underwent the process which most outside contributions undergo, and words and phrases were freely altered by the editor; to the best of our recollection the very phrases quoted as objectionable did not, in every case at least, appear as originally written. To punish Colonel Macdonald for the language of the articles as they appeared in our columns is simple injustice, without the excuse of ignorance. It is moreover a stultification by Government of its own orders, by. which it permits its servants to contribute to the press. What servant of the Government would accept such permission, if he knew that for a phrase which the editor may think fit to insert or modify in his contribution, he may be liable to a heavy penalty at the hands of Government? It would have been a blunder to lay any weight upon the language at all, in pronouncing condemnation on Colonel Macdonald, who would only be taken to task for furnishing information; but almost the whole force of the Government letter is spent upon the language alone. The whole letter is made absurd by this blunder. Another blunder:—Colonel Thuiller comes before the public as an author, the work is publicly offered for sale, becomes public property, and is liable to criticism like every other book offered to the public. Any man has a right to criticise it, and in so doing is amenable only to the laws to which every public writer is amenble. The published volume was certainly not one of the sacred mvsteries of the Department. It is absurd to say that a man must not be allowed to criticise a book which has become public property because it happens to have his official superior as its professed author. If a Finance Minister were to publish a volume on the currency question, would it be unlawful for another financier to criticise it, because he happened to belong to the financial department? The criticism may be fair or unfair. It may of course be libellous, but the writer on entering the ranks of authors can claim simply the redress that any other author in similar circumstances can claim. If he take the law into his own hands and trample on his subordinate under the shadow of authority, he is putting himself above the law, and is practically a breaker of the law.

JAIPUR.—The Maharaja of Jaipur has determined, it is said, to shine at the Imperial Assemblage with all the splendour befitting his high rank. He will move there with ten Sirdars, among whom are Rao Raja, of Uniwara, Raja of Khittou, Thakur of Issurda. Jhozor Singh, and others. A regiment of infantry, consisting of 116 men, and a regiment of cavalry of 100 sowars, conducted by two captains, with their respective bands, will follow him. A correspondent at Jaipur writes to the Delhi Gazette :- "Several lakhs of rupces are to be spent in the crection of the Albert Hall. H. H. inherits lofty taste in architectural improvements, he will do all to make it a matchless building in Rajputana. But unfortunately the opinion of the country people at large is that all these expenses greatly fill the pectets of the projectors of the plan, and in fact such improvements in this State are intended as whitewash for the Englishman and outsiders, while in the heart of the country there is nothing but desolation and tyranny, justly referred to by you in your issue of 5th July, namely 'Is it a fact or is it not, that the landlords grind their tenantry with all manner of exactions, and when they cannot extort anything from them, take away their grown up daughters to work as their slaves."

STATION TALK.

UMRAWATTI, Nov. 11.—Nothing sensational to chronicle—in fact affairs are looking rather gloomy this side. The chief topic is the threatened famine; even in private correspondence we are asked "how are we faring?" Well, to tell you the truth, we are not in want, thank Providence, but if the exportation of grain is not prevented in time from this province, famine prices will be the result. As it is, articles of consumption are being increased daily by Marwarres and Bunias. Grains of all kinds, old and new, are being largely transported from the Assigned districts, to Puna, Sholapore, &c. The consequences will be rioting and bloodshed; had it not been for the tact of Captain Lane, the district Superintendent of Police, and his satellites, the imminent riot in the city last Sunday, would have become serious. Thanks are due to Captain Lane, for so promptly restoring order.—By some misunderstanding the Municipality refused to pay in toto the value of the Europe medicines indented for by the Civil Surgeon for the Charitable Dispensary, Letters passed between the Surgeon General Medical Department at Secunderabad and the Commissioner, when the latter officer ordered that the medicine got on indent, should be paid for at once, amounting to about Rs. 736. The Municipality had no alternative—and resolved, that the claim be admitted, and of course paid for.—The Chaplain of the Berars, Mr. Haden, has returned from Bombay, but is still very unwell. It is surmised that he will have to go on furlough to recruit his health. One of your contemporaries, the Pi., I think, has mentioned that the Judicial Commissionership of the H. A. D. will shortly become vacant! Evidently your contemporary meant the Inspector Generalship of Berar ! I am credibly informed that Colonel Allardyce, the Judicial Commissioner, has no intention just yet of placing himself "on the shelf." During the temporary absence at Delhi of Colonel Nembhard, the duties of the Commissioner. sionership will devolve on Colonel Allardyce.—The Mahommedans of this city have subscribed a sum of about Rs. 750 for the poor distressed Turks.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Delhi, Nov. 13.—Delhi continues to fill. The railway companies must be doing a roaring trade. Special trains loaded simply with tents frequently come in. Lord George Hamilton will find that the Imperial Assemblage will (according to his ideas) teach our Aryan brethren to use the railways even more than the Prince of Wales's visit did. All the companies should show large profits when the next dividends are declared. There are melancholy people who still aver the Assemblage will never take place, or at any rate that before the time comes the magnificence of it will dwindle away, as numbers of the Indian aristocracy who don't care about coming will be taken seriously ill. Nothing but our being dragged into a European war will prevent Lord Lytton carrying out the pet wish of his Imperial Mistress. It is no secret, I believe, that all this is being got up in accordance with the expressed desire of Her Majesty. Preparations are progressing most favourably. The levelling and turfing of the Viceroy's main street is finished, and the tents are being put up. A number of 24-pounder guns are lying about near the camp, which are, I believe, to be parked on either side of the entrance. The Madras camp will be on the left of the Viceroy, looking from the ridge, and Bombay on the right. Bengal, the North-West, and the Punjab will be placed on the right side of the Alipur-road where the Prince of Wales's camp was. Mysore and Baroda will be near the Nizam's (Metcalfe estate); the Central Indian Chiefs, including Holkar and Scindia, will encamp somewhere close to the village of Azadpur, where the Alipur-road joins the Kurnal-road. The Rajputana Chiefs' camp sites are marked out on the Gurgaon-road. By careful arrangement it has been so managed that none of the camps will be more than about four miles from Delhi. The ruggedness of the suburbs make it a most difficult matter to find eligible plots of ground for the large camps that Rajahs and Nawabs bring with them. The press, the consuls, and the foreigners of distinction (including, I suppose, the Governors of Goa and Pondicherry.) will be located somewhere under the ridge behind the Commander-in-Chief's camp. The visitors who have plots allotted to them are, I believe, placed outside the Kashmir Gate; an enormous tent is standing there already, which the man in charge told me is to be the mess of the Punjab Civilians. It will be a marvel of quick work if the houses in the Metcalfe compound are finished in time. Thousands of workmen appear to be employed, and the contractors are straining every nerve to have all ready betimes. Delhi will profit by their labours, for it will be a great addition to the civil lines having that fine old Metcalfe-house habitable once more, to say nothing of the four new ones that are being built. This station is very badly off for houses, not in num ber so much as in quality, most of them not being fit to live in in the hot weather. The exhibition of jewellery which is to be held here for a week will be a sight worth seeing. One of the public buildings is, I am told, to be kept for this purpose, and jewellers from all parts of India have been invited to bring up their goods One man from Southern India has, it is said, threatened to bring up fifty lakhs' worth. If this is to be the value of one stall, a strong police guard will be necessary to protect the treasures that are to be exhibited. There ought to be a good sale if there is only one Rajah to lead the way. The Puttiala Chief will be much missed by the jewellers; he was, I have always heard, a most successful friend for a vendor of precious stones and ornaments.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

Movement of Troops.—The 39th Regiment N.I., under command of Colonel Fraser, ordered to join the Delhi Camp, left Barrackpore on Monday, Nov. 13. After the breaking up of the Imperial Camp they are to march to Meerut, their future destination, according to the relief orders.

The Maharajah of Cashmere.—His Highness the Maharajah of Cashmere arrived at Madhopore on the morning of the 16th Nov. He was met en route by Major Henderson, c.s.r., the Resident at Jammu, Mr. Burney, the Deputy Commissioner, and Mr. Rivaz, the Assistant Commissioner. The cortége consisted of eight elephants and two squadrons of the Maharajah's cavalry.

Testimonial to Mr. Hector.—It is said that a handsome testimonial is to be presented by the branch agents and junior officers of the Bank of Bengal to Mr. J. Hector, whose retirement from the office of Deputy Secretary we have already announced. Some surprise is felt that he should be leaving the Bank of Bengal in the prime of life. He has distinguished himself in the Bank, and his pamphlet on the purchase of railways by the State and some other subjects have carned for him a high reputation. A man with versatile talents of this sort has no future in India; the services are blocked by covenanted and uncovenanted, who jog on in slow promotion, and lock the door against all outsiders, whatever their merits may be.

Central Asian Trading Company.—The local paper says that about fifty-two horse-loads of a further consignment of goods belonging to the Central Asian Trading Company have safely reached Leh, en route to Lahore, at which latter place Mr. Russell is profitably disposing of the consignment brought down by himself. Also that Mr. Dalgleish continues prosperously carrying on the Company's business at Yarkund, and hopes to be able to return, in charge of the final consignment of the venture, next month. All things considered, the operations of the Company as pioneers of English trade and civilisation in Central Asia have heretofore shown satisfactory results, in the continuance of which we have reason to believe.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT AT THE HOOGHLY BRIDGE.—On Thursday evening a serious accident occurred at the Hooghly Bridge, in the course of which an employé of the Port Commissioners, Mr. Rustrich, nearly lost his life. It would appear that the syphon plug of of the gas pipes fell off, and the gas which escaped took fire. serious accident resulted from the ignition, as the night watchman gave the alarm, and with the aid of the bridge authorities the fire was put out. On the alarm of fire being however given, Mr. Rustthe foreman of the Port Commissioner's workshops, who hastened to the spot, was about descending the wooden ladder from the bridge to the pontoon when he missed his footing, and fell into the river. No rope or any other means of delivery being at hand, he would almost to a certainty have met with a watery grave had it not been for the wonderful presence of mind of the officer in that the total or the winderful presence of infinite of the other in charge of the bridge, Mr. Pereira, who immediately snatched from the head of a policeman standing by his turban, and lowered it to the rescue of Mr. Rustrich, who seized the turban and was pulled up. It is certainly due to the commendable and timely action of Mr. Pereira that Mr. Rustrich was thus saved .- Indian Daily News, Nov. 20.

The Storm-wave.—Papers about the storm-wive keep coming in, and one is gradually beginning to realise the extent of the disaster. The officer at Patuakholly describes the wave, some twenty feet high, as rushing inland for nearly four miles sweeping away nearly all that it met. But half the people, and in some places only a quarter, were left; and they barely escaped by climbing up trees. Even this would not save some; a dead man's body was found hanging on a tree, and quite twelve feet from the ground. The birds were destroyed, even the crows. Dead eagles and vultures lie in the fields and along the river banks. Wherever the storm-wave has passed, its course is marked by fallen trees, empty and half-scoured plinths, withering fields, and corpses. In one place, a howlah near Machukholly, only ten persons—eight men and two women—were left out of eighty. The Magistrate of Noakholly writes that relief circles have been formed, but that very little can be done, for there is no carriage; roads are broken, and the bridges gone, and only one or two boats are left. The men will not work, and have to be forcibly enlisted as police and peons. Tens of thousands of cattle have perished; the stench from the dead bodies of men and animals is in some places unbearable. The survivors are demoralised; bands of robbers lay their hands on all they can find; women's bodies are discovered with hands or feet cut off for the sake of their ornaments.—Pioneer, Nov. 25.

THE DELHI GATHERING.—The following instructions are published in the General Orders by his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief:—
"A series of Imperial Rifle Matches will be held at the Delhi Imperial Assemblage Camp, the details of which will be promulgated to the troops hereafter. Officers and men, European and native, of regiments which will not be at Delhi, desiring to compete, and whose services can be spared, may be granted leave to proceed under private arrangements to Delhi, so as to arrive by the 20th December, 1876, to the ments to Delhi, so as to arrive by the 20th December, 1876, to the extent of ten men per Infantry, five per Cavalry Regiment, and two per battery of Royal Artillery. The men of Infantry regiments so proceeding from the stations north of Delhi will be attached to regiments in the first division, and those from the stations south of Delhi to regiments in the second division. The camps at Delhi will, we (Pioneer) believe, be in charge of the following officers: will, we (Proneer) believe, be in charge of the following officers:—Captain the Hon. C. Dutton, Assistant Quartermaster General, for the Viceroy's; Captain Pottinger, for Bombay; Captain John Gordon, for Madras; Captain J. S. Frith, for Bengal; Captain Marshall, for the Punjab camp; Captain Barrow, for Oudh; Captain Beauchamp and Mr. Mulock, for the N. P. W.; Captain Hughes Hallett, for the Central Provinces; and Captain Boileau, for Burmah.

SAD CASE OF DROWNING.—The Pioneer's correspondent at Etah writes on the 20th November:—"A gloom has been cast over the station by the death of young Thomas Hunt, aged eighteen years. He was drowned in the Kalli Nadi, about eighteen miles from here. His father, who is a sub-engineer in the Irrigation Department, was surveying on the bank of the Naddi. The young lad wishing to bathe got into the water, and on being cautioned by his father, said that he could swim; directly he had lost his footing, however, he began to cry for help. A moonshi jumped in and succeeded in seizing him, but both having got into a powerful whirlpool the moonshi could do no more than keep himself and his charge from sinking, which he did splendidly for some time: to get out of the ring seemed impossible. A wall-meaning Brahmin servant the ring seemed impossible. A well-meaning Brahmin servant, who was also a good swimmer, then went out and snatched the lad out of the moonshi's grasp. Then a syce who had followed the Brahmin was soon drawn under the water and never rose again. Then the Brahmin sank with the boy; the moonshi alone escaped, and that with considerable difficulty. Dragging with nets had then to be done, and young Hunt's body was the last to be found, having been nearly 3½ hours under water. It was soon conveyed to Kasgani, where the native doctor did all he could to restore animation, but to no purpose.'

THE LATE CYCLONE.—The accounts of the loss of life and devastation caused by the late cyclone in Bengal add to the number of persons who have lost their lives, and tend to confirm the impression that the calamity was one of the worst that has ever happened. The Indian Daily News says:—"Our Dacca correspondent tells us that from official sources he obtains the information that one hundred thousand human beings were drowned in the storm-wave! But he has good grounds for believing this to be below the mark. He concludes that two hundred thousand human beings and the same number of cattle have been drowned. About fifty thousand persons are probably in the greatest danger of starvation, having lost everything. And all the live-stock are in danger of dying of hunger and thirst, for the sand has filled all the tanks. Dribbles of news come into Dacca every day, proving that the catastrophe is far more terrible than was at first supposed. Mr. Harney, an intelligent and influential zemindar of Dacca, has lost five thousand of his ryots, and of course the destruction to his property is great. He lately built a very strong bungalow in the submerged district. This house is the only one for miles around that has not been swept away. A hundred persons were saved by being floated on to its roof. This shows that bungalows can be built strong enough to resist a storm-wave, and that consequently most of the dreadful loss of life might have been prevented if the houses had been built like Mr. Harney's bungalow. There is bitter mourning in many a house in Dacca. Our correspondent spoke yesterday to a native gentleman who had lost eleven relatives. Such a sudden and appalling calamity has probably not happened in these parts for the last two centuries."

THE VICEROY AND THE PLANTERS.—The Viceroy, when in the Kangra Valley amongst the planters, the other day, received an address from those gentlemen, the burden of which was that they wanted to have greater facilities than they possess for changing their paper money into silver. Lord Lytton in his reply to the address, which we copy from the Pioneer, said, in reference to this particular point:

It is said to have been the custom of the old Greek exiles to carry with them in their wanderings, wherever they went, a handful of their native earth. But you, gentlemen, have carried with you, not indeed a piece of English earth, but an abundant store of those English habits and qualities which improve and embellish every piece of earth beneath their beneficent influence. Where you settle, there the church and the school spring up; and round the church and the school the graceful villa, the thriving village, the blooming graden. And now having exercitatively parcel for the wellthe blooming garden. And now, having congratulated myself on the welcome you have given me, let me also offer to you, gentlemen, my sincere congratulations on the success with which you have established your domicile in this delightful valley—a valley which so far resembles the happy valley of Rasselas, that nothing seems wanting to the happiness of its in-habitants except the fulfilment of those wishes which happiness itself creates. This, at least, is the impression I derive from a sympathetic attention to the memorial you have presented to me. I gather from that memorial that your enterprise has been, commercially and financially, so successful that at the present moment you are actually suffering from what our French neighbours would call an embarrassment of riches, in other words, from a plethora of currency notes, which you cannot get rid of fast enough—(laughter). As a consolation for the misfortunes of less favoured mortals, proverbial philosophy assures us that every cloud has its silver lining; but in the present case, gentlemen, it is the absence of a silver lining to these pockets full of notes, which seems to be the only cloud on your prosperity—(cheers and laughter). Well, gentlemen, I am sure you will not expect from me here, and now, an immediate or definite answer to the request contained in your memorial—(no, no). You will understand that I cannot give you such a final answer without communicating on the subject of your memorial with the Financial Department of my Government. But I will lose no time in doing this, and shall do it with a strong bias in favour of your wishes-(hear, hear).

CHOLERA IN NELLOR.—We (Madras Times) regret to hear that cholera has broken out in the Nellor District to a serious extent. Additional medical aid has been despatched without delay, and nothing will be left undone to circumscribe and suppress this dread disease, that is apt to tread so closely in the steps of famine.

DACOITY IN KARNUL,-The last session held at Karnúl reveals a startling increase in the crime of dacoity. There were no less than nine cases, and in these nine cases no less than 112 prisoners charged with the above offence. Of the total number charged 55 were found guilty, and sentenced to various periods of imprisonment, ranging from eighteen months to four years.

DACOITIES.—We learn from Chitor, in the Madras Presidency, that "during the last fortnight more dacoities have been reported than in the past two years. In the Carvetnuggur zemindari dacoity has become so systematic that the villagers have applied to the district magistrate either to increase the police force or to permit them to arm themselves and resist the attacks of the robbers.

DEATHS FROM STARVATION .- "Death from starvation" was the verdict lately returned at an inquest on the body of a Mussulman at Bangalor. Reports of other deaths from the same cause are not wanting in either of the afflicted presidencies, but they are unreliable. It turns out that the two children reported by the Times of India's Shoolapur correspondent to have died in Mr. Grant's (the Collector's) compound, died ten weeks ago!

FAMINE RELIEF .- Mr. Thornhill, the first member of the Revenue Board, who has been arranging famine relief at Bellary, has left for athree weeks' tour in the western taluk of the district. The Additional Sub-Collector is superintending relief works in and around the town of Bellary; 44,000 coolies are now employed. The Madras Board of Revenue is engaging European and Eurasian overseers for employment on relief works in the various famine districts, on salaries ranging from seventy-five to one hundred and twenty ru-pees, inclusive of a famine allowance. We are told that a large number of applicants are daily besieging the Secretary's Office.

THE NORTH-EAST MONSOON.—Rain has fallen in several parts of the Madras Presidency since Nov. 17, and we may consider that the N.E. monsoon has fairly commenced at last, though nearly a month behind hand. The Madras Mail reports a good fall of rain month behind hand. The Madras Mail reports a good fall of rain north and south of Bellary on Thursday evening, and some showers in the town of Bellary. At 1.30 p.m. on Friday it looked as if the rain was about to recommence. On Thursday rain fell at Salem, Cuddapah, Tiruputty, Beypore, and places round about; and on Friday morning there was every appearance of a further downpour in those localities.

THE GOVERNOR AND THE FAMINE.—If the Duke of Buckingham, says the Madras Mail, reads Indian newspapers, it should strike him that the reticence of his own Government about famine matters offers a marked and not very creditable contrast to the candour exhibited by the Bombay Government. "The ink of a Secretary's signature in Bombay, to a resolution about the distress in that Presidency, is hardly dry ere the document is communicated to the Press, in the most public-spirited manner; but in Madras almost everything is bottled up till it has soured by keeping, and the country is the prey of mischievous rumours regarding the Government's policy, or no policy.

EXPECTED LOOTING.—A Manantoddy correspondent writes to the EXPECTED LOOTING.—A Manantoddy correspondent writes to the Madras Mail:—"Last Sunday, Nov. 12, was the expected loot day here, but I am happy to state that owing to the interference of the Officiating Deputy Collector of Wynad, and the vigilance of the police, it passed off quietly. Long before ten A.M. an unusually large gathering of two to three thousand Canarese coolies had assembled at the weekly market-place, evidently bent on pillage. Soon after eleven the Deputy Collector was out to see how things were going on; the police mustered about twenty-five strong, and with their inspector were ready to quell any attempt at loot. The coolies took their departure by three P.M. for their several estates. No raggi whatever was brought for sale. Rice was sold at six seers for the runge.

CHOLERA IN BELLARY.—A correspondent of the Madras Athenaum thus writes of the cholera:—"Since my last letter matters have arrived at a very serious crisis in this place and in the districts immediately around. Cholera is upon us, in the fort, bazaars, and villages. Endeavours have for some time past been made to conceal the fact. Now, however, things have come to a pass which renders further concealment unnecessary, and in fact the case is at the present moment so grave, with every probability of becoming more so, that further concealment would be criminal. It cannot be said that it is for want of food or necessaries that these people have died, nor could the same reasons be put forward as the cause of disease. The whole secret of the visitation lies in bad management and what looks like culpable ignorance, want of capacity, or sheer carelessness on the part of those who are placed in good positions and paid big figures for looking after emergencies of this kind. From the first appearance of famine people looked forward, as a matter of course, to the necessity of large relief works being set on foot, and thoughtful men were not wanting to point out the ill results which in every instance ensues by bringing together a tremendous gathering of the native population. This morning, on the parade grounds of the European troops, the medical officer in charge, Dr. Johnson, cautioned the men against frequenting the bazaars or m xing in any way with the natives of the villages.

PROPOSED RELIEF WORKS.—We are informed by the local Times that the Madras Government ordered the following telegram to be sent to the Government of India with reference to a letter from the Madras Chamber of Commerce suggesting as a relief work the commencement of the earthworks for the proposed Bellary-Gudduck Railway:—"A fortnight's time must determine whether famine is inevitable. In that case concentration of relief labour is most necessary; already upwards of 50,000 employed on scattered relief works in one district out of three. If famine contingency arises, we propose commencement of embankment work of Bellary-Gunduck Railway, which traverses most part of the suffering district, as State work. Please telegraph reply." The country across which the proposed railway would run has been surveyed for across which the proposed railway would run has been surveyed for the purpose, with the result that it has been pronunced by the Consulting Engineer for Railways as "fertile, populous, highly-cultivated, and regarded, from a railway engineer's point of view, generally 'favourable;'" and as the line is regarded by Colonel Shortland "as the most promising project for railway extension in the whole of Southern India," and the line to Tuticorin has been completed, the Chamber, the Chairman says, "entertain a confident hope that the Government will cordially approve of their request that the Supreme Government may be invited to obtain from the Secretary of State, by telegraph, sanction for employing the redundant labour now available in the manner recommended by the mercantile community."

PRINCELY LIBERALITY.—A correspondent writing to us from Cuddapah says that a merchant living at Prodalur, in the Cuddapah District, by name Narain Rungiah Chetty, has been for the past two months feeding at his own expense upwards of 2,000 people each daily. He commenced by giving cooked rice and the number of people rose to 8,000. After a fortnight he discontinued giving rice and substituted a paste made of ragit known in Tamil as "keeloo." This he is continuing at considerable expense. Mr. Narain Rungiah Chetty has no stored grain with him, but purchases what he requires in the Madras market, at six measures the rupee, and it is carried by rail to Prodalur. In such a time of distress as we are carried by rail to Prodalur. In such a time of distress as we are now passing through, we are of opinion that instances of such princely liberality should be drawn prominent attention to, and pour encourager les autres we think a kind word or a brief and friendly recognition from Government would not be out of place, to say nothing being of highly deserved. In the District Durbars that are to be held next month to celebrate the assumption of the Imperial Title by her Majesty the Queen, we trust that Mr. Narain Rungiah Chetty will be duly honoured, as he merits. With many of us it is an accepted article of belief that the average rich native is the bodily presentment of selfishness and hardness of heart. How untrue and unkind is this estimate there are hundreds of instances to prove to the contrary, and many natives, "heathen" though they be, might well set an example to us, in the practical, large-hearted liberal manner in which they look after their poor and needy.—Madras Athenœum, Nov. 21.

THE FAMINE IN WESTERN INDIA.

THE SALE OF BAD GRAIN.—The Government has published the following resolution regarding preventive measures against the sale of grain unfit for food:—"Government have received information that much old and inferior grain is being imported into the districts now affected by scarcity, and that some of it is so bad sales in the same of the second of the to be unfit for human consumption. The attention of all officers employed on relief works should be drawn to this subject. All officers should use such personal influence as they may possess to on relief works, and magistrates should use their powers, under any existing law, to check the sale of unwholesome food. It is very necessary, however, at the present juncture, that great care should be taken not to interfere with any grain which is not viously untit for food. If, at this present time, the food placed within the reach of the people is of unwholesome quality, it is probable that the dearth may be accompanied by a pestilence, and hence the great necessity of providing as for as proceeding. hence the great necessity of providing, as far as practicable, against the use of bad grain."

The Bombay Government are busily pushing forward their famine relief measures. We hear that two extensive works have been sanctioned, and are to be proceeded with at once. Cattle are being transported from the famine districts to places where fodder is obtainable. His Excellency the Governor has forwarded to Mr. Morarjee Goculdas Rs. 500, and the Hon. J. Gibbs his first monthly subscription of Rs. 100 for the Deccan and Khandesh Relief Fund. His Excellency has subscribed in all Rs. 2,000 through the various committees for the relief of the poor in the distressed districts, the amount being distributed as follows:—Bombay, Rs. .500, Poona, Rs. 250, Ahmednuggur Rs. 250, Sholapore Rs. 250, Dharwar Rs. 250, Belgaum Rs. 250, Kaladgi, Rs. 250. The Hon. Mr. Gibbs has, in addition to the Rs. 100 a month just mentioned, subscribed Rs. 100 through the Poona, and a like sum through the Sholapore committees. It is to be hoped that the European community will not be slow to follow the examples so generously set them. We have already mentioned the donations of Mr. Pedder and Dr. Blaney; but, with the exception of those gentlemen, the Governor and Mr. Gibbs have as yet been the sole contributors amongst the European community to the funds which have been raised in Bombay for the relief of the sufferers in the famine districts. The Europeans were waiting for the expected public meeting, but that having been—unfortunately, as we think—postponed to the end of January, it is the more necessary that the example set by Sir Philip Wodehouse and the Hon. Mr. Gibbs should be followed without a delay that might be open to misconception. Great praise is due to the members of the committee of the Deccan and Khandesh Relief Fund; by their energy they have collected a very large sum of money. No less than Rs. 73,000 have been got together for this fund and the cattle fund during the short space of a month. This fund and the cattle fund during the short space of a month.

Miscellaneous.

VISITORS TO THE DELHI ASSEMBLAGE.—The following native gentlemen from Amedabad have, we understand, been invited by Lord Lytton to be present at the Viceregal Durbar in January next—Mr. Premabhoy Hemabhoy, the Hon. Rao Bahadoor Bechardass Ambaidass, c.s.i., Rao Bahadoor Gopalrao Hurry Deshmukh, Judge of the Small Cause Court, and Cowasjee Muncherjee.— Times of India.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. TROOP-SHIP "JUMNA."—Her Majesty's Indian troop-ship Jumna, 4,173 tons, Captain John D'Arcy, arrived in harbour on Tuesday morning, Nov. 21, from Portsmouth, which she left on the 18th October, calling at Plymouth 19th October, Malta 30th, Port Said 4th November, and Suez 6th November. She has brought 73 officers, 12 ladies, 7 children, 1,062 men, 73 women, and 90 children. During the voyage there were two deaths, one of a woman, and a child. The Jumna experienced very fine weather during the passage; the N. E. monsoon was very light until the Red Sea was reached, where she had a strong head. The Jumna will leave Bombay on the 5th December with the 16th Lancers.

THE CREW OF THE "MONARCH."—By Moulmein advices, bearing date the 6th inst., we learn that some of the crew of the ill-fated Monarch have been saved. From their statement, it appears that the ship turned over early one morning, and that a few of the men managed to keep themselves afloat by clinging to spars and masts. After being several hours in the water they were picked up by some native craft and taken on to Cochin. It seems strange that these men should have been landed at Cochin without the authorities there knowing something about them, more especially as the suspected loss of the Monarch was telegraphed by the Master Attendant in Bombay to all the stations along the coast.—Times of India, Nov. 27.

Two Buffaloes Killed by a Tiger at Mahableshwur.—On Monday last a large tiger made its appearance at Mahableshwur, near the "Bombay Point," and killed two buffaloes belonging to a native, which happened to be grazing at the time. The owner lost no time in reporting the matter to the Superintendent of Mahableshwur, who despatched shikarees to bring the man-eater to grief, but before they reached the spot he disappeared. It appears that he was so lazy after feeding himself on the buffaloes that he was unable to leave the place for several hours, but the shikarees were much behind the time in reaching the spot. We hope some of our Poona sporting gentlemen will take this opportunity in bagging this mouster tiger.—Poona Observer, Nov. 23.

RAILWAY WORKS.—The Agent Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company recently sent a letter to the Consulting Engineer for Railways, proposing to start additional works beyond the company's immediate requirements in the famine districts. In his reply, the Consulting Engineer approves generally of the proposals and accords sanction to the additional amounts on maintenance account for the current half-year:—Kussara to Bhosawul, Rs. 45,000; South-East Line, Rs. 40,000; total Rs. 85,000. He also states that much ballast is still required on the line, especially between Igatpura and Bhosawal, and advantage will be taken of this emergency to do as much as possible. The Bombay Government have approved of these proposals and have pleasure in acknowledging Mr. Le Mesurier's efforts to assist at this juncture.

HIS HIGHNESS THE NIZAM.—His Highness the Nizam is expected to arrive here on the 16th proximo en route to Delhi. Bungalows are being prepared in Poona for the reception of his Highness and suite. The Eagle's Nest, the Council Hall, the mansion of Behramjee Jeejeebhoy, Esq. c.s.i., Bounty Hall, and Mr. P. H. Cama's Bungalow, are being fitted up to meet the wants of his Highness and his personal circle. Arrangements are also being made for the occupation of the Royal Family Hotel by some of his Highness's suite. These houses will be occupied during the few days which his Highness will stay in Poona, both on the way to and from Delhi. A large number of carriages are being got ready by the G. I. P. Railway Company to meet the wants of the Nizam and suite. Major Havelock, Private Secretary, has gone on before to make the necessary arrangements at Delhi for his Highness's reception and comfort during the time of the Delhi Assemblage.—Deccan Herald, Nov. 24.

The Pilorim Traffic.—We have repeatedly called attention to the unsatisfactory manner in which the Government of India is permitting the Mohammedan pilgrim trade to be carried on from Bombay by certain foreign shipowners, who are naturally taking every advantage they can of the unwarrantable delay of the authorities in introducing the amended Native Passenger Ships Act. A few days ago the steamer Juno left Bombay for Jeddah with over 600 pilgrims huddled together on deck, and it is said that, from one cause or another, a man died in her even before she left the harbour, and the body was quietly sent on shore in a native boat. We now learn that the same company are intending to despatch the Mars on or about the 30th instant with 600 deck passengers. If any mishap occurs from the present disgraceful state of the pilgrim trade the Government of India will have much to answer for.—Bombay Gazette.

ESTATES OF THE LATE COLONEL MEADOWS TAYLOR.—On Tuesday last, before Sir Charles Sergent, the sitting judge in Chambers, High Court, Mr. Cleveland (of Messrs. Hearn and Cleveland appeared on behalf of Mr. Wm. Loudon, Administrator General, and presented a petition praying that an order might be made for a grant to him of letters of administration of the estate of the late Colonel Phillip Meadows Taylor, C.S.I., of the Retired List. The petition among other things stated that some time in the month of June, 1873, the Colonel made a will whereby he appointed his two brothers and his daughter, Miss Allicia Mary Taylor, executors and executrix thereof; and that on the 11th of February last he made a codicil. On the 13th of May last Colonel Taylor died in the South of France, leaving Government paper worth about Rs. 22,600, which are at present in the Presidency of Bombay and in the local limits of the Bombay High Court. His Lordship made an order as prayed for.

Loan to Belgam.—Government are prepared to grant a loan of Rs. 15,000 to the Municipality of Belgam, but at the usual rate of interest, which will add very little to the cost of the grain, to enable them to purchase grain, for the purpose of retailing it to the people of the town of Belgam at cost price, as the supply of food grains in the markets of that town is scanty and insufficient, and the rates are high and daily increasing. The Collector is not to interfere with either the purchase or the sale of the grain. These arrangements are to be made by the municipal officers. Orders have also been sent by telegram, authorising the commencement of the Belgam and Kaladgi road as a relief work, the funds to be provided from the amount set down and provisionally sanctioned, for metalling the main road in the Belgam district. An estimate for the improvement it is proposed to make to the Kaladgi road is forwarded immediately to the P. W. Department.

Sholapur.—We hear from Sholapur that the Hon. Mr. Rogers has been on a visit there; that Government has authorised the conveyance of cattle by rail, free of charge, to the ghaust, where allotments for grazing have been made. Thus the cattle will be saved. The owner is allowed to accompany his own cattle. This is a great boon to the poor people, though it will be difficult to arrange for the feeding of the families in the husband's absence. Strong women and children can be employed on the relief works which are now fully organised at Sholapur and the neighbourhood. Mrs. Grant's care of the children is beyond all praise, in which work she is now being aided by the ladies of Puna. We hear that several of the schools in Puna have at the request of Lady Staveley undertaken to do work for the good object of clothing the women and children who are weak and destitute. Every effort is going on well for the relief of different classes of the people, those in absolute want receiving grain gratis. But the strain on the Collector and Mrs. Grant must be very great, and all should do what they can to lighten it as much as possible.—Deccan Herald.

DEPARTURE OF H.M.'s TROOPSHIP "MALABAR."—Her Majesty's Indian troop-ship Malabar, 4,173 tons, 700 h.p., Captain E. REDUCTION OF CIVILIANS IN THE N. W. PROVINCES. No. 81 (Public), dated India Office, London, 13th July 1876.

From H.M.'s Secretary of State for India, to H.E. the Right Hon. the Governor-General of India in Council.

Para. 1. The despatch of your Excellency's predecessor in Council in the Financial Department dated 25th February, No. 70 of 1876, relative to the measures which it is proposed to adopt for the reduction of the surplus number of civilians in the North-Western Provinces, has been considered by me in Council.

2. I think the circumstances which led to this discussion fully justified the appointment, by your Excellency's predecessor in Council, of a Special Committee of Inquiry, and I am of opinion that the report of the Committee contains many valuable suggestions. I do not propose to consider in detail the causes of the retardation of promotion in the North-West Provinces ;--I accept, as a fact, that it is so serious as to threaten the effi-ciency of the administration.

3. I must, however, as a preliminary remark, emphatically state that rules such as those of Lord Dalhousie, framed for administrative pure oses, and notifications such as those of the Civil Servi e Commissioners, indicating existing rates of salaries in various branches of the service, must not b held to pledge Government to maintain particular offices or forms of administrative agency, or be regarded as guarantees for any particular rates of salary or prospects of promotion. This must be clearly understood. But, on the other hand, I am prepared to deal considerately with a retardation of promotion so general and so prolonged as seriously to affect a large sec-

4. I accept the conclusion of your Excellency's predecessor in Council, that the circumstances of the present abnormal stagnation of promotion require and justify an unusual and exceptional remedy, but I cannot, after much consideration, approve of the particular measures proposed.

5. It seems to me that it would be very objectionable to grant large pensions to young men who have done little service, and who will return to England to live as annuitants for long terms of years. Such a remedy would be of the costliest kind, and the bestowal of pensions upon persons who have not earned them by any adequate service to the State would constitute an injurious precedent.

6. It is then to be considered whether there are not other measures either proposed by the Special Committee or suggested in the original memorial of the civil servants, which are not open to the same serious objection.

7. First, one of the causes of the block in promotion in the North-West Provinces Service appears to be that many of the highest posts in the Non-Regulation Provinces, to which members of the Civil Service would otherwise have been appointed, are occupied by military and uncovenanted officers, who, on account of a difference in the scale of pensions, do not retire so early as covenanted civilians. I would sanction the grant to a retire so early as covenanted civilians. I would sanction the grant to a limited number of military officers in civil employ of a bonus of such sum as you might think fit to offer, but not exceeding, in any case, one year's pay, or the sum of Rs. 22,000, with permission to retire on the terms of the Government General Order of the 1st January, 1876. These retirements would be in excess of the ninety allowed to the army at large. The offer should include officers not within two years of colonel's allowances. Similarly, I am prepared to sanction the grant of bonus to uncovenanted officers in addition to their pension, as proposed by the Special Committee, with a like reservation as to those who are soon to be superannuated. With the half of the vacancies thus created, your Excellency will have no difficulty in providing employment for the civilians of the North-West Provinces suitable to their standing in the service, and especially for those belonging to the overstocked years of 1861, 1862, and 1863. making arrangements for this purpose, you will not in any degree lose sight of the just claims of the officers who are already in the Commissions of the Non-Regulation Provinces.

8. Secondly, with respect to covenanted civilians, I am willing to allow during the current year any servant of twenty years' service, that is, of the year 1856 and previous years, who has not completed the full term of residence, to retire on a pension bearing to £1,000 per annum the proportion which his term of actual residence bears to twenty-one years, the full term required for full pension. I see no objection to such a relaxation of the pension rules, provided the principle of granting pensions proportioned to the work done be observed. The proposed option of capitalising such portion of a pension as may be in excess of £500 per annum might also be permitted. Beyond this any relaxation of the pension rules in favour of covenanted civilians will not be desirable.

9. Thirdly, I do not approve any scheme of a permanent arrangement involving a guarantee that a certain salary shall always be received by civilians of a certain standing. In many cases slowness of promotion at one period of a civilian's service is compensated by rapidity of promotion at another period. I cannot therefore take cognizance of individual cases of hearthchia. But I are of explicit that the way regular reignances of the hardship. But I am of opinion that the very peculiar circumstances of the present block in promotion, depending upon a series of events which are not likely to recur, justify the application of a temporary remedy. This may be done by granting personal allowances at the rates proposed by the Special Committee in the 39th paragraph of its report. I will sanction those rates for a period of five years, beginning from the 1st of May last, under the conditions stated in the 40th and 41st paragraphs of the Report of the Committee.

10. I desire that inquiry may be made as to whether the state of the junior ranks in the Bombay Civil Service, and also those in the service of Lower Bengal, is such as to call for any measures similar to those which I have now sanctioned for the North-West Provinces. It seems especially worthy of consideration whether the proposed pensions to those covenanted civilians who have resided less than the full term of years might not be made applicable, and this would have the special advantage in Bengal that it might be possible to transfer to some of the vacancies thus created civilians from the service of the North-West Provinces.

11. Fourthly, it seems to be generally admitted that administrative efficiency would be secured by increasing the number of district charges in the North-West Provinces. The present would be a favourable time for the introduction of such alterations as are deemed necessary. It may also be said that salaries in the North-West are not well balanced, there being too many very highly paid and too few moderately good appointments. I desire, then, that your Excellency in Council will consider whether it would not be expedient to introduce, either wholly or partially, a system of grades of senior and junior Judges and Collectors, such as have been created in the Lower Provinces, the opportunity being taken to form such additional Collectorates as may be really required, and to make a corresponding increase in the number of Joint-Magistrates. I shall be prepared to sanction any scheme having these objects in view, which may commend itself to your Excellency in Council, provided that no increase in the aggregate expenditure will be ultimately involved by the final redistribution. By allowing the new offices to be created, in anticipation of the savings to be made available as other offices fall vacant, some relief will be afforded to the service, while the administration will derive benefit

12. All those measures may, it appears to me, be adopted, but it will also be necessary for your Excellency in Council to take every suitable opportunity of drafting men from the overstocked years into the Political Department, and into available vacancies in other Departments.

13. The Special Committee have pointed out that unless preventive in the property of the measures are speedily taken, the same stagnation of promotion which has occurred in the North-West Provinces will shortly be felt by the civilians employed in some of the so-called Non-Regulation Provinces. I think the time has now come to lay down a new rule as regards some of those provinces, and, unless your Excellency in Council is distinctly of a contrary opinion, I desire that the appointments to the Commissioners of Oudh and the Central Provinces, and to the administration of the Non-Regula-tion Provinces attached to the Governments of Bengal and the North-West Provinces, be regulated henceforth in accordance with the principle applied by the 24th and 25th of Victoria, Cap. 54, to the Regulation Provinces. With respect to the other Non-Regulation Provinces, namely, the Punjab, Assam, British Burmah and Scinde, some admixture of military officers seems still to be advantageous. The proportion of military appointed, however, should in no case exceed one to every three civilians, and for nowever, should in no case exceed one to every three exhaust, and for the present, till the proper proportion is attained, you should not ap-point to these commissions any military officers unless some special grounds exist in any case for a departure from this rule. Should there appear reason for the appointment of an uncovenanted servant to the administration of any Non-regulation Provinces, my sanction to the nomination must previously be obtained. These instructions are not intended to interfere with persons who are now in office, and, of course, will not affect the operation of the 6th section of 33rd Victoria, Cap. 3, empowering the employment of natives of India of approved merit and ability in the Civil Service of India. I have also to notice an expedient which has occasionally been resorted to in Regulation Provinces, of creating, for the purpose of promoting uncovenanted servants, offices outside the Schedules of the Act of 1861, but invested with substantially the same functions as the appointments included in the Schedules. I request that arrangements of this kind may not be repeated.

In conclusion, I feel it necessary to state distinctly that these Orders involve no kind of pledge, and that they confer upon no person any title to claim in the future as a personal right, in the event of their being modified, any benefit which would have accrued to him from their operation; but they simply indicate the present policy of the Government.

ARTHUR HOWELL Officiating Secretary to the Government of India.

Ecclesiastical.—The Bishop of Calcutta has appointed the Rev. Brooke Deedes, incumbent of St. Crispin, Bermondsey, as his domestic chaplain.

Missing Ship.—The large ship Grand Duke, of Liverpool 1,400 tons register, belonging to Messrs. Wright, and bound from Calcutta, with a cargo of over 1,100 quarters of linseed, is now greatly over due, it being 167 days since she left India.

LEBONG TEA COMPANY.—The report of the Lebong Tea Company estimates that the receipts for this year will be about equal to those of 1875, and an interim dividend of 3 per cent., free of income-tax, is announced as payable on the 16th inst.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.—In the report of the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway Company a net surplus is shown of £26,863, after covering the guaranteed interest, amounting to £26,863. The company's proportion will admit of an excess dividend of \( \frac{1}{2} \) per cent. for the half year; whereas in December last year the excess declared was only 10d, per cent.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY .- The East Indian Railway Company announce that at the half-yearly meeting, convened for the 4th proximo, the board of directors will recommend the payment of a dividend of 13s, per cent. on the consolidated stock, in addition to the guaranteed interest. At this time last year the excess payment was 5s. 7d. per cent.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steam-ship Hydaspes left on Thursday for the East with £272,255 in specie. Of this sum £500 was in gold for Aden, £20,000 for Calcutta, and £655 for Galle, the balance being in silver; to Bombay £38,600, to Calcutta £96,000, to Penang £35,600, to Singapore £11,600, to Hong Kong £30,300, and to Shanghai £39,000.

OUDH AND ROHLKUND RAILWAY.—The general meeting of the shareholders in the above company was held on Dec. 13, at the City Terminus Hotel, Cannon-street. Mr. John Pender, M.P., presided. The report was taken as read. The Chairman moved the adoption of the report, which was seconded by Mr. L. R. Reid, and, after a short discussion, was carried unanimously. A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the proceedings.

SCOTCHMEN AND INDIA.-Dr. George Smith, of Edinburgh, in a recent lecture on India, remarked that the majority of the men who consolidated and civilised India were Scotchmen. Scotchmen, too, advanced its commerce, and Scotch missionaries had done much to Christianise India. The names of Dr. Mackay, of Thurso, and Dr. Ewart, of Aberdeenshire, were still fragrant in India, and the name of Dr. Duff was now honoured in Scotland.

MADRAS RAILWAY.—The report of the Madras Railway Company for the first half of 1876 states that, compared with the corresponding period of 1875, the earnings from all sources were £283,011, against £295,030, and the net earnings were £77,124, against £295,030. The working expenses were therefore $205,887 and respectively. The failure of the rice crop was the chief £202,559 respectively. cause of the reduction in revenue, the falling off in the traffic under that head being £18,785. The destruction of so many important bridges has been a great drawback to the company, but their reconstruction is making progress.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM INDIA .- The Crocodile, Captain Sharpe, arrived at Portsmouth on the 8th inst. from Bombay. She made a rapid passage, but encountered bad weather after leaving Gibraltar. She brings the A, B, and D Batteries of the A Brigade, R.H.A., consisting of 407 men, and their families, two invalids, ten insane persons, 445 time-expired men, and fifty-six men of various details; forty officers also took passage. During the voyage Veterinary-Surgeon Paton committed suicide by jumping overboard, and a soldier (lunatic) attempted to drown himself. Several deaths have occurred on board.

THE KIRWEE BOOTY.—Colonel G. Holmes, late R.A., and Lieutenant-Colonel T. Horan, late 43rd L.I., Prize Agents, Banda and Kirwee Booty, have sent the following letter to the Broad Arrow: -"In your paper of the 4th inst. there is an account of a meeting of officers interested in the Kirwee booty, held on the 30th November last, at which a resolution was passed, and concluded thus:—'That the synopsis submitted to the meeting exhibited alleged losses through the laches of the nominal agents of about £200,000, in addition to the loan funds in suspense, be referred to the late paymaster of Sir G. Whitlock's division for examination and report. are the officers alluded to, we desire to say that if any such allega-tion were true we should have lost half a million of prize-money. The magnitude of our alleged offence is, we think, a sufficient reply to such a thoughtless and ridiculous insinuation."

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—The report of the directors of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company for the half-year ended June 30 last states that the total receipts on capital were, as last reported, £23,478,582. The expenditure brought to account under classified headings during the half-year amounted to £96,335, the total expenditure, exclusive of shares, to June 30 being £31,919,040. The total expenditure for the half-year was £558,480, as compared with £550,051 in the corresponding period of 1875, being 3s. 9<sup>3</sup>d. per train mile for the past half-year, as against 4s. 6d. for the corresponding half-year. The moiety of surplus profit for the half-year pertaining to the company being £62,908, there had to be added thereto £2,108 brought from last account, making a total of  $\pounds$ 65,016 available for distribution, and this would admit of a dividend at the rate of 6s. per cent. upon the capital stock and shares, and leave a small balance to be carried forward.

THE AGRA BANK V. MACCALL.—This was an action in the Common Pleas against the defendant, late bank manager at Shanghai, charging him with misconduct in advancing money without sufficient care, and in allowing customers to overdraw their accounts, contrary to express instructions from the plaintiffs. Mr. Thesiger, in opening the case to the jury, said the charge was one of reckless disobedience to orders, whereby the plaintiffs had sustained a loss of something like £10,000. The learned counsel was proceeding to remark that the case must necessarily be a protracted one, as it involved reference to complicated accounts and much correspondence, when his lordship interposed, and pointed out the difficulty of trying such an action. A conversation then ensued between counsel, and in the end it was agreed that the case should be referred, it being understood that all charges against the defendant, except those of express disobedience, were withdrawn.

Bills on India.—India Council drafts to the amount of £350,000 (35 lakhs of rupees) were allotted on Wednesday, the 13th inst., at an advance of no less than 13-16d. to \( \frac{7}{6} \)d. per rupee, as compared with last week. This is equivalent to a rise of 3\rangle per cent. The amounts taken were £268,100 for Calcutta, £61,900 for Bombay, and £20,000 for Madras. Tenders of 1s. 103d, per rupee for bills received in full, and at that price for telegrams about 95 per cent. The demand would appear to have been largely for the telegraphic transfers, and in the absence of silver the allotment seems to have been at a higher price than was expected. Consequently the price of silver has advanced a further \( \frac{1}{2} \)d. per oz., to 58\( \frac{1}{2} \)d., and it will be noticed that some sovereigns have been taken for remittance to India, because sufficient silver was not obtainable. The vise of 2\( \frac{1}{4} \)d. per oz. in the price of silver thus indicated in the course of a single week should be recognised as an extraordinary occurrence, and shows a state of tension which can hardly last. The recovery has now been 11d. per oz. in a little over five months, and, if speculation has anything to do with the movement, a reaction of some kind, sooner or later, is almost certain.

A SALVAGE CLAIM.—THE "MEDINA."—This was an appeal from a decision of Sir R. Phillimore. On Sept. 30, 1875, the ship Medina, belonging to the Singapore Steamship Company, while on a voyage from Singapore to Jeddah, having on board 550 pilgrims, who had embarked at Penang for Jeddah, was wrecked on the Parkin Rock, in the Red Sea. The Pilgrims were landed by the boats on the rock. The rock is thirty miles from the main land, and about 240 miles from Aden, and is only about six feet above the sea level. 10 A.M. on Oct. 1, a steamer, which turned out to be the Timor, then on a voyage from Kurrachee to Liverpool, was observed, and signals of distress were made to her, which she saw, and then bore down to the rock. The master of the Timor was asked to save the Pilgrims, but he refused to take them to Suez for less than £3,000, and ultimately an agreement was made between him and the master of the Medina to take the pilgrims to Jeddah for £4,000. The owners of the Medina afterwards refused to pay this sum, on the ground that it was exorbitant, and that the agreement was made under compulsion. This action was brought by the owners of the Timor to enforce the agreement. Sir R. Phillimore held that the agreement was inequitable, but awarded the owners of the Timor £1,800, giving no costs on either side. The owners of the Timor appealed. Their lordships held that the sum agreed upon was grossly exorbitant, and that the agreement was obtained under what amounted to practical compulsion. Under the circumstances, the master of the Medina had no choice but to agree to pay any sum which was demanded. The order appealed from was right, and the appeal must be dismissed, with costs.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Himalaya, troopship, Captain Edward White, sailed from Portsmouth on the 12th inst., for China and the East Indies. She embarked the following troops at Ports-

For Malta, the 20th Company Royal Engineers, consisting of Captain White, Lieutenant Noel, and seventy-six men; Deputy Commissary Taylor and details.

For Ceylon, headquarters of the 22nd Brigade Royal Artillery, consisting of Captain and Adjutant Freeman, Captain Brown, Surgeon-Major Murphy, and Quartermaster Simons, and one man; the 5th and 6th Batteries of the same, consisting of Majors Tyler and Hitchins, Captain Gordon, and Lieutenants Siddons and Murray, and 196 men, and details.

For the Straits Settlements, the 7th Battery of the 22nd Brigade Royal Artillery, consisting of Major Eden and Lieutenants Lyall and Fell, and ninety-nine men; Surgeon Major Grant, and details.

nmety-nine men; Surgeon Major Grant, and details.

For Hong Kong, the 2nd Battery 22nd Brigade Royal Artillery, consisting of Major Rooke, Capt. Curtis, and Lieutenant Saunders and ninety-eight men; details, including a draught of the 28th Regt., consisting of Captain Connor, Lieuts. Lloyd and Lyttleton, and 114 men; and Lieutenant-Colonel Stuart, R.E., Deputy-Commissary M'Farlane, Assistant-Paymaster Ridgway, Lieut. Thompson, A.H.C., and Surgeon Pollock.

The Himalaya will call in at Plymouth, where she will embark relief crewsfor the Midge, Growler, Swinger, and Hornet, and will then proceed to Queenstown for the purpose of taking on board a detachment of the 57th Regt., consisting of Lieut. Lyde and seventy-one men, and Lieutenant Griffin, of the 9th Foot, for Ceylon. Her present extensive round of troop service is expected to occupy her until the 6th of May, on which day she is due at Spithead. In consequence of the repeated accidents to the crank and screw shafting of the Himalaya, the Admiralty have ordered the pressure of steam on her boilers to be reduced from 20lb, to 15lb. At the time she was purchased by the Government her engines were worked with a pressure of 25lb., and she has since been fitted with new engines and boilers, the latter being but little the worse for wear.

Summary and Rebielv.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 4; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, December 2; Calcutta, December 1.

The mail brings home a few particulars concerning the murder of Lieutenant Harris by one of his sepoys. It appears that on the morning of 28th November Lieutenant W. Harris, of the 21st Bengal Native Infantry, was superintending the rifle practice of his men on the ranges at Rawal Pindi. One of his sepoys was shooting so badly that Mr. Harris found fault with him, saying, in a reproachful way, that so bad a shot would not be of much use in a campaign against the Afridis, The man, a Pathan, lost his temper, and before any one could stop him, exclaimed: "I will show you whether I can shoot or not," at once sending a bullet through Lieutenant Harris's breast. The unfortunate officer died almost immediately. It is only fair to his memory, says the Pioneer, "to add that Mr. Harris was a quiet-tempered officer, beloved and respected by Englishmen and natives alike, and that he in no way provoked the sepoy to the commission of the dreadful deed." The murderer was arrested after firing four shots, and would no doubt be made over to the civil power for trial without delay. There are said to be several of poor Mr. Harris's relatives in Rawal Pindi, as well as a large circle of warm friends, to deplore his death.

THE review which was to have been held at Peshawar on the 25th Nov. by the Viceroy did not come off on account of a heavy fall of rain the night before. The troops were merely paraded and marched past. Before leaving Peshawar the Viceroy received a number of native gentlemen and chiefs, both of our territory and of the Afridis. Several conferences were held, and the Viceroy inquired with great detail into frontier matters.

On the 28th of November the Viceroy entered Lahor. In the evening Lady Davies gave a ball; and a levee was held the next day, followed by a procession. Lahor was elaborately decorated for the occasion. During his stay, Lord Lytton visited the Jama Masjid, now under restoration at an estimated cost of one lakh and a half of rupees, raised by private subscription among the Mohammedans in the province. His Excellency pleased the Mussulmans by offering a handsome present towards the work. The reply of the Viceroy to the Municipal address was most cordial; and altogether his visit had passed off well.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM left Madras for Delhi on the 19th November, the day on which the Maharajah of Mysor and the Chief Commissioner, Mr. C. Saunders, arrived at that place. The Maharajah's body-guard left Bangalor, in two batches, on the 24th and 26th. The Nizam of Haidarabad, with 177 noblemen and gentlemen, 145 Sowars, 341 armed men, 1,163 menials, 269 horses, 5 palanquins, 10 native carriages, and 15 European carriages was to leave his capital on the 8th Dec., a part of his retinue following on the 9th and 10th. A special train for his Highness's escort was to leave Haidarabad at a later date. Nine special trains had likewise been ordered for his Highness's cavalry and infantry.

In connection with the Delhi Gathering the Government of India have agreed to defray the travelling charges of a limited number of European officers and gentlemen who have been, or may be, invited to Delhi with the approval and sanction of the Viceroy himself. Of the chiefs or native gentlemen, those only are, as a rule, to be invited who can afford the expenses of the journey without inconvenience; but the travelling expenses of those chiefs or gentlemen whose presence at the Assemblage it may seem desirable to secure, but on whom the cost of the journey would press heavily, will be defrayed. A further concession has been made in the rule that native chiefs and their retinues proceeding to the Delhi Imperial Assemblage will be exempted from the payment of all tolls or dues whatever within British territory.

WE are not surprised to hear that very few officers of the Bombay army have availed themselves of the leave offered to anyone who wished to go and witness the grand doings at Delhi. It is obvious that if each officer has to pay all his expenses, the cost would be very considerable for the journey alone. As a Bombay paper points out, he would have to take his charger and a servant; if he did not take his charger he would either have to go on foot and see nothing, or he would have to hire a horse at a tremendous daily expense, if, indeed, he could get one at all. Carriage hire would be simply ruinous.

By the latest mail news the prospects of the dearth-stricken districts in Bombay and Madras continued unchanged, except that there had been a freer and more plentiful supply of grain. The resources of the railway companies have been severely tried by this unusual traffic. The famine in Western and Southern India seems to be recognised as one of the serious dangers of the day. There has been added to a famine the drought and dearth of fodder. The wealth of cattle gathered together during many years of our rule is dwindling away; and thus for some time to come cultivation and revenue will be sadly crippled. The distress of our own people must be shared, as the Pioneer remarks, by "others whose condition we can only guess at. For instance, the Sattara jagir dars, Akalkot, Kolapur, the Southern Mahratta jagirdars, and Savanur are all native States comprised within the Bombay Dakhan; and they must be suffering from the same famine as the British districts on their borders. The area of these native States is 856 square miles, with a population of 1,812,351, and though we know so little about the distress throughout this considerable area, we shall be in a measure responsible for it."

On the 27th of November the Maharanah of Dholpur opened the quarry line of the Sindia State Railway, driving the engine himself.

On the death of the late Bishop of Calcutta the Maharajah of Jaipur signified to the chaplain of Agra his desire to erect some memorial of that worthy man, who had been, he said, his good friend. His Highness has now placed several thousand rupees in the chaplain's hands, with a view to the carrying out of his wishes. Such an act speaks well alike for the Maharajah and for him whose memory he thus honours.

A RELIGIOUS riot, provoked by Hindu intolerance, took place on November 27 at Khurja, in the Bulandshahr district. Orthodox Hindus being many at Khurja, and the Saraogis few, the former wanted to stop a Saraogi procession that had been organised in honour of a newly-built temple. This was not allowed, and so the offended majority took the law into their own hands. Some trouble had been expected, and a considerable police force was on the spot, headed by the District Superintendent and an Assistant Magistrate. The procession was to pass from the new temple through the bazaar, a winding lane leading to the Delhi-road, on which the old temple stands. It was on the point of starting, when an alarm was given by the Naib Tahsildar, or police officer, who was in front. A tumultuous crowd had poured out of a side lane armed with bricks and latties, or long sticks. These and other crowds, issuing from other side lanes, attacked the police. The Saraogis were completely panic-stricken, but a few shots were fired by the police and the roads soon cleared. Eighteen of the rioters were arrested.

In a Minute of November 2 Sir R. H. Davies pays a handsome tribute to the services of Major-General George Hutchinson, C.B., C.S.I., who now ceases to be Inspector-General of the Punjab Police. This officer, an engineer of 1845, served for six years, soon after the annexation, in the Trans-Indus country; became Sir Henry Lawrence's Aide de Camp at Lucknow, whence he was sent as political officer with certain native troops; and when they mutinied, he rescued several English officers and brought them back safely to Lucknow. During the defence he had sole charge of the old garrison works, and served as senior engineer officer from the time of the reliefs by Generals Havelock and Outram till the final relief by Lord Clyde. Afterwards he was chief engineer to General Outram's force at the Alam-Bagh. He was made Military Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of Oudh in 1858, to the Punjab Government in 1860, and the next year was appointed to the post which he is now leaving, of Inspector-General of Police. It was he who re-organised the Punjab Police in accordance with the principle laid down in the Act of 1861; and his labours, says Sir Henry Davies, have done very much towards making the Punjab policemen what they now are. The Lieutenant-Governor receives the resignation of General Hutchinson with "extreme regret," and takes this opportunity to place on record an account of his high services.

Whatever is the real strength of the religious sympathy between Indian Mohammedans and the "Grand Turk," former as a rule do not appear to take a very active interest in the present phase of the Eastern Question. One of their journals, the Urdu Guide makes the following plaintive appeal to its Mohammedan fellow-countrymen, to send help to the sick and wounded of the Turkish soldiery :- " The troops of Islam are suffering from cold and want of medical help. Cannot some of the leading merchants of Calcutta and the rich people all over the country manage to send some Mohammedan medical students from here to afford that most requisite and much needed help? A small monthly salary assured to their families with their passage paid to Turkey and back, would easily induce many qualified and energetic young men to proceed to the assistance of their suffering brethren. The apathy of the Indian Mohammedans is really past relief."

The Friend of India understands that when the Secretary of State gave Major Playfair an opportunity of clearing his character before a Court-martial, he also expressed a desire that, in the event of acquittal, that gentleman should be appointed to some post at least as good as that he had lost. It appears, however, that "up to this time nothing has been done for Major Playfair. He is still 'doing duty;' that is, although his honour has been vindicated, he is still suffering the pecuniary penalty of a crime of which he has been proved not guilty." If this be true, Major Playfair has some reason to complain of the imperfect justice with which he has been treated by the local Government, if not by the Viceroy himself. There must have been more than one opportunity, since his acquittal, of carrying out Lord Salisbury's instructions, superfluous as they ought to have been. To leave a man for months under the penalty of a crime of which he has been honourably acquitted is a proceeding of which Lord Salisbury would hardly approve.

THE October number of the Indian Forester contains an interesting paper on the cultivation of the Eucalyptus globulus or blue gum-tree, and other Australian gums in India. Believers in the fever-dispelling virtues of the blue gum tree will be disappointed to hear how little success has rewarded every attempt to naturalise the tree in India. It appears that, in Bengal, all attempts to grow the Eucalyptus globulus in the Botanic Gardens have failed. This, in Dr. King's opinion, is owing to the high water-level in the sub-soil, the high temperature, and the alluvial nature of the soil of the province. Mr. Baden-Powell does not think that the tree will thrive in the Punjab plains. It has failed to establish itself in Assam, and the failure is ascribed by Mr. Kurz, of the Royal Botanic Gardens, both to too much moisture and too much heat. In Oudh it has been tried without success by Dr. Bonavia. In Mysor and Kurg it has failed, even at an elevation that might have been supposed favourable to its growth. In short, after repeated experiments, it appears that the much-desired blue gum-tree has met with any measure of success only at Ránikhet and on the Nilgiris—that is to say, just where it is least wanted as a malaria-destroying agent. We are also told that Mr. Broughton, lately Government Quinologist at Madras, after examining the bark and leaves of the tree, went so far as to declare that neither quinine, quinidine, chinchonidine, nor chinchonine is contained in the plant in any proportion. It is a comfort however to learn that India herself already possesses some trees and plants endowed with the virtues popularly claimed for the Australian gum-tree. To this effect writes the Conservator of Forests in Mysor:-

The supposed virtues of the Eucalypti in neutralising miasmata are, probably, exaggerated, and whatever power they have in this way is possessed in common with many other resinous-odoured plants, like casuarina, mango, jack, &c., which grow freely in the plains, wherever they are planted and taken care of. I would submit, therefore, that the spending of money on an exceedingly doubtful experiment is unadvisable, when experience has shown us that trees of similar properties with the Eucalypti may be raised with every prospect of success in the eastern coast deltas."

If this be true, it is a pity that the truth was not discovered and turned to account in the many years which have elapsed since the Indian Sanitary Commission began its work. The mango-tree for instance thrives in many parts of India where fever prevails, and it seems to thrive almost equally well in moist and dry climates. One of the noblest features in an Indian land-scape is a grove of these stately trees.

The statement furnished to the Pioneer about the birth of a child in the tree where her mother had taken refuge from the storm-wave of October 31 may be matched by similar incidents recorded in Mr. Beveridge's recent work on Bakarganj. In the thirteenth chapter of his book we find the following extract from the Calcutta Journal, with regard to the great cyclone of 1822—the only one that in extent of havoc can be compared with the cyclone of last October:—

One of our correspondents mentions that at Ratandi he saw a child, who being only a few weeks old, his curiosity was excited to know how it had been preserved during the tempest and inundation. In reply to his inquiries, he was told that it was born in a tree when the surface of the country was covered with water; and its mother was then questioned, and corroborated this tale. The surprise of the inquirer was further increased, however, when he came to learn that so far from this being a singular event, there were from thirty to forty females, some of whom having reached the period of natural delivery, but many more having the birth occelerated by terror and alarm, who gave birth to their infants in this dreadful situation, and yet so providentially is the wind tempered to the shorn lamb, that most of these individuals with their offspring lived, presenting a picture of misery and distress unprecedented, we believe, even in the imagination of the painter or the poet, and certainly without a parallel, as far as we remember, either in fable or history.

On that occasion the storm burst over Eastern Bengal in June, with a fury felt alike in Calcutta, Jessore, and even as high up the Ganges as Patna. It was accompanied by a heavy ranpour, lasting several days, and culminated in a great flood which is said to have carried off "a lakh" of human beings in Bakarganj alone, with all the cattle of the district, while "grain of every description, both in store and what was on the ground," is said to have been utterly destroyed. Barisal itself, which this year seems to have suffered little, was on that occasion all but overwhelmed by the storm-wave from the Meghna, a thousand people being drowned in the bazaar alone, while every house in the Civil Station was wrecked.

THE address from the Mohammedans of Calcutta to the Queen reads curiously like a party manifesto concocted by some ardent admirer of Lord Beaconsfield. The petitioners crave leave, in the first instance, to lay before your Majesty the great anxiety with which they have watched the policy of your Majesty's Government towards the Sublime Porte, and for themselves and on behalf of the entire body of the Mussulman population of the Indian Empire they beg humbly to express their deep gratitude for the moral support and material assistance which your Majesty's Government has up to this time rendered to the Sublime Porte.

Hitherto they had been led to believe that "the policy by which the territorial integrity of the Sultan's dominions was guaranteed and the Empire of the Porte protected from foreign encroachment had the cordial support of all classes of your Majesty's subjects, as the only policy consistent with the best and truest interests of your Majesty's Empire." But now they have learnt "with regret not unmixed with apprehension" that various attempts are being made by some of her Majesty's subjects in this country to overthrow her Majesty's Ministers, who have "so assiduously laboured to preserve the peace of Europe and so anxiously watched over the interests" of her Majesty's Indian Empire; or at least by "a moral coercion to force them to change the traditional policy" of her Majesty's Government towards the Sublime Porte. They have, moreover, been grieved to learn that the excesses committed by the irregular troops of the Sublime Porte in some districts of the Province of Bulgaria have been adduced by some of her Majesty's subjects as a reason for expelling every Mohammedan from Europe. Reprobating equally the excesses of Mussulman soldiers and Christian insurgents, they "cannot forget that the exaggerated character of the original reports furnished to the world by irresponsible and prejudiced persons has been exposed by your Majesty's Ambassador." assertion prepares us for the statement that the insurrection which provoked the "alleged cruelties" was fomented by "foreign incendiaries, who, with the connivance, if not with the express sanction, of their own Governments, incited the Christian subjects of the Sublime Porte to an unjustifiable rebellion, signalised by as inhuman acts on the part of the insurgents as any committed by the Turkish soldiery.' appears that the Sultan's Government "is at this moment punishing the authors of the excesses in Bulgaria." The petitioners further plead that the misgovernment with which the Sublime Porte has been charged is "entirely owing to the continual agitation kept up in the outlying provinces of European Turkey, in the interest of the neighbouring States, by foreign incendiaries," who are far more worthy of reprobation than the authors of the alleged atrocities. Sir G. Campbell will be good enough to remember that in the eyes of the vast majority of her Majesty's Mohammedan subjects "the Sultan is looked on as the Vicegerent of their Prophet." We are then told that the struggle between Servia and Turkey, though at first only secretly fomented, "is now openly and ostentatiously supported by one of the signatory Powers to the Treaty of Paris;" and the petitioners "do not hesitate to say that the war which Servia, at the instigation of one of the Powers, declared against Turkey v unjustifiable, unprovoked, and wanton, since that Principality had no wrong to redress, no injury to avenge." For all these reasons the memorialists express a hope that in consideration of the alliance and amity which have so long subsisted between your Majesty's Government and the Sublime Porte—in consideration of the fact that his Sacred Majesty the Sultan of Turkey is the recognised religious head of some 40,000,000 of your Majesty's subjects; inconsideration also of the unjustifiable nature of the war into which Turkey has been wantonly dragged, and which is now supported and kept alive by a Power whose sinister and dangerous designs have of late become sufficiently revealed; in consideration also of the fact that the deplorable events which have occurred in Bulgaria were brought about by the machinations of the same Power; in consideration also of the fact that at this moment the Sublime Porte, assisted by the ablest and most honest counsellors in his Empire, is engaged in maturing schemes for the better administration of the country, and also of the disastrous consequences which would flow from any attempt to dismember the Ottoman Empire, your Majesty will not permit any change of policy.

These sentiments being shared by "the entire body" of Indian Moslems, the memorialists conclude by praying that her Majesty's Ministers will not "in consequence of the suggestions of any of your Majesty's subjects, from hostility whether to the present Ministry or towards the Moslem faith, alter that policy or allow any power to encroach upon the Sovereign rights of the Sublime Porte or dismember the Ottoman Empire in contravention of and against the express stipulations of the Treaty of Paris, by which the territorial integrity of Turkey and her existence as a European Power was solemnly and definitely guaranteed."

According to the Times weekly telegram of December 17. the preparations for the Imperial Assemblage are rapidly approaching completion. The Native Princes, guests, and troops, are arriving daily at Delhi. The Nizam arrived at Delhi on the 14th current. Holkar is to arrive to-morrow. General Norman, the members of the Council, and the high officials, were to leave Calcutta on the 17th and Sir R. Temple on Tuesday last. The Duke of Buckingham reached Calcutta on the 21st ult., and proceeds to Delhi at once. Major Barnes, 10th Bengal Lancers, being the tallest military officer in India, has been selected to act as Chief Herald, and will read the Imperial. Proclamation. He will be dressed in heraldic costume, which has been ordered from England, and it is stated will cost £200. Six European and six Native trumpeters, mounted on selected grey horses and arrayed as heralds, will attend him. On the evening of the 1st of January there will be a grand banquet, and the city will be illuminated. The Viceroy enters Delhi in State on Saturday, the 23rd. There will be a grand procession, in which the Chiefs will join. Nearly seventy chiefs are expected. The Darbar will be held on the Calcutta Maidan on the 1st of January. Mr. Buckland, Commissioner of the Presidency Division, will preside, and will read the Proclamation. A meeting was held on the 16th to arrange the details of the Calcutta festivities. The rumour which was current in Calcutta. for some time that the Amir of Kabul had sent an insolent. reply to the Viceroy's invitation to the Delhi Assemblage is wholly without foundation. It is rumoured that a large number of prisoners, including Amir Khan, the Wahabi chief, willbe released on the 1st of January, on the occasion of the proclamation of the Imperial title.

WITH regard to the famine, we learn from the same source that the reports from Bombay show no change in the prospects of the crops. About 220,000 people are employed on relief works. Large quantities of grain are pouring into Bombay, and thence to the distressed districts. There is little fear now of a failure of food. The great danger is a failure of the water supply, but the prospects in this respect seem more hopeful now. Many people are migrating from some districts. The Nawab of Junagarh has given 5,000 rupees to the relief fund, and has offered grazing on Mount Gir for 5,000 cattle. The Madras accounts are worse than those from Bombay. It appears that a large number of starving people are flocking into Madras city, and one death from starvation has occurred in the town. Great efforts are now being made to relieve the distressed. Reports from the districts are gloomy, and there is much distress and disease.

The following items are furnished from the same quarter:—
While at Peshawar the Viceroy decided not to send an expedition against the small section of Afridis who are still in arms, but merely to continue, a strict blockade of their hills.

Sir Henry Davies, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, has obtained an extension of office for one month, as the Assemblage renders a change-before February inconvenient. Nothing positive is known regarding successor.

It is stated that Sir R. Temple makes over the charge of the Benga Government to Mr. Eden immediately after the Assemblage, and proceeds o Bombay.

According to telegrams of yesterday's date from Delhi the Lieutenant-Governors of Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, and the Punjab, have arrived at the Delhi Camp, said to be the largest ever formed in India. It is scattered over the environs of the city, and covers an area of not less than twenty square miles. The health throughout the different camps is excellent, and splendid weather prevails. The Nizam arrived on the 21st, and many other native princes and chiefs, with their retinues, have already taken up their several stations about the city. The three Commanders-in-Chief are also there. A brilliant review of the troops now at Delhi was held on the 21st on the plain near the dais from which the Proclamation will be made. Over 12,000, some say 15,000 men, were under arms, including contingents from the Bombay and Madras armies and the Punjab Frontier Force. The Viceroy enters the Camp in State to-day. The Native chiefs will line the road along which the procession The Camp is filling rapidly, and the preparations are nearly complete. All the arrangements are admirable.

WOOLWICH ARSENAL has of late been very busy, preparing arms and ammunition for Indian use. Martini-Henry rifles are being despatched to India at the rate of about 4,000 per week, to complete the armament of the troops with the new small-bore already in the hands of the regiments at home. It is contemplated also to establish a reserve of these rifles and their ammunition, in order that the authorities may be enabled at any time to issue them, when desirable, to the Native regiments, which are at present armed with Sniders, Enfield muzzle-loaders, and muskets of various kinds. The production of cartridges for the Indian army has reached a million and ahalf a week, and new machinery is being got ready to increase the output to upwards of two millions per week, for which end it is proposed to take on additional hands after Christmas.

A TEHERAN telegram says that Persia is attentively watching events in Europe, and that she will probably endeavour to occupy Bagdad in the event of war.

THE present season has brought forth an unusual abundance of Christmas Cards, suited to all tastes and purses; but to judge from the samples with which we have been favoured from the well-known stores of Mr. Eugene Rimmel, we should be inclined to give him the preference over several note-worthy rivals for the varied beauty and finish of his wares. Even the cheapest of them are pretty little works of art, while the more elaborate take the eye and woo the fancy with every kind of tasteful adornment. Not less grateful to another sense is the delicate perfume which steals forth from some of these Christmas offerings, lending a subtle charm to the artist's handiwork.

A STRANGE STORY.

IF some of the stories which have lately reached us from Eastern Bengal have any truth in them, we fear that some bad old customs have not yet been uprooted by British energy. It would even appear that a regular traffic in slave-girls has up to the present year been carried on by some of the leading Mohammedans in that part of India. The following instance comes from the Pioneer:

One evening after a sub-divisional officer had done, as he thought, with his official labours for the day, and was quietly smoking in front of his bungalow, a rather pretty girl of eighteen was brought before him with her neck closely bandaged up, and charged with having attempted to commit suicide by cutting her throat. The incident was alleged to have occurred about a week before in the zenana of a Mohammedan zemindar, residing not five miles from the Magistrate's Court. The woman at once confessed her guilt, stating that she was a chukri or slave-girl of the zemindar, and her guilt, stating that she was a chukri or slave-girl of the zemindar, and that she had rashly attempted to take her own life, because of the ill-treatment to which she had been subjected. This, she said, consisted of excessive task work, tank-digging and surki pounding, insufficient food, and repeated beating with a rattan. It also appeared that the attempted suicide had been concealed by the zemindar, till two other slave-girls had succeeded in escaping by night from the zenana enclosure. These, in recounting their own woes at the police station, mentioned the fact of the woman lying wounded in the zemindar's female apartments. One of these two latter women was found by the sub-divisional officer to bear on her person evident stripes of a cane, said to be inflicted by the zemindar's wife. Further inquiries brought out fresh evidence to the same effect. Several women were found, who in the course of the past five years had fled from the same zamindar's house, one of them lamed for life by injuries received as she leaped from the zenana garden-wall. They all declared that they had been carried off from their homes by force. This indeed was not in all cases strictly true, for it appears that some of them, who had been outcasted from their own villages for misbehaviour, were led to believe that if they appealed in person to their zamindar and made him a sufficient nazar or present, he would order their caste fellows to take them back into their samaj, or society. In this cruel deceit their own relatives were often active abettors; and once entrapped within the zamindar's house they could only get away by stealth from his merciless clutches. That force is often used, however, appeared from the evidence of the under-officers of the well-known Nawab Abdul Gani Miyan, and a letter from his son Khaja Ahsanullah Khan Bahadur, tells how that gentleman refused to surrender some women who had fled into his property from a neighbouring estate, and had appealed to him for protection. It appears, too, that some of these fugitives had once been slave girls of relatives of the zamindar in other districts, and had been sent far from their homes under the charge of Sardars to labour for them. It was, in fact, says the Pioneer, "the theory of the prosecution, that it was the practice of the Mussulman zamindars of these Eastern districts to seize as many women as they wanted, not specially for immoral purposes, but to use them as slave labourers, free male labour being very expensive; that they forced them to marry their menial men servants, in order to have over them the power that the marriage provisions of the Penal Code provide; and that finally, if they proved too refractory, their masters interchanged them, sending them to distant districts, where the loneliness and hopelessness of their position might at last quench their longing for home and for freedom."

Unfortuately for the ends of justice the magistrate who first took up the matter had to leave his district for a time; the police suspended their inquiries; and the zamindar secured the services of an English barrister, who managed to possess the second magistrate with strong doubts as to the truthfulness of the witnesses on the other side. Their striped backs, however, seemed to speak for themselves, although in India even that kind of evidence cannot always be trusted; and the zamindar was fined for simple assault. On another count of the indictment he was equally fortunate. The first magistrate had fined him Rs. 1,000 for concealing the original suicide through interested motives. Against this sentence he appealed to the District Judge, who, although the offender's income was reckoned at a lakh and a half of rupees a year, reduced the fine to Rs. 500, at the same time recognising the fact of the cruelty which had driven the poor woman to attempt her own life.

THE MOHAMMEDAN MOVEMENT IN INDIA. TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

Sir.-Anglo-Indians must have been astonished when they heard that Mohammedan inhabitants of Calcutta, Bombay and other Indian towns had held public meetings, at which they presumed to pass resolutions dictating to the British Government at home the course it should follow in its foreign policy, i.e., that it should continue to uphold the integrity of the Ottoman Empire, because the Sultan was the head of the Mohammedan religion; and their astonishment must have increased when they found that those proceedings received the countenance of the authorities in India. Some surprise must likewise have been created by the place selected for the first meeting in Calcutta, viz., the Town-hall, which is in the heart of the English quarter, between the Viceroy's residence and the High Court: for Mohammedans, when they propose to discuss subjects in any way connected with their faith, assemble at their mosques, and it is contrary, to their custom and habits to invite general public attention to their proceedings, as was done on the occasions in question. These circumstances and the peculiarly English stamp impressed on the meetings, soon pointed to a solution of the mystery. The extraordinary movement would seem accountable only on the supposition that it was set on foot through English influences, exercised by politicans at home, who sought extraneous support against endeavours of their countrymen to impose a line of conduct which was repugnant to them. This impression was strengthened by later reports and the Times Correspondent's letter, published yesterday, leaves little doubt on the subject. The following passages in the Mohammedan Memorial, which is reproduced in extenso in that letter, would scarcely have been differently worded had the document been written under the very dictation of a staunch member of the Conservative party at home.

Certain circumstances which have lately happened in England have filled your Majesty's petitioners with grave apprehension.

5. Your petitioners have learnt with regret, not unmixed with apprebension, that various attempts are being made by some of your Majesty's subjects residing within your Majesty's British dominions to overthrow your Majesty's Ministers who have so assiduously laboured to preserve the peace of Europe and so anxiously watched over the interests of your Indian Empire; or at least by a moral coercion to force them to change the traditional policy of your Majesty's Government towards the Sublime

8. That your memorialists would humbly represent that the insurtions, during which the alleged cruelties were committed, was fomented by foreign incendiaries who, with the connivance, if not with the express sanction of their own Government, incited the Christian subjects of the Porte to an unjustifiable rebellion, which was signalised by as inhuman acts on the part of the insurgents as any committed by the Turkish sol-

In consideration of the fact that at this moment the Sublime Porte is engaged in maturing schemes for the better administration of the country; and also of the disastrous consequences which would flow from an attempt to dismember the Ottoman Empire, your Majesty will not permit any change of policy.

18. Your petitioners most [humbly pray. that your Majesty will not, in consequence of the suggestions of any of your Majesty's subjects, from hostility whether to the present Ministry or towards the Moslem faith, alter the policy . . . or dismember the Ottoman Empire in contravention of and against the express stipulations of the Treaty of

The Times correspondent also gives extracts from a Bengal Mohammedan paper, of articles purporting to give a fair sample of the views of Indian Mussulmans, but which anyone who has resided in Bengal will doubtless unhesitatingly pronounce to be of spurious manufacture. The following passages occur in extracts made from the Urdu Guide :-

By the 9th clause of the Treaty of Paris it was specially provided that by the stream of that the foreign Powers shall not in any way interfere with the internal administration of Turkey. Russia was allowed by Mr. Gladstone to tear up one portion of that treaty; she now seeks to tear up the remainder. We hope the Conservative Ministry, which has some regard for the national prestige and the national honour, will not tamely allow her to do so . . . We do not know, it is true, what English interests, pure and simple, are or may be. But we know this and we say it most emphatically—that if it is the interest of England to retain India, England must maintain the integrity and independence of the Ottoman Empire. The double-headed cagle of Russia has been slowly but steadily moving southwards, with its eyes distinctly fixed on Constantinople on one side and India on the other. Madmen may talk of the great "pulse of humanity." We do not believe in Russian humanity and never believed. Nor can we bring ourselves to believe that Russia, from pure love and affection, wastes her resources in the wilds of Asia without any wish to recuperate them from the rich countries of the south. No sane man can think she always means to continue bankrupt, and the only way she can recover herself is by establishing herself in India and the fertile territories of Turkey.

In this morning's Times I find a leader which fully confirms the suspicions expressed as to the spurious character of the Mohammedan movement in question. The following short extract from that article will suffice to show whence the movement and the memorial are supposed to proceed: "The framers of the petition have evidently the most accurate acquaintance with the arguments and representations of the Ministerialist speakers in England, and this, coupled with the style and diction of the document, suggests something less purely and spontaneously Moslem than might be desired."—I am, Sir, your obedi-

COLONISATION AND THE DECCAN DISTRESS.

The Pioneer deems it likely that Mr. Morris's colonisation scheme for the Central Provinces will be put into operation earlier than was anticipated. It was originally intended that the immigrants to Charwa, in the Hoshungabad district, sholud be drawn from the agricultural castes of the North-Western Provinces, such as the Kurmis, Kachees, and Aheers. The unfortunate turn of events during the last few weeks in the Deccan and South Mahratta Country have, however, naturally directed the attention of the Bombay Government to emigration as a means of relief, and the Nerbudda has been selected as the most eligible tract for the permanent settlement of those who are willing to leave their homes. An early offer of aid from Mr. Morris in this matter was eagerly accepted. Wodehouse and the Collectors of Khandesh, Poons, and Sholapur are now ascertaining whether any influential patels are willing to head a movement to "pastures fresh and new." One of the condienter into the movement with a full intention to establish themselves permanently in their new homes. A judicious selection of really steady, hard working cultivators ought to supply excellent material for the first trial of the Central Provinces' colonisation scheme. Mr. Morris's great difficulty was to obtain a class of really good and provident cultivators. From the intense attachment to the soil which characterises the Hindu peasant, it was always feared that none but broken cultivators, those who had outrun the constable, the heroes of many a moonlight flitting, would be induced to leave their homes. The North-West Government did indeed suggest that the emigrants should be drawn from the discontented ex-proprietary class, so numerous in the Ghazipur district and that part of the country. The good policy, however, of drawing to any great extent from this source seemed questionable. Though they may be well adapted to lead a movement, many of them would not themselves follow the plough; and what is wanted to reclaim the jungle is the continuous labour of the meek and hard-working Kachees and Kurmis, the thew and sinews of an Indian agricultural community. The present severe distress in the Deccan will most probably induce many patels to avail themselves of this opportunity, and settle down on a more fertile country, not so liable to be effected by drought, and they will afford excellent material for the first trial of the colonisation scheme. All students of Indian problems connected with the tenure of land and over-population will wish Mr. Morris success in his efforts to relieve parts of the country stricken with the disease of over-population, and at the same time to develop his own province.

REMITTANCES FROM INDIA.

The Pioneer thinks that urgent as the need may be for saving money just now, Government would, in view of the state of things just noticed, be wise to be more liberal rather than meaner than usual to its officers. The regular Civil Service is not the groove in which men find most to complain of, but not to mention hackneyed grievances, the question of family remittances might wisely be settled in a generous way, in order to show the public that men may safely trust their careers to the control of Indian rulers. was a petition sent up to Government lately on this subject, and probably it is still unanswered. If dealt with in accordance with the plan that has prevailed in a good many similar settlements, it would no doubt be refused. The service would be told that the Government of India could not be responsible to each man for the number of children he choose to have. The bargain was to give number of children he choose to have. The bargain was to give him so many rupees a month, and their disbursement was his own private affair. Why should a married magistrate with ten children get more from the State than a bachelor? Even in the service, by some men who would profit by a concession in favour of family remittances, the claim is repudiated as unfair. We should rather call it illogical; and that does not matter. The truth is that the fall in exchange, though it leaves the Government servant with no legal remedy, robs him of the reward which he reasonably expected, in unequal degrees; the man with children at home feeling the loss more immediately than a bachelor who may or may not be saving money to take home eventually. Fairness would require Government to pay English officers on an alternative system, only guarded against tricks by which a man might draw his pay in England in order to remit it out here. Officers should not be allowed to make a profit out of exchange over and above their salaries, and the converse proposition is equally true: they should not be made to lose. Strange to say, English writers, dull generally to apprehend Anglo-Indian grievances, are alive to this. The Saturday Review writes:— It is scarcely possible to suppose that the salaries of the various officers were fairly fixed at the sums which they now represent only in name, and yet that the decline in the value of silver should be allowed to fall on their shoulders. The Government of India must be understood to pay its servants, not merely so much silver, but so much silver's worth; and supposing that by some new discovery the value of silver was reduced to zero, it would not be consistent with the spirit of the bargain to insist on the accustomed salaries being paid in a shape which no longer represented any exchangeable value. In its degree this holds good of that partial fall which has reduced the value of silver by something like twenty-five per cent."

THE LAHOR AND DELHI COLLEGES .- The amalgamation of the Lahor and Delhi Colleges, for which men like Dr. T. H. Thornton, Mr. Cordery and others have contended in the interests alike of economy and efficiency, will, we trust, become soon an accomplished fact. The new building of the Lahor Government College, for whose erection Sir Henry Davies will ever be remembered, will soon contain all the various feeders which will give it strength: for in addition to the Arts College and its natural complement, the Oriental College and the Law Classes, the Normal School and the Zilla School will soon be located in it. The Joint-Libraries of the Government College, the Punjab University and of the Director of Public Instruction, will form, we trust, the nucleus of a Free Public Library, either at the new Government College or the new Senate Hall, of which Lahor may well be proud. It certainly was a great shame to deprive the Delhi Students, as they will still be for a short time, of all professional studies, such as Law, Medicine, short time, of all professional studies, such as Law, methods, Engineering, as well as of Oriental learning, which they can acquire here, but cannot so well, if at all, acquire at Delhi. At present the two Government Colleges are under-officered (the one at Lahor with more classes and a greater number of students than Delhi, having the smaller Staff), but when they are amalgamated the combined staff will be sufficient for all purposes. The institution will then contain several hundred students about 100 in Arts. tion will then contain several hundred students, about 100 in Arts, 100 in Law, 100 in Oriental Languages, possibly also a hundred prospective school-masters, and still larger numbers in training for the Matriculation Examination.—Indian Public Opinion.

ANOTHER BENGAL ASSOCIATION.

We extract from the National Paper a prospectus of the most lately proposed Bengal Association. Its aims are thus set forth:—

First. The object of the Association shall be to interpret the views of Government to the people, to cement union between the Europeans and Natives, as well as to represent to Government the wants and wishes of the people.

Secondly. The procedings of the Association shall not be conducted in the English, but in the vernacular language.

Thirdly. Both Europeans and Natives might be members of the Asso ciation—of course, such Europeans who know the vernacular language, and are acquainted with their manners and customs.

Fourthly. The members shall themselves defray the expenses of the Asciation. Subscriptions shall not be solicited from outside.

Fifthly. The business of the meeting shall be conducted in an open and cordial manner.

Sixthly. None but those initiated shall be admitted to be members of the Association.

Seventhly. No kind of formality shall be observed in the debates of any Eighthly. None but those especially invited shall be admitted into any of the meetings of the Association. The names of persons who, though not members of the Association, may yet be admitted to any meeting thereof shall be specially recorded. Ninthly. There shall be ten or twelve gentlemen to represent the town members of the Association, and not more than one or two to represent the members of the same living in each important place in the Mofussil.

Tenthly. The proceedings of the Association shall be conducted just in the style debates amongst villagemen, when they have any important object to carry out, are held-that is to say, there will be less of speeches, and more of action.

Eleventhly. None blinded by race feeling or prejudice shall be admitted a member of the Association.

Twelfthly. All communications to Government shall be made in Bengali, with translations attached to them.

This is truly portentous. We gather from the fourth paragraph that, whereas Bengalis have not hitherto been in the habit of paying for the expenses incident on association, a crucial reform is now to be attempted. Certainly, an appeal to men's pockets is the best test of their sincerity. The sixth paragraph is too Eleusinian in its character to admit of our interpretation; paragraph eleven seems calculated to exclude the framers of the prospectus; paragraphs five, seven, and ten are eminently fitted to promote a breach of the peace. We trust that gentlemen who join the new Association will refrain from taking their lathis with them to the appointed place of meeting. We have been eye-witness to somewhat uncomfortable results ensuing on a recourse to "more of action" with these important aids to debates amongst villagemen.—Englishman.

THE STORM-WAVE IN THE MEGHNA.

On rejoining his yacht, Sir R. Temple, says the Pioneer Correspondent, proceeded in the direction of the island of Hattyah, and landed at Neelucky, on the west coast, at the mouth of the river Kalari. Here Sir Richard, not to give the surviving inhabitants time to prepare for his coming, or invent stories, pursued a rapid course over a mile of paddy-fields, followed by a few of the more active of his party, and came upon the inhabitants in the midst of their homes. Here the country is flat, slightly cultivated with rice, which luckily will not be entirely lost, an average crop of six annas being expected. There are no large villages, but small homesteads of groups of two or three huts together in clumps of trees, scattered about every 200 or 300 yards. These trees were the means of sparing, I may say, almost all those who did survive that awful night. The poor creatures seemed very quiet and contented, as they had plenty of rice, having produced their stores, which they bury in the ground in earthern jars; but salt was the chief thing they wanted. In the half-dozen homesteads that were looked into, the average loss was over 45 per cent., and the wonder is how so many escaped as did. Mortality was, of course, greater among the women and children, but many a one pointed up to the top of a friendly tree and related his providential escape. Most of the women, taking the smaller fry with them, scrambled on to the tops of their houses, and were thus floated up till the chuppur caught in the branches of a tree, but even then a great number perished from the intense cold, and next day, when the waters had subsided, corpses were found clinging fast to a branch for dear life. Even the much-abused madar tree saved many lives, especially among the women, for their clothes caught in the thorns with which it is covered, and lucky was the man who got "up a tree"—even a mader that night. One unfortunate victim was found locked in the embrace of a pig with which he had been carried up into a tree, but both were stiff and dead; in another place a woman was found, sitting on a chuppur, caught in a tree with a newly-born babe in her arms, and both were alive and flourishing. The Hindus, as a rule, were more energetic and contented than the Mohamedans, having already begun to collect and rebuild their houses. One wretched Mussulman pointed to the corpses of his mother, wife, and two sons; and when asked why he did not bury them, said he could not do that, as he had not the requisite piece of new cloth to wrap them in, and no money to bury them with, and again gave vent to the most piteous lamenta-tions. On the morning of the 10th, his Honour visited Dowlut-khan, on the east side of the island of Dakhin Shabazpore, and where once a very large and opulent village stood, is now almost a bare spot, and would be so still but for the energy of the police officers sent down to give relief, and do what was possible for the sufferers. Dowlutkhan is about a mile from the big river, upon a small khal, which runs across the island, and in that short distance almost 100 human corpses were counted, not to mention any number of dead cattle besides. Here the storm-wave (or waves, for there were three in quick succession) came from due north, each wave being over 10 feet high. The loss of life was immense all through In some houses none were left alive; in others one or two out of families of fifteen and sixteen, and yet only one mile or so inland where the trees are very thick and numerous whole families of sixteen and eighteen were found, of whom all had escaped; the munsiff and all his family were drowned, and Mr. Gasper also, though his servant escaped. Imagine yourself, if you can, snugly asleep in a straw-thatched bungalow, to be awakened suddenly, on a pitch dark night, about 11.30, by a storm-wave ten or twelve feet high, bursting in the doors, flooding everything, and before you have time to realise exactly what has happened, a second and third wave coming and carrying all before them; that was what did happen, and the only wonder is that any one lives to describe it. About 100 yards behind the bazaar, the trees and jungle are very thick, and in front of them is a small tank, which had huts round it; this is now a perfect chaos of boats, chuppur roofs, almirahs full of records, tables, chairs, &c., &c., and all the refuse a native bazaar can contain, all mixed up in the most dire confusion; the tanks are many of them full of a filthy slush from which the most disgusting stench comes, from the rotting vegetation and carcases and corpses that lie buried in them. At first there was a good deal of looking into and bursting open boxes and almirahs, but the police officer soon put a stop to that, and he is now getting the place in excellent order. The mahajuns who survived the storm took themselves off next day under the idea that there would be no more trade there, but they are being gradually induced to come back.

Miscellaneous.

THE DELHI GATHERING.—Remote Siam is to be represented at the Imperial Assemblage. The King has intimated his intention of sending up (an Anibassador with his suite to Delhi. will be accompanied by the British Vice-Consul at that Court.

COLONEL BURNE.-Colonel H. K. Burne's good service pension is notified in the Calcutta Gazette, together with a list of his services during the Sutlej Campaign of 1845-46, and the Burmah War of

THE ENGINEERS.—In the last Calcutta Gazette it is notified, under orders from the Secretary of State, that officers of the Royal Engineers (Imperial List), who return home after their seven years' service in India, must stay in England for three year's duty before they can undertake a second tour of Indian service.

MEDICAL.—The following movements are consequent on the departure of Dr. J. C. Corbyn, who goes home on leave:—Dr. R. Jameson, Superintendent, Central Prison, Allahabad, is transferred to Fategarh, vice Dr. G. Grant; Dr. Grant to Bareilly, vice Surgeon-Major A. P. Tomkyns, who takes Dr. Corbyn's place as Civil Surgeon of Bareilly.

COLONEL CRACROFT. - Colonel Cracroft, who has vacated his appointment as Commissioner of the Rawal Pindi Division, under the operation of the fifty-five years' rule, has been appointed to the Quartermaster-General's Department for the time the camp lasts at Delhi. Colonel Cracroft having entered the service rather late in life has three years more to serve before he can get his off-reckon-

ECCLESIASTICAL.—The Rev. E. C. Stuart, B.A., formerly Secretary of the Church Missionary Society, Calcutta, and Minister of the Old Church Mission, has been nominated Bishop of Waiapu in New Zealand, vice Bishop Williams who, is about to retire. Mr. Stuart was a missionary of the Church Missionary Society in India for about twenty years, and recently retired to New Zealand on account of ill-health. He is an exceedingly able administrator, as well as a popular preacher. A better man for the bishopric could hardly have been found.—Friend of India.

THE SECRETARIAT .- The changes in the military secretariat due to Colonel Allen Johnson's translation to the India-office have already been announced in these columns by anticipation, but we now describe the following promotions as definitely made. Colonel Lees becomes Deputy Secretary, Captain Collen First Assistant Secretary, Captain Crookshank Second Assistant Secretary, and Captain T. Deane (Adjutant of the Viceroy's Body Guard) Third Assistant Secretary. These appointments take effect from the date at which Colonel Johnson quits the Viceroy's party at Bombay. - Pioneer.

NATIVE CIVILIANS.—A private telegram from London states that a certain person belonging to the India Office contradicts the Pioneer's article about the employment of natives in the higher ranks of the Civil Service. No official correspondence has been passed on the subject. The Pioneer, in reply, is satisfied that neither Lord Salisbury nor Lord Lytton were in favour of the scheme; but maintains that the pressure was put on Lord Lytton unofficially, and hints that the pressure was from the Queen.

LEGISLATION .- The Viceregal Council met on Wednesday, November 15th. Mr. Hobhouse, in a long speech, presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bill to Amend the Law for Specific Relief. Mr. Hope presented the report on the Opium Law Amendment Bill; Mr. Bayley obtained leave to introduce a Bill to Amend the Law relating to Treasure Trove; and Mr. Hope introduced the Sea Customs Bill, which was referred to a Committee to report on in three months, after receiving reports from the Governments of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay.

THE LATE CYCLONE. - From the latest district reports from Bengal up to the 18th November we see that the late cyclone damaged the rice on the high land in Khulna to the extent of three annas, and in Bagirhat to the extent of four annas. Of Faridpur we are told that "along the shores of the Megna, which the storm-wave of the 1st November flooded, the rice crop has been lost to the extent of about six annas; a great number of cattle and only six men on land have died, and many houses and trees have been damaged in places. Many boats were sunk, and some lives were thus lost. Twenty-seven boats were sunk as high up as Goalando." Of Bakarganj, that "the crops in the north of the district are good. In the south they have been damaged by the storm-wave; and in the lowest parts the water lodging has rotted them. The aghani will in many places give only from two to four annas outturn, and the prospects of the later aman cannot yet be ascertained. Prices are not yet excessively high, and the markets are well supplied. Fever, as usual at this season, is prevalent. It is feared that the dead bodies of men and cattle, which overspread many parts of Dowlatkhan, Baufal, and Patuakhali, may bring on pesti-lence. Several cases of cholera have been already reported." Of Tippera, that "the winter rice crop is in pretty good condition, and will be an average fair one all round, in spite of the damage done by the late cyclone, which may be put down at about four annas." Of Chittagong, that "the only real sufferers by the cyclone are the people along the sea-face from the Matamarhi northwards. Those further inland will get from four to eight annas crop, and those in the south and east from eight to ten annas. The price of rice in the Mufasal ranges from 12 to 15 seers per rupee, and in the town from 10 to 13 seers; but the holders of salt still manage to keep t at as much as three annas a seer in the smaller hats. In Kutabdea, it is thought, there should be even now a six annas outturn."

And in Noakhali, that "much of the late rice in the inundated tracts has been destroyed by the salt water. The destruction of peasantry, cattle, and homesteads has temporarily marred the agricultural prosperity of south Noakhali. It is difficult to gather in the ripe crops that are left. Cholera is raging in the district and stations throughout the inundated tracts." The reports from all the other districts are favourable, though some damage was done by the late cyclone over a limited area in Kattak near the sea coast. The Government of Bengal seems to be dealing carefully and prudently, as well as energetically, with the distress occasioned by the cyclone. Horrible as the loss of life has been, the surviving distress is not of a nature which will claim any large expenditure for its re-lief. The afflicted tract is naturally a rich and prosperous part of the country. Large quantities of rice and other stores have been saved, though the cattle have been lost in great numbers. By a system of advances on good security Government will be able to give the ryots a new start in life, and hopes are entertained that the district will soon recover.

STATION TALK.

MADRAS, Nov. 16.—In my last I casually mentioned that the exterior of the Cathedral is much discoloured. This is the bane of all Madras architecture, so far as appearance goes. White chunam suffers least in this way, and till a few years ago white was the rule and colour the exception. But Lord Napier and Mr. Chisholm have between them changed all that, and now all shades of yellow, blue, and pink are made use of. Very pretty new buildings look, picked out in two shades of one of these colours or in one shade picked out in two shades of one of these colours, or in one shade and white; very hideous they look, by the way, when, as is not unfrequently the case, all three colours are mixed together; but in a very few weeks the Madras stamp is on them, never to be obliterated, save by a fresh painting, or rather colour washing. The sea air corrodes the chunam, changing its tone to black, bilious green, inky hue, anything. To make matters worse, the discolouration is never regular, but always in patches, so that our walls are like so many studies of the elder Mr. Weller's face, viewed in varying stages of joviality. The effect is not pleasing. Wherever the eye turns, mottled walls, mottled houses, mottled roofs, obtrude themselves, and were it not for the immense amount of foliage about Madras,—directly you get outside the native town, that is to say, it would surely be the ugliest town in Heathendom. It is a thousand pities that stone is not used, at least for Government buildings; there are good quarries within easy distance, and though of course more expensive at the outset, stone would be far cheaper in the long run. The lighthouse here was built with it, and there are no annual repairs needed for that. The improvement in the appearance of the town would be something incalculable were the abominable brick and chunam business tabooed in the case of large buildings.— Pioneer Correspondent.

KARNUL Nov. 17.—The right wing of the 21st Regiment N.I., armed with Sniders, and two hundred and fifty rounds of ball cartridge per man, arrived here on the 13th instant, under command of Lieut. Colonel Douglass. Judging from this large supply of ammunition, hot work must have been expected. The wing left Bellary on the 10th, and came on from Gooty by forced marches, doing the distance (sixty miles) in little more than two clear days. I believe many of the men feel quite crest-fallen to find that their toilsome exertions to arrive with all promptness at the scene of a little active service have not been requited according to their anticipations. Indeed I can sympathise with the more warlike of them, as they look on the expected quarry and find the inhabitants, instead of thirsting for blood, to be united in the most amicable and fraternal bonds of peace and tranquillity. The universal cry is "food, food," instead of, "to arms, to arms." The wing is now encamped on the maidan in front of the travellers' bungalow. It is the current rumour that the regiment will remain here permanently.

BANGALOR, Nov. 19.—A company of the Sappers left here for the East Coast Canal works, near Nellore, last Monday, and another is in readiness, expecting orders to leave at any moment. Nothing certain is known as yet as to whether the 36th Regiment, which is under orders to relieve the 34th Regiment N.I., at Mangalore, is to move this year or not. Of course, the suspense is not over-pleasant to the two Regiments concerned, but the matter must be decided one way or another within the next ten days. I think I mentioned some time since that Major Ewing had arrived and taken up the appointment of Assistant Quarter-Master General from Colonel Mesham, whose tour of Staff Service expires. Major Hayward arrived last week from England, and has taken over command of the 45th Sherwood Foresters.—Madras Times Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MILITARY.—Major-General Montgomery, c.s.i., accompanied by Lieut.-Colonel Anderson, has been inspecting the Bhopal Battalion under Colonel Forbes at Schore, during the past fortnight, which fine corps was complimented on its efficiency.

MR. THOMAS AND THE WELD CASE.—The Weld case, if we may believe the Madras papers, is not yet to be forgotten. Mr. Thomas, whose illness after dinner was lately the cause of some public anxiety is said to have remonstrated with indignation against the order o' the Governor of Madras in Council.

The Delhi Gathering.—The Princess of Tanjore was to visit Madras en route to Delhi, and was expected there, according to present arrangements, about the 7th current. The special trains that will convey her Highness to Delhi and back will cost Rs. 50,000, which sum will have to be divided by four railway companies.

MILITARY.—Owing to the difficulty of obtaining supplies and transport during the present scarcity in Mysor, the moves of four regiments of native infantry—viz., the 25th, 30th, 34th, and 36th N.I.—have been cancelled, and these corps will remain at their present stations till this time next year. The 25th N.I. is at Cannanore, where it has been 7½ years, the 30th N.I. has vegetated at French Rocks for a similarly long period, while the 34th has garrisoned Mangalore for 6 years, and the 36th has only had 4½ years of pleasant Bangalore.

THE FAMINE.—From a statement showing the prices of food grains in the principal markets of the Cuddapah district during the week ending the 12th instant, as conpared with the corresponding period of the previous year, quoted in seers of 80 tolas per rupee,—the seer of 80 tolas being nearly equivalent to 3 of a Madras measure—we compile the following, which gives the average prices:—

Mr. Matson's Case.— We (Indian Daily News) understand that Mr. Matson, branch pilot, has memorialised his Excellency the Viceroy in reference to his suspension by the Local Government for alleged misconduct when pilot in charge of the s.s. Duke of Argyle on the voyage when his Grace the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos and party were passengers to Madras. Whatever view his Excellency may take of Mr. Matson's case, we fear the period of his suspension will have nearly expired before the decision can be commucated. Should the view taken be favourable to Mr. Matson, it would place the Local Government in a somewhat awkward position, as in common justice Mr. Matson would have to be refunded what his average earnings would have amounted to during the six months of his suspension.

LEGISLATION.—The Legislative Council of Fort St. George met on Wednesday, Nov. 22, and the principal work done was the presentation, by the Hon. Mr. Carmichael, of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the Madras Municipal Acts, which some short time ago, on its introduction, evoked so much public discussion. There was a lengthy discussion on some of the points in the Bill, lasting for about four hours, and even at the end of that time the consideration of the Select Committee's report had not terminated, so that the subject had to be postponed for further consideration. The Honourable Mr. Macfadyen again protested strongly against the Municipality being charged with any sums for hospitals and elementary education, and against that "dreaded impost" the Octroi, which the Bill proposed to levy. The Hon. Mr. Cunningham spoke strongly against the elective system which it is proposed to introduce.

CADETS FROM SANDHURST.—We learn that eight of the sublieutenants who have recently obtained direct commissions from Sandhurst to join the Madras Native Army as probationers, are shortly expected from England, and that these officers will be attached to the two Native Infantry Regiments now at Bangalore, viz., the 23rd and 36th N.I. In the event of these officers not qualifying in the languages within the prescribed period, or of their being reported unfit for the Native Army, they will revert to the Queen's Regiments to which they have been provisionally posted. It is a great pity that these young officers should receive their first impressions of the Indian service at such a station as Bangalore, where they will be necessarily much thrown into the society of others of nearly their own age and standing belonging to Queen's Regiments, and will be able to make invidious comparisons as to messes, &c. Bangalore, indeed, is as much the worst, as Trichinopoly would have been the best station to which they could have been sent.

A Jail Delivery at Hand.—His Excellency Sir Neville Chamberlain, Commander-in-Chief, has called upon the Adjutant-General of the Army to furnish him with a nominal roll of all Europeau military convicts undergoing term imprisonments at the present time in the different Military and Civil prisons in this presidency, in view to the carrying out of the orders of the Commander-in-Chief in India in regard to the releasing of a certain number of well-conducted men in honour of the Queen's assumption of the title of Empress of India on the 1st of January next. The list having been prepared in accordance with the Commander-in-Chief's desire has been forwarded to the Judge-Advocate General for his opinion as to those to whom elemency should be shown. Major J. E. Tennant, the Inspector-General of Jails, of this Presidency, has also been called upon by the Local Government to submit, without any delay, a nominal roll of all civil prisoners undergoing term imprisonments in the various jails in this Presidency to whom a similar indulgence should be granted, and we learn that superintendents of jails are preparing such lists.—Madras Times.

The Delhi Gathering.—Mr. B. J. Bentinck, Assistant Commissioner, Rangoon, has been placed on special duty during the Imperial Assemblage, and will be in charge of the Consuls and foreigners of distinction, who will be lodged in the political camp. Colonel Maisey, late Deputy Judge Advocate-General, has been detailed to look after the wants of his Excellency the Governor of Pondicherry. It is uncertain still whether the Governor of Goa will be able to attend; but should he accept the Viceroy's invitation, it is probable that Colonel de Kantzow, who is at present doing general duty at Delhi, will be the officer in attendance. The Madras Volunteer Guards are doomed to share the disappointment of their Bangalor confreres. We learn that orders have been received at the Quartermaster-General's Department cancelling the order for the requisite camp equipage for the use of the Madras Volunteers at Delhi. This shows that the Volunteers are, after all, not to go. The Government, no doubt, will pass the usual order thanking both the officers and Volunteers for their willinness, &c., to proceed and join in the loyal demonstration.

The Famine.—In reference to the distress in Madras, the local Mail asks, is it not time that the Government should do something in the way of establishing some famine relief works in the neighbourhood of Madras? A native gentleman, who is now actively engaged in relieving the poor in the Tondirapet district, assures us that there must, at the present time, be at least 15,000 homeless strangers in this city, driven here by the scarcity in the surrounding country. These people are almost wholly dependent for existence on the charity of the well-to-do Hindoos in Madras. Poorhouses have been established in various parts of the town, where one meal of cooked food is distributed daily to such as have no ostensible means of livelihood. Liberal as Hindoos are in aiding their poorer brethren, it is beginning to be felt that the distress is assuming such proportions that it will be impossible for private charity to deal with it. It would be desirable then that the authorities should consider the possibility of having to provide systematic relief to the poor people that are certain to flock to Madras during the famine period. The present would be an excellent opportunity, we should imagine, of getting a lot of our Municipal work done at a moderate cost to tax-payers.

GROWTH OF MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY.—You remember the story of Rip Van Winkle? How the hen-pecked dissolute ne'er-dowell goes out with his gun and his dog for a stroll over the mountains and is entranced by the local goblins. How he is put to sleep for twenty years, ay, even as though Mr. Browning's "Inn Album" had been read to him from end to end. How he wakes up ignorant of the fact that he and the world have alike aged near a quarter of a century, and strikes for home. How he finds all changed. The hum-drum Pennysylvanian (gracious! I hope this is spelt right) hamlet has developed into a Yankee infested town, and stately blocks have supplanted the modest cottages of his youth. When our Rip Van Winkle wakes up, he, too, will be astonished. Madras is becoming metamorphosed. Time was, and that not long since, we might safely have claimed a fashionable exemption from all descriptions of manufacturing industry. I really do not think there was such a thing as a factory five years ago, always excepting the railway work and the various Toots' Mills. But now there are springing up shaft-like chimneys suggestive of the north countree, and the din of machinery is beginning to make itself heard. Good, say I, and good again. This is what we want, some energy, some go, some pushing. And where will these three qualities be found more full-blown than in the minds of those who toil and spin? There are already two spinning mills in work, owned and (I think) managed by Parsees; now, a company for the erection of a third is being started by Messrs. Binny and Co. The capital is to be seven lakhs, in shares of Rs. 1,000 each, and I hear applicants are numerous. Properly managed, the undertaking should pay well, and if reputation may be believed in, proper management there will be. Messis. Binny and Co. have a great name for being essentially "safe;" in fact, the north of the Tweed is not absolutely unrepresented in the firm, though it forms perhaps a less prominent feature there than in the other big house. All success to the "Buckingham," and may its shares never grow less .- Pioneer Correspondent.

THE FAMINE

The correspondent of the Statesman in the famine districts around Sholapur makes the following remarks on the mode of paying the poor people who are employed on the relief works, which deserve the attention of the Government:—"I was told by several intelligent men of the labouring class that many people on the work had been going for twenty-four and forty-eight hours without food, and that these were the persons who had died upon suddenly taking a full meal of phootana. The rule upon the Collector's relief works is, that the people be paid at the close of each day's work—the men getting two annas, and the women and children less, as in Poona. On the works of the Department of the Public Works, where large bodies of men are always permanently employed, new hands taken on from among the destitute population have to be content to be paid at stated times, like the permanent work-people; and I believe that during the present scarcity those times are once a week. But on the famine relief works, specially started for starving people, payment is ordered to be made daily. Now it is always difficult to make sure that orders are carried out by subordinates; but it is doubly so in the present hurry and pressure. So what these men told me was, that the people were not all paid every day. They said that work was stopped at four o'clock each afternoon, and that then the 'Brahmans,' by which they meant the clerks or overseers, began to deal out the wages. This was done, they said, by a somewhat tedious process with several books, the coolies being called up in files or gangs of one hundred each, and having to answer to their names. Darkness came on before all the gangs had been paid, and afterness. Districts can be offered at the gains had been paid, and the remainder were told they would get two days' pay at once next afternoon, which of course meant that they would have nothing to eat all that time. This was represented to me as going on from day to day, and was ascribed purely to the dilatoriness of the 'Brahmans,' without a word of reflection upon the Sircar or any of its Eugenean ambedings to The quantity of grain to be observed. of its European embodiments. The quantity of grain to be obtained for two annas is so small that when the poor people get four, six, or eight annas into their hands at once, they give it all for a good meal at the time, and then they have nothing to eat till they get their next payment.

A meeting of the inhabitants of Akola, presided over by Mr. Bomanjee Jamaspjee, Assistant Commissioner, was held on Saturday last, to raise subscriptions for the relief of the famine in the Deccan. Rs. 1,122 were subscribed on the spot, and several monthly contributions were promised. It seems that the movement is entirely due to the energetic action of Mr. Bomanjee, who convened the meeting, and headed the subscription list by putting down his name for Rs. 200, and for a further monthly donation of Rs. 25. The fund, it is hoped, will grow. Among other sums subscribed at the above meeting Rs. 100 were given by each of the following gentlemen, viz:—Mr. Gungadhur Jorawurmul, Mr. Devrao Venayek, vakeel, and Mr. Pandoorung Govind, vakeel.

THE FAMINE RELIEF FUND .- We understand that his Excellency the Governor has forwarded to Mr. Morarjee Goculdass Rs. 500, and the Hon. J. Gibbs Rs. 100, his first monthly subscription for the Deccan and Khandeish Famine Relief Fund. contributions must be considered very handsome, since his Excellency has subscribed in all Rs. 2,000 through the various committees for the relief of the poor in the distressed districts. The Hon. Mr. Gibbs has in addition subscribed Rs. 100 through the Poons and a like sum through the Sholapur committees. subscribed amounts to Rs. 37, 901.2.2.—Bombay Gazette.

Hiscellaneous.

A New Corron Mill.—The Mazagon Spinning and Weaving Company started the other day a new mill in Bombay, in the presence of several European and a number of leading native gentlemen of Bombay. The present strength of the mill is 25,000

CIVIL.—Mr. Grey, the newly-appointed Extra Revenue Commissioner, is expected in Bombay shortly. He will have an interview with the Governor and with General Kennedy before proceeding on his tour through the districts of Belgaum, Kaladgi, Dharwar, and Canara.

TRANSPORT OF GRAIN.—We are informed that Colonel St. Clair Wilkins, Superintending Engineer, Southern Division, has left Belgaum for Vingorla with a view to ascertain that no obstruction exists either at the port of Vingorla, or on the road, that would hinder the transport of grain which is being imported in large quantities. Private traders have speculated considerably in grain, a very considerable supply of which is now stored in the town of Belgaum and adjoining city of Shahpoor .- Times of India

THE FUTURE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY .- "Why should Sir Richard Temple be sent to Bombay," asks the Friend of India, and adds:
"If he had finished his term of service in Bengal, and had still work left in him, there might be reason in sending him to govern another province but what good reason can be alleged for his quitting Bengal before his term expires, which would not be equally powerful against his accepting the Governorship of Bombay? None If indeed it be believed that Sir Richard Temple that we can see. is the only man that can be trusted to deal with a famine, the sooner he is appointed to both Bombay and Madras the better (he can be ubiquitous enough to fill both offices); but really the distress promises to be bad enough in those provinces without sending Sir Richard there to magnify and multiply, and strike wonderful averages such as those which cost us so many lakhs in Bengal.'

OFFICIAL CHANGES IN PROSPECT.—It is confidentially whispered, we learn from a correspondent at Akola, that Colonel Allardyce, the Judicial Commissioner, is to retire from the Government service in March next, and that a certain distinguished native judge is to succeed to the office. The same correspondent adds that Colonel Millett, Inspector General of Police, has already applied for retirement, and will close his official career in January next. It is not known who will be his successor, but from the present aspect of affairs it seems more probable that the office of Inspector General of Police will be abolished, and the duties appertaining thereto transferred to either the Financial or Judicial Commissioner of the province, who can easily take up the additional work, without detriment to the public service. Such, we are credibly told, was the expressed intention of the Government of India, when sanctioning the new administrative changes in Berar. It would be an illusion therefore for any police officer in Berar to aspire to the distinction .- Bombay Gazette.

A Missing Ship.—The American ship Harmonia, Captain Small, which arrived in harbour on Tuesday from Liverpool with coals, reports that during the voyage, in lat. 42° S., long. 24° E., she spoke the ship Hamlinton, from Liverpool bound to Bombay. On the 23rd of November, at daylight, in lat. 14.51° N., long. 72.50° E., saw a vessel with her bottom up. She was a wooden ship, metallated high up, with a round stern, some metal off the bottom, but no barnacles. She could not have been in that condition very long. Tacked ship and passed close to her. The vessel appeared to be 800 to 1,000 tons register by her length of keel. She lies in the track of ships coming to this port, and would be very dangerous to run against in the night time. On the receipt of the above information, Captain Searle, the Master Attendant, Bombay, telegraphed to the Superintendent of Marine Survey, as well as to the authorities at Galle and Madras, to warn vessels coming to this port. The derelict Monarch is supposed to be the vessel.— Times of India, Dec. 4.

THE DELHI GATHERING.—The Allahabad paper informs us that the agricultural troubles in the Deccan have operated to keep away a good many Bombay princes from the Delhi Assemblage, the Rao of Kutch and the Rajah of Kolhapore among the number. The Western province, indeed, will probably send up only eight, instead of sixteen. The attendance from Madras is greatly curtailed in the same way. Indeed, as the Maharajah of Travancore has fallen ill, and will be unable to come for that reason, there will be no ruling chiefs from the Madras Presidency, though plenty of native nobles. The proclamation ceremony will take place on the open plain, about a mile and a half from the Alipore road, close to the village of Dahirpore-the spot chosen being about four miles from Delhi itself, and half that distance from the Viceroy's camp." Mir Ali Murad Khan of Khairpur, in Sind, is coming to the Imperial Assemblage with the Bombay chiefs: it was uncertain at first whether he would be able to attend. We (Bombay Gazette) learn that H.H. the Jam of Nawanagar has asked to be excused from attending the Imperial Assemblage. He urges as pleas the financial embarrassments of his State and the death of a relative; but the first plea will be quite sufficient to secure him his wish, as no native chief is wanted to go to Delhi if his pecuniary affairs are unsatisfactory. The Jam's new Minister, Mr. Kharkar, has already joined his appointment. His salary is Rs. 1,500, and if he is dismissed within the period of five years he is to have a pension of Rs. 400 per mensem.

SIND, PUNJAB, AND DELHI RAILWAY.

The half-yearly general meeting of the above Company was held on Dec. 20, at the Offices, Gresham House, Old Broad-street; Mr. W. P. Andrew, the Chairman, presiding.

The report for the six months ended June 30 states that the gross receipts were £389,536, against £317,315, and the working expenses £248,113, against £188,490, while the net revenue was £141,433, as compared with £128,824 for the corresponding half-year. The passenger receipts at £122,410 showed a decrease of £3,683, while the receipts for the carriage of goods, &c., amounted to £267,126, or an increase of £75,905. The falling off in passenger receipts is stated to be due to the reduction in third-class fares by slow trains from 3 pies to 2½ pies per mile which came into operation on Jan. 1. The receipts from the flotilla service, which are included in the above figures, were £75,150, against £36,851. The sum derived from the carriage of goods was £71,576, against £33,963. The net revenue earned by the flotilla was £28,324, against £4,865, and the working expenses amounted to £46,826, as compared with £31,986. number of passengers carried was 1,236,627, an increase of 14,389; and the goods conveyed during the half-year under notice amounted to 306,739 tons, against 227,631. These latter figures do not include stores which were carried free, and amounted to 188,305 tons, as compared with 51,873 tons. The receipts on capital account to date were £11,079,573, of which a balance of £594,545 remains at the company's credit.

The Chairman, in moving its adoption, said the statistical information in the report was so extensive that he would rather allude to the general scope and bearing of their great enterprise, both in its political aspects and commercial bearings. Many years ago they planned, and had continually advocated, the railway system of the Indus Valley Railway, beginning at Kurrachee and proceeding to Kotree, above the delta of the Indus; then, being supplemented by a flotilla of steamers, the transit was conveyed to Moultan, the rail-way beginning again from that point to Lahore. The flotilla was merely a provisional arrangement. At that time, however, he was not allowed by the authorities at the Board of Control and the India Office to make a railway from Kotree to Moultan, inasmuch as the authorities thought that what they were permitting was rather premature. Among other branches which they recommended and projected was the great branch from Lahore to Peshawur, within six miles of the mouth of the Khyber Pass, and it was now being constructed by the Government, and called the Northern State Railway. The large connecting piece of railway in the Indus Valley—the line from Kotree to Moultan—the Government were now actively engaged in constructing, and he trusted it would be finished in the course of next year, with the exception of a bridge over the Sukkur, which would connect the line on the right bank with the line on the left. The Indus Valley line, proceeding from Kotree, went up the right bank to Sukkur and down the left bank, proceeding from Moultan to Rohree. This great section of the undertaking was absolutely necessary to them to give them an outlet for the enormous traffic which they received at the Punjab, which was represented as being so great that it was impossible to convey one-fourth of it. The flotilla had been for years now totally inadequate, and, even supplemented by the country boats there was a perfect glut of traffic; and the traffic manager referred, in his advices by the last mail, to this excessive amount of traffic, and to the urgent necessity for the immediate completion of the Indus Valley State Railway. The great accumulation of goods had led to many remonstrances being addressed to the directors, and at last a very strong remonstrance had been addressed to the Government of India by a well-known contractor and merchant at Ferozepore, who had called on the Government to attend to the crying wants of the country for improved communication by completing the Indus Valley line. The reply of the Government had been sent to the Punjab Government, calling their earnest attention to the subject, so that they had good grounds for believing that this great work would be finished in the course of next year. The company could have no prosperity worth talking of, and no efficiency of any description, till this "missing link" was supplied. Even now, in the fragmentary state in which their undertaking was, they paid half of the guaranteed interest, which was most remarkable. With regard to the line to the Bolan Pass, which they planned and surveyed many years are the heard by recent advices that the present Governoryears ago, he heard by recent advices that the present Governor-General had been pleased to order its re-survey with the view of its early construction. Should this line, about which they had had so much anxiety, be completed in its integrity, it would be very gratifying to them, although it was a distressing reflection that they had not been allowed to complete what they had planned. Their negotiations with the Government of India regarding the Indus Valley line were still pending, but he trusted that they might reasonably hope to have the working of this line, and perhaps of one or both of the branches he had referred to. Alluding to the harbour at Kurrachee, he said it had been proved to be as efficient as they could have possibly desired; and the present Minister of Public Works in India had expressed his entire approval of the works which had already been carried out with so much energy and ability by Mr. When this was completed they would be in a William Parkes. position, if any aggression were threatened from without, to meet the enemy at either of the gates of India—to checkmate him at any point—and they would be in perfect security. They would have their great system in communication with one of the most accessible ports of India, and the port nearest to England. This showed the great political importance of their system; and when he said great political importance, he also meant great commercial importance. The products of the soil there only required an outlet to the sea to enrich the cultivators and merchants, and the wheat and other products had been proved to be of such excellent quality that the opening of the Indus Valley Railway would be calculated, in no ordinary degree, to diminish the price of food in this country. Briefly referring to irrigation, he said he had frequently advocated its importance; but the great thing was improved communication, for if there was abundance in one place and starvation in another the great object was to convey the superabundant produce of the one place to the other. Their district generally had improved, but he would show the improvement of the individual sections. The increase in the goods traffic alone for the past half-year on the Scinde Railway was £11,316, on the Flotilla £37,766, and on the Punjah and Delhi Railway £27,236. He was happy to tell them that the injury done to their bridge over the Sutlej—the largest in their system—had been entirely repaired, and the thorough traffic had been resumed. He then referred to the great loss which they had sustained by the death of their old friend and esteemed colleague, Mr. Borradaile, who had been associated with them from the beginning.

Colonel Sir F. L. Arthur, the deputy-chairman, having seconded the adoption of the report, Mr. Minton congratulated the company on its success, and referred to the principal features of the report to show the great progress they were making.

The report having been unanimously adopted, Mr. Minton moved a resolution expressing the great satisfaction of the meeting at hearing there was every prospect of the Indus Valley Railway being opened for general traffic the whole distance between Moultan and Kotree, with the exception of the bridge over the Sutlej at Sukkur, by next December, and venturing to express a hope that the working of the line would be committed to the company. He reiterated the statements of the Chairman as to the importance of this work, pointing out the reasons why the shareholders should support it. Mr. Carter having seconded the motion it was carried unanimously Votes of thanks to the general officers of the company in India and to the chairman and directors then terminated the proceedings.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Nizam left on Thursday afternoon for the East with £69,140 for Bombay, of which sum £20,000 was in gold, and £49,140 in silver.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The Eastern Telegraph Company (Limited) announce the payment on Jan. 15, 1877, of an interim dividend of 2s, 6d. per share in respect of profits for the quarter ended Sept. 30 last.

BUDGE-BUDGE JUTE MILLS.—A report issued by the directors of the Budge-Budge Jute Mills Company for the half-year ended Oct. 31, states that, with the balance from the previous six months, the net revenue amounted to 1,07,066 rupees. From this is recommended the payment of a dividend of four rupees per share; 35,000 rupees are carried to reserve fund, which will then stand at 60,000 rupees; and a balance of 66 rupees is carried forward.

MILITARY.—The following distinctions have been granted to various regiments of the line, viz:—17th Regiment, the Royal Tiger, with the word "Hindostan" superscribed on waist plate; 25th Regiment, the Castle of Edinburgh on chaco plate, in addition to number, with lion and crown on forage cap; 77th, the Prince of Wales's plume above number, on waist plate; 96th, the sphinx over "Egypt," on forage cap; 96th, number within wreath, with the coronet of the Duke of Edinburgh above. It is announced that the officers of the 10th Hussars will be permitted to wear the Prince of Wales's plume in silver on the undress sabretache. The crest and motto of his Royal Highness the late Prince Consort is to be worn over the regimental device on the dress sabretache of the 11th Hussars.

BILLS ON INDIA.-India Council Bills to the usual amount of £350,000 (35 lacs of rupecs) were allotted on Wednesday at a reduction of 13-16d to 4d per rupee, so that the great rise reported last week has been lost. The amounts taken were:—For Calcutta, £173,400; for Bombay, £150,000; and for Madras, £26,600; and tenders on Calcutta and Madras for bills at 1s. 94d. received about 12 per cent. of the amounts applied for, and on Bombay for bills at that price about 6 per cent. Tenders for telegraphic transfers and bills above 1s. 9½d. receive in full. After this allotment, the silver by the West India steamer was disposed of at 56¾d. per oz., or a reduction of §d. from Monday's nominal quotation, and of about 2d. within a week. It is probable that the silver market will now remain quiet for some time, as the Delhi Durbar will have the effect of checking business throughout India for the first fortnight of January.

SUEZ CANAL COMPANY.—An extraordinary meeting of the Suez Canal Company will be held on the 10th of January, for the purpose of considering the treaty between M. de Lesseps and Colonel Stokes, of the 21st of February last, respecting the new regulation of the Canal tariff. The present tariff is 13f, when the tariff exceeded 2,600,000 tons. This change in the tariff is by the new treaty to be carried out by degrees at the rate of 50c. during eight years, the dates of the application being the 1st of January, 1877, 1879, 1881, 1882, 1883, 1884. The company further agrees to lay out a million of francs per annum for thirty years in improvements. The regulation that any modification of the tariff shall be announced three months before coming into force will postpone the enactment of the treaty. This will not, however, it is believed, prevent it from being carried out strictly, seeing that the present regulations provide that when the traffic exceeds 2,100,000 tons the tariff shall be reduced 50c., and this, it seems, will be exceeded by the end of the year.

MADRAS RAILWAY .- The twenty fourth half-yearly general meeting of the shareholders in the above company was held on Tuesday, at the Cannon-street Hotel, Mr. J. T. Smith presiding. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said during the last six months a great deal of useful practical work had been done, but there were no striking facts to notice. They had reason to thank their officers in India for perseverance and zealous efforts under circumstances of universal difficulty and discouragement. There were not far from 500 bridges undergoing alteration; while in another direction the engineers had had full employment, namely, in the extensive reorganisation and enlargement of the locomotive department with respect to its workshops and machinery. He proceeded to touch also on the various other matters contained in the report, and specially to the famine in India. Mr. W. H. Creke, deputy chairman, seconded the motion, which was agreed to. remainder of the business was disposed of, and the meeting closed.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.—Nearly one-third of the capital invested in Indian Railway Companies has been subscribed to the East Indian, and it is gratifying to find from the report just issued that in both halves of the year this great undertaking is not only no bur-den upon the State, but is a source of revenue. In June last the surplus divisible between the company and the State, after covering the guaranteed 5 per cent., was comparatively small; but in the present accounts there is a surplus of £347,226, of which the Indian Exchequer receives £173,613; and the ordinary stockholders are enabled to pocket a dividend at the rate of £6. 6s. per cent. per annum. On the main line, the receipts for the half-year were £1,539,103, as compared with £1,339,431 in the first half of 1875; while those on the Jubbulpore line were £113,771, against £108,262. During the first twenty weeks of the current half, the traffic on the main line has exhibited an expansion of £193,764, which means a larger excess payment next July than fell to the lot of the proprietors six months ago.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY .- The sixtieth report of the directors of the East Indian Railway Company for the half-year ended the 30th of June has been issued. The gross receipts were £1,539,103, against £1,339,431, and the working expenses were £514,194, against £510,226, leaving a net revenue of £1,024,909, as compared with £829,205, or an increase of £195,704. This increase was due principally to the carriage of passengers, merchandise, and minerals. he number of passengers carried, exclusive of periodical ticketholders, was 3,307,445, or an increase of 69,698, resulting in an augmentation on the revenue of the corresponding period of £17,852. In general merchandise and minerals the increase in tonnage amounted to 114,653, resulting in an increase in the receipts to the extent of £160,811. The "downwards" quantity of grain delivered was 71,986 tons, against 26,044 tons, and the receipts were £95,868, against £16,609. In addition to the guaranteed interest of £2. 10s. per cent., a dividend at the rate of 13s. per cent. on the consolidated stock and share capital is recommended, leaving about £1,000 in hand. On the Jubbulpore line the gross earnings were £113,771, against £108,262; and while the working expenses were £53,435, against £58,369, a net revenue of £60,337 cempares with £49,893 in the corresponding period. The tonnage of goods and minerals was 99,353, an increase of 17,252, while the augmentation in the number of passengers carried was 13,638, the total being 156,089, against 142,451.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY .-- The half-yearly general meeting of the shareholders of the above Company was held on Dec. 15, at the City Terminus Hotel; Col. Holland, the chairman, presiding. The report was taken as read. The Chairman, in moving its adoption, said they had somewhat more cash than they had half a year or a year ago. This was owing mainly to their having parted with a considerable portion of their surplus storesa dead weight which had been hanging over them for some years. The stores account now amounted to £860,000, which the directors hoped to reduce shortly to £600,000; but three years ago it was £400,000 higher than now. The directors had made the call on the shares which were not yet fully paid up because at the end of the year they would have topay off over £1,000,000 of their debentures, and the money was required to fill the place of these debentures. He was very glad that they had at last had the opportunity of making the call, as these shareholders had purchased their shares at a heavy premium, under the impression that calls would soon be made. They were again in the very gratifying position this halfyear of being able to declare a surplus dividend of 6s. per cent.

over and above the £5 per cent. There had been a great falling off in the past half-year in the amount of cotton carried; but there had been two or three bad seasons both as regarded the quality and the price realised in Liverpool. They had carried only 70,000 tons, as compared with 100,000 tons in the corresponding half-year of 1875. The adoption of the report having been seconded, a short discussion ensued, when the report was unanimously adopted.

CEYLON COMPANY (LIMITED).—The half-yearly general meeting of the above Company was held on Dec. 19, at the Offices, Palmerston-buildings; Mr. L. Acland, the chairman, presiding. The reston-buildings; Mr. L. Acland, the chairman, presiding. port of the directors stated that, as was intimated in the report of June 13 last, the crop of coffee of season 1875-76—the proceeds of which would appear in this year's account - had been small. The total amount received from the company's estates and those in which they were interested had been only 36,246 cwt., against 57,926 cwt. received in the preceding year, 1874-75, and an estimate of about 50,000 cwt. for the crop of 1876-77 now coming forward, exclusive of the produce of the estates which had been sold. The amount of profit to be derived this year from the Ceylon branch of the business would, therefore, be inconsiderable. The Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said no accounts were presented, as this was an interim meeting. He then alluded to the smaller quantity of coffee realised as compared with the previous year, observing that the expense of production was nearly equal to that of the larger quantity. An important rise in the price of sugar had occurred in the Mauritius, and as the prices were still higher and the yield of the canes appeared to be good, there was every reason to hope that the result of this year's operations in that colony would be better than was anticipated; but the mortality among their animals, which had, unfortunately, continued, would occasion a serious loss. Mr. Robertson, a director, having seconded the adoption of the report, a discussion followed, and a complaint was made of unwise speculation having been made in Ceylon in estates; but Mr. Simpson, a director, in reply, said that any mistakes made by the directors had been simply owing to errors of judgment. The redirectors had been simply owing to errors of judgment. port was adopted, and the proceedings then terminated.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY .- The fortysecond half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of this railway was held on Tuesday, at the offices, Finsbury-circus; Lieutenaut-Colone P. T. French presiding. In moving the adoption of the report, the Chairman said the receipts had been for the half-year £391,180, and the expenses £170,427, and the net earnings £220,753. The amount requisite to cover the guaranteed interest of 5 per cent. was £193,890, and there consequently remained a surplus of £26,863. This would admit of a dividend in excess to the amount of 1s. 8d. per cent. The increase of revenue was almost entirely in the goods traffic and the gross receipts, and the net profits exceeded those realised by the company in any previous half-year. The number of passengers showed an increase of 184,980, as compared with the corresponding half-year of 1875. On the 6th September last, the twenty-five southern spans, equal to 1,500 feet, of the great bridge over the Nerbudda River, were carried away by heavy floods. A low level diversion on staging across the gap was completed, so that trains could again pass. A high-level temporary bridge was now being created. The settlement of the design for the recommendation being erected. The settlement of the design for the permanent re-construction of this important bridge, together with the question as to the best course to be followed for strengthening other large buildings of a similar design on the railway, had, with the concurrence of the Secretary of State, been referred to Sir John Hawkshaw. There was a legend in India that whoever bridged the Nerbudda would rule the country, and he hoped, therefore, that they would soon have a bridge over the river that would endure for all time. The report having been adopted, the Chairman, in reply to a shareholder, said that all the railway companies of India were unanimous as to the desirability of obtaining a uniform gauge, and in January next a conference was to be held in Calcutta on railway matters, at which this important matter would be discussed. The meeting then concluded with a vote of thanks to the chairman.
